WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 12—After considerable delay a brief session of the Windham county superior court was held in this city Thursday during which decisions were rendered in two cases. The only case of the four assigned which was ready for trial was announced settled out of court. It was that of William R. Chandler of Thompson vs. Charles Lavalley of Plainfield, a suit to recover damages of $2,500 as the result of an automobile collision in the town of Putnam on the morning of November 26, 1924. Chandler asserted that his car was damaged to the amount of $1,044.24 and he lost time to the value of $800, in addition to which there was a medical bill for treatment of his injuries. The cars collided at a point between Ballouville and Putnam Heights at a cross road off the highway. Court was recessed for two hours while the attorneys met in conference. It was disclosed upon reopening of court that the plaintiff offered to accept a settlement for about $1,700 while the defendant claimed that he too had suffered from damage and injury and offered $500. At noon an agreement was finally reached and the stipulations filed with the court. It was understood that the settlement was for $1,200 to be paid the plaintiff within fifteen days. Court then adjourned until this Friday morning at 10 o'clock when a short calendar session will be held.

During the recess Judge Dickenson handed down his decision in the case of Sylvester Pelechats vs. Stafo Shimansky, a suit for damages of $100 for defamation of character. The plaintiff was awarded damages of $50 with costs.

In the case of Henry Duplease vs. Charles S. Huling, a suit to recover a commission of $100 Judge Dickenson found for the plaintiff. Duplease, on agreement, sold property owned by Huling on the South Windham road to Louis Morrissey for $3,500, on June 21, 1924. He never received his commission. The decision was for the plaintiff to recover with the costs of the case.

Announcement was made that the case of Alice M. Alford, Adm., vs. Daniel P. Dunn et al had been settled out of court. This case is the outgrowth of fatal injuries received by the brother of the plaintiff while he was a spectator at the dynamiting of the brick walls of the old Jordan building which had been destroyed by fire. The late Daniel P. Dunn was mayor of the city at that time. The case of Eleanor T. Ford vs. The Community Hotel corporation, listed for Thursday will be reassigned Friday. The case of Kosma Dubina vs. John Stancsak et al will follow the same course.

The Willimantic Exchange club held its regular weekly meeting at the Windham Inn Wednesday evening, the session being one of the best attended in the history of the organization. The meeting was held at the home of Chairman William J. Sweeney. Secretary Egbert A. Case has sent letters to the pastors of the several churches in the city and town, and it is expected that these will be read Sunday in further announcement and explanation of Education Week. The parents are strongly urged to visit the schools where their children attend during Education Week and by this means become intimate with the conditions at the schools and the methods used in present day education.

DANIELSON

TAX COLLECTOR WALSH ON ADVISORY COMMITTEE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 13—Tax Collector Jamse R. Walsh of Killingly has been appointed by Tax Commissioner William H. Blodgett to represent Windham county on an advisory committee to the commission being formed with one representative from each county of the state. Mr. Walsh's appointment came unsolicited and unexpectedly. It is a tribute to his efficiency in tax collection matters and comes following a recent inspection of Killingly's tax records by a representative of the tax commissioner's offices. The first meeting of the new committee is to be held early in December.

A transfer of trolley passengers between Danielson and Elmville was necessary, during Wednesday, as the trolley tracks were again being changed to allow of putting in another short section of concrete highway. The major part of the concrete work has been completed by the construction company, which is now engaged in filling in short stretches left incomplete for convenience since the work was started.

Bring on the big game hunters! There's another wildcat in the territory. The blood curdling cries of the great alarmed members of Charles A. Benham's household at 8:15 one morning this week, Mrs. Benham's farm is near Wauregan on the Wauregan-Brooklyn highway. The cries of the animal came from near the edge of the swamp east of his place and near the Quinebaug river. It was in this locality that a large, strange animal was repeatedly seen and heard last year and was the subject of newspaper notices. Eventually a huge wildcat was shot in a dense section of West Brooklyn, a comparatively short distance across country, for a roving animal, from the Benham farm. There is a theory that the animal heard this week by the Benham household may be a mate to the one shot as mentioned.

What might be considered an added argument for the removal of the much discussed trees that the town of Killingly long since unanimously voted to have taken out along Reynolds street at the south side of Davis park is an accident in which James Salisbury, who lives at the Conn.-R. I. line at Little Rest was injured. Salisbury was riding on a truck with another man when the truck struck one of the trees, Salisbury receiving a cut on the eye. He was given attention by a physician.

Lee J. L'Homme post, American legion, with its headquarters in Danielson, had the largest showing of any visiting legion post in the Armistice day parade at Putnam. The Danielson post mustered 75 men out of a membership of 140. Officers of the post were well pleased at the showing made, and Danielson is proud of the fact, too.

A kindly hint to the public relations departments of the lighting and telephone companies supplying service to Danielson is that there is what electricians know as a ground somewhere in the central section of the borough, in all probability, and it is playing havoc with the ambitions of radio receiving sets to get good reception these nights. The "ground" reveals itself as a steady and voluble hum on the receivers. It is particularly strong in Main street between Academy and Reynolds, on lower Mechanic street and in the area bounded by Cottage street on the south and Reynolds street on the north. Receiving sets within that zone pick up this hum so strongly that it rather ruins practically all reception.

A closed car bearing a New York registration turned over just inside the Connecticut line at Little Rest early Wednesday morning injuring, but not seriously, the man and woman who were traveling in the machine. The highway was wet and a fog prevailed at the time of the accident.

The death at East Killingly of Willis Bartlett, son of Welcome Bartlett one of the manufacturers who helped make that community such a prosperous cotton manufacturing center in the days prior to the Civil war has recalled to the minds of olden citizens of this town what prominence that community enjoyed at that time. Most of the mills have fallen into ruins or have been destroyed by fire. However, two of them remain in operation and are valuable industrial assets of the town—these the Davis and Brown mill and the plant of the Aseptic Products company. Along the Whetstone stream there remain picturesque ruins of other mills. East Killingly has lost its place as the most important textile manufacturing center in this corner of the state, but the memories of its hey-day remain. The coming of the railroads and other changes all figured in one way or another in East Killingly's loss of the bulk of its manufacturing business.

A very fine card index system of the pupils of school age, 4-16 years, enumerated in the town of Killingly has been prepared for the office of Supt. Parker of Killingly's schools. This index is arranged alphabetically and by schools and districts and allows of picking out any particular card wanted on the instant. The index was prepared and arranged by Arthur A. Dean, clerk in the office of the board of selectmen.

There'll be a small Danielson cheering section for Brown in the south stand at Aldrich field tomorow when Harvard goes to Providence to play the Bruins. Considerable interest in football has been aroused here this season by the opportunity to see such teams as Yale, Dartmouth, Pennsylvania and Harvard playing in the near-by city.

To those who are not superstitious about such matters, it will not be unpleasant to remind them that today is Friday, the 13th.

On Thursday the annual roll call drive of Danielson chapter of the Red Cross was inaugurated. This will continue until the borough has been thoroughly canvassed for the memberships that are necessary if the chapter is to be enable to continue its good work.

Some good bags of rabbits have been brought in during the past few days by hunters who have covered country hereabounts. The bunnys are plentiful this fall.

Attorney Louis A. Woisard's commission of appointment as referee in bankruptcy for Windham county was received by him Thursday morning.

George A. Little of Bridgeport was a visitor with friends in Danielson on Thursday.

Two foxes were brought in by W. E. Bitgood after a day's hunt.

"I wonder if they are going to take up the trolley rails?" That's a question one hears here every day. The Connecticut company has not said what it is going to do about the dails.

Revival services being held at the Nazerene church on Academy street are attracting interested congregations.

George Robertson, master mechanic at the Quinebaug mills, has been elected vice-president of the Eastern Connecticut Mills association, the organization that presented the remarkably successful textile exhibit at the state armory last June.

Major E. L. Darbie is enlisting the special detail of troops to be stationed here doing clerical working concerning special troops of the 43d division.

It is possible that another siren for sounding fire alarms will be placed on the central fire station in Academy street as an auxiliary to the one on the Main street plant of the Paco Manufacturing company.

PUTNAM

He was in Putnam as one of the speakers at the dedication of the Memorial bridge and at the conclusion of the dinner at the Putnam Inn he journeyed to the French River Textile Inn, which is owned and managed by the Beachmont company, and made a short talk to the members of this association.

Following the business session there a turkey dinner was served the members.

THE NEW ENGLAND CONFERENCE

Today there will be concluded at Worcester the two days' session of the New England conference. This is promoted by the joint committee named by the governors of the New England states and is for the purpose of estimating and developing the business possibilities of this part of the country.

A conference having that as its object cannot fail to create a common interest and arouse a general enthusiasm. It is quite evident that there must be cooperation and a general understanding. Having a goal to work for, an object that is for the common good of this part of the country, there should be an eagerness on the part of all states, and the civic organizations of the states, to put forth their best efforts in a long, steady pull for greater development.

It makes little difference whether it is agriculture, forestry, marketing, manufacturing, cheaper power, cheaper fuel or some other of the many common problems, there is a vast amount of good that is to be obtained by cooperation.

Whatever conditions may be they are not all of them what they might be. There is a chance for improvement in many directions, perhaps it might be said in all directions, and it is quite desirable that New England and the various sections of it should get the benefit of such possible betterments. Through getting together similar situations have been met and the desired results obtained. Thus it is only fair to presume that the New England conference will set machinery in motion that will ultimately make a commendable advance toward the goal, if in fact it isn't reached.

Men of prominence and authority were placed upon the highly interesting progress to address the gathering. That they will prove a source of much food for thought can be expected. Under such inspiration as is gained from the advice offered along many lines it can be expected that a strong New England council will be picked to direct the efforts that must be made in reaching the desired end. The development of New England's business possibilities cannot certainly get too much careful consideration.

HANDLING TREATIES

When former Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes spoke in New York the other night he dwelt in part upon the question of treaty making and referred to the fact that the machinery at times failed to work to the embarrassment of governments, when by the use of tact and restraint a different result would follow.

He has filled offices of importance in such a manner that his words cannot fail to get respectful attention. He has had experiences which disclose to him the need of certain reforms and as in other instances he is able to set them forth in such a manner as to command thoughtful consideration.

It is well understood that the negotiations in the making of treaties are in the hands of the president and that such results as are obtained by the negotiators must get the approval of the senate. So far as the machinery is concerned Mr. Hughes does not advocate any change. What he does believe to be desirable is that the president should give treaty negotiations the best possible send-off by selecting the right men, men who are especially fitted for the task and men who will command the respect of the senate and the country. This calls for tact and judgment, but no more so than it calls for tact and judgment when the senate comes to deal with the report of the negotiators.

The disposition to embarrass should not prevail. If there is good reason for opposition it is to be expected that it will be voiced, but such reasons should be well grounded and not trivial. When it comes to treaty making those who are conscious of the duty they have been charged with and disposed to get results rather than to obstruct just for the sake of placing obstacles in the way.

Cooperation and restraint is the combination which Mr. Hughes believes is necessary in meeting such a situation. The soundness of that opinion will be appreciated, but it is not as easy to get it as it is to recommend it.

THE POSTAL RATES

It is customary that there should be a deficit in the postoffice department. Thus one can be expected this year. Just what it will be is uncertain, but it has been estimated that it might amount to $36,000,000. If that is the amount when it has been possible to figure it all up, or if it is only half that sum, it will mean that the revenue has failed to meet the expenditures by that sum. Service, in other words, has been given to the people costing more than had been estimated and it of course must be paid for.

But there was a revision of the postal rates which was intended to take care of this situation. Rates were upset, increased and tangled up in such a way that it was difficult to understand just what was required. It was in fact without any great amount of investigation that the new rates were established. Instead of making a careful inquiry and basing the change upon carefully studied conditions, there as a hit or miss plan adopted, and it will cause no surprise if it is found that it has failed to accomplish what was expected of it.

The change in rates has proved to be unpopular in many respects. It has sought to increase the revenue in such a way as to cause resentment. If the change had had no ill effect upon postal business it would have resulted in large receipts for postal service but there are unquestionably those upon whom the change in rates has made a bad impression and they have sought to escape the unjust burden which they consider has been placed upon them. It is this effect which creates the uncertainty. During the early months the expected gain from the new rates failed to materialize. The postoffice department has been obliged to make the best of the situation which congress created for it. It will not be able to tell where it stands until the full year has been completed, though it will be better able to come nearer an estimate after the holidays are gone. The showing that has been made for the new rates, however, is hardly what their advocates anticipated, but it should cause more attention to be given to the objections raised at the time they were being advocated.

ITALY'S DEBT SETTLEMENT

It was with confidence that the Italian debt commission came to this country. It had assembled facts which it needed to properly present its claims, and which it lacked when the commission was here before. It had acted upon the known attitude of this country and it brought data to support its claims relative to its capacity to pay.

By the outcome of the negotiations it is evident that it was able to convince our debt funding commission that it was ready to meet its obligations to the extent of its ability, that that ability was limited and that here was reason for giving consideration to the conditions that prevail in Italy and what can be expected in the future.

As Italy pays it reduces the number of nations that are indebted to this country as the result of the war. The arrangements which have been agreed upon are such as should make their impression upon other nations and encourage them to come forward and put the cards on the table with the assurance that they will get similar treatment.

Not only has Italy reason to feel that it has been given liberal treatment but it can appreciate the assistance which the agreement is bound to have in opening up source of funds for meeting its financial problems. Nations which cannot borrow are seriously handicapped, but Italy has seen the wisdom of removing any obstacle to the making of loans by this country through private sources and it will thus benefit in more than one way from the settlement which has this week been negotiated in Washington.

PINCHOT PLANS

Once more the governor of Pennsylvania is engaged in an effort to bring about an adjustment of the coal strike, or at least to set in motion the preliminaries to such an end. It is even intimated that he would be willing to be the head of the board before whom the demands were arbitrated.

Anthracite is a Pennsylvania monopoly. When the production of hard coal ceases it means the loss of a million dollars a day in wages, the stoppage of business in mining centers and the reduction of business on railroads. Thus it is of particular interest to Pennsylvania to see that the mining stagnation be ended. Likewise there exists an obligation in view of the fact that by the state law none but qualified miners can enter the mines to work.

If it is so that Governor Pinchot seeks to be chairman of the arbitration board, or that the miners would arbitrate if he held that position, it cannot be said to give any assurance that arbitration will be resorted to. Governor Pinchot is on record in such a situation. He brought about an adjustment of the 1923 strike by which the miners were given an increase of ten per cent. in their wages, and even though it was claimed that it ought not to be done, that increase was passed along to the consumer. Thus it can be appreciated that there will be no disposition to look upon the governor of the state which has a coal monopoly and which collects a tax on coal production as the man for any such position.

While he might be acceptable to the miners it is quite certain that he would not be approved by the operators or the public, though the public seems to count but little in such a matter.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It is said that in 80 years the world will be without oil. "What will the robin do then, poor thing?"

The honor of making the slogan for Norwich should be as much of an incentive as the prize.

The man on the corner says: It may decorate the surface but paint doesn't bring a renewal of youth.

The dry movement started at Bucharest must have for its object the taking of rum out of Rumania.

Apparently Jugoslavia and Italy think that as long as the league of nations has gotten into action with Bulgaria and Greece, it would be well to keep it in motion.

Mayor-elect Walker of New York, tells the south he stands as a symbol of Tammany. But the south has had a longer time to believe that Hyland represented Tammany.

When the governor of Pennsylvania set out to settle the last coal strike it resulted in a permanent increase in the price of anthracite. Is that going to be the outcome of his present effort?

VACATIONS.

"I've tried 'em all!" insisted the hand-hewn man with money, who was fending off the sweet little thing trying to induce him to spend part of his vacation at Carroway lake, where her family summered. "You can't tell me anything about 'em!

"I've had all the plain, fancy, home-grown and hot house brands of vacations and I've been sunburned in six languages, to say nothing of knowing the taste of 1,100 canned vegetables!

"When I was younger I was prone to fall for vacations having to do with fish. The circulars and my friends would impress upon me that, while they were strenuously trying to keep it dark, Piecrust lake, in reality, was so full of fish that there was a line of ten-pound black bass on the banks with checks in their hands waiting their turn in the teeming waters. If you went out in a boat the pike and pickerel would nearly swamp you, tumbling into the craft and begging for a moment to rest and catch their breath before going back into the crowded traffic below the surface.

"And when I excitedly dropped a line into the water and braced myself for the pull of six fish at once I would fall over backward with a cold thump because exactly nothing ever happened. All the fish had left that morning for a convention up in Lake Superior, with no forwarding address, and the hotel gave us canned salmon for lunch without a quiver.

"On the porch would be three or four watchful mammas knitting sweaters or piecing patchwork or doing needlepoint and they all donned sprightly smiles at my approach or the approach of any other lone unattached male.

"I've gone on water trips also, on boats that offered you such Elysian comforts that should you but pause to think you would be ten times a double dyed idiot to linger at home. Whenever I walked aboard one of these floating palaces the lake or the ocean immediately humped its back and went into convulsions, doing some bucking and handsprings never before witnessed by the eye of man. So I never got a chance to enjoy a single one of the expensive comforts for which I had paid trustingly.

"And out on deck there were the three or four mammas with their radiant smiles and the tender-hearted little daughter who could not bear to have her bridge game ruined for lack of a partner.

"Or maybe she was dying to dance and there was nobody to dance with—I wouldn't mind would I? Didn't I just love to dance? She thought I must the minute she looked at me!

"I've gone on camping trips and always, no matter how good a friend of mine the other man was, he'd let his wife spring on us at the last minute her niece, Susie, or sister Jane, who was just dying to come along and get next to nature and breathe the ozone and gaze into the sky! The sky was a terribly handy thing, because she could drag me away from the campfire into the dimness of the night and say 'Oh, Mr. Lambswool, tell me, what is that bright star up there? Oh, it makes me feel so little and helpless just to look at it!'

"So, doggone it, I'm going to have a real good time this summer! I'm going to stay right in my suite at the Lakewave hotel and use the beach when I want to and listen to the music and find all the fruits and vegetables on earth on the menu and not speak to a soul if I don't want to and—and have a perfectly sensible good time—"

"I think you are the smartest thing!" cried the sweet young creature who was also shrewd. "I wonder why nobody else ever thought of doing that! I'm going to talk to mother and see if she won't go to the Lakewave this summer instead of tiresome old Carroway lake—"

"Or," desperately broke in the hand-hewn man, just as though he had not finished what he was saying, "or I may take a long trip to Tasmania or Tibet or just cruise around a year or so without landing at all!"—Chicago News.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Fergus Hume, who according to the despatches from London has been reduced by ill health to comparative poverty, has been one of the most prolific novelists of modern times. It was in 1887 that he first attracted attention with the publication of his "Mystery of a Hansom Cab." Since that time a total of nearly 150 works of fiction have come from his pen, but none of them seems to have attained the success of the "Mystery of a Hansom Cab," of which something like 500,000 copies have been sold. Unfortunately, however, the author did not enjoy his bank account very much from the success of initial effort, as he sold his right before publication for the modest sum of $250. Mr. Hume was born in England sixty-three years ago, but nearly the whole of his life has been passed in New Zealand and Australia. He was educated for the bar nad practiced law before becoming a writer of novels.

Girls! Try This

Gleamy, Thick, Wavy Hair in a Moment

Here is the easy, inexpensive way to keep your hair stylishly correct, youthful and simply beautiful. When combing and dressing your hair, just moisten your hair brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair. The effect is startling! Your hair will appear twice as thick and heavy—sparkling with life and possessing that incomparable softness, freshness and luxuriance, and just delicately perfumed.

While beautifying the hair "Danderine" is also toning and stimulating each single hair to grow thick, heavy and strong. Hair stops falling out and dandruff disappears. Get a 35-cent bottle of "Danderine" at any drug store or toilet counter and just see how healthy and youthful your hair appears after this delightful, refreshing dressing.

Stories That Recall Others

Indians

The teacher was trying to demonstrate the truth that love and protective care is instinctive in all parents. The story of the baby Moses and the child Samuel had amply illustrated the point from the human side.

And now she said mysteriously: I'm thinking of mothers that don't look or dress as we do! They wear feathers.

Instantly came the answer from one bright little girl. "Indians," she said triumphantly.

In the same class the following definition of a frog was given: "He is that thing that when he sits down he jumps up, and when he jumps up he sits down."

Help.

A business man has been engaged all summer raising a chow. Now those who know this brand of dogs will readily understand that to bring up a chow in the way he should go is no easy task. They are very jumpy and have much strength, even in puppyhood. Well, the other day this business man started for a walk with his dog in leash. They had just got going good when the chow gave a jerk robbed the man of his companionship and tore down the street. On he went for some distance, the man loping behind. Then two big curs, far away from any kennel breed, saw the runaway and started after him. Soon the larger of the curs made a leap and caught the leash in his teeth, checked himself and held the prisoner until the owner came up. He patted him on the head, saying "good dog" and took his chow back home.

From Small Beginnings

E. Benjamin Andrews, A Great College President

Some of the world's greatest men have been half blind. That was the case with Theodore Roosevelt, the great president, who lost the sight of one eye while boxing; with Sir John Tenniel, the great English artist, who lost the sight of one while fencing, and with E. Benjamin Andrews, the great educator, who lost the sight of one eye because of a wound received in battle fighting for the United States in the Civil War. It is not eyes that count but the brain and the will that lie back of the eyes.

Up in the New Hampshire hills, Elisha Benjamin Andrews, as a boy, did all sorts of farm work, and had every reason to expect that he would continue doing it the rest of his life. He went to school as others did, and gained the rudiments of an education. Then, when he was 17 years old, the Civil War broke out. The New Hampshire boy did not hesitate a moment. He enlisted and with him there were nearly all his playfellows. With the New England boys of 1861 patriotism was as natural as breathing. He entered the war as a private; he left it as an officer and a wounded hero, blind in one eye.

When the war was over, the young man remembered his studies and went back to his books. With the one good eye left him he won high place in school work, entered college, and was graduated in 1870 from Brown University, of which he became president 19 years later. He taught school for a while immediately after leaving college, but kept up his studies, entered theological school and became a minister.

His work was so intellectual and his personality so striking, that he made himself felt as a strong force for good. He was called to the presidency of Denison University, Ohio, and from that day devoted himself to education holding many high positions. He was professor at Newton Theological institution, at Brown and at Cornell, president at Brown University, superintendent of schools at Chicago, and chancellor of the University of Nebraska. In all his work he continued to study both at home and abroad, and his book "A History of the United States in Our Own Times," is a remarkable book.

With one eye he learned and accomplished more than most people do with two.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

TAHITI

"Tahiti, which was visited by a section of the United States fleet while in Pacific waters, is France's most important possession among the South Sea islands," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Papeete, its chief port is in turn the metropolis of the southwestern Pacific, 'The Honolulu of the south.' Because of its position almost midway between Panama and New Zealand, and its reasonable distance—as South sea distances go—from Samoa, the Marquesas, and Hawaii, Papeete is a everpresent Chinaman; and the nonsort of ocean crossroads, and its cosmopolitan aspect never fails to impress visitors. On its wharves and in its streets one encounters vanilla and coconut planters; traders—French, British and American, engaged in every 'line' conceivable from copra and silk stockings to fertilizer and pearls; sea captains and shipping agents; French officials, (for Papeete is the capital of the French Pacific); missionaries; natives; the descript beach-comber.

"Tahiti is of volcanic origin and might be described as a pile of green mountains. The highest peaks tower 7,300 feet above the sea and are smothered in a blanket of rank, tropical vegetation that sweeps to the topmost pinnacle. Even knife-like rock ridges are covered with trees and shrubs that stand out against the sky line like bristling hedges.

"Tahiti is made up of two 'loops' like a figure '8', one smaller than the other, connected by a narrow neck. The larger unit is about 15 miles across and the two, lengthwise, extend for 30 miles. The forest-covered, mountainous interor is almost uninhabited, the population being confined to the relatively level strip along the coast. In this strip are the vanilla, coconut, and sugar plantations of the foreigners, as well as the villages of the natives.

"There is little to urge a Tahitian to work. Fish may be caught on the coral reefs for the spearing, and breadfruit and fei, a species of banana, can be gathered as needed in the mountains. With the advent of western methods and an influx of Chinese these easy-going islanders have suffered from a competition they do not understand and their numbers have grown less.

"Papeete may be far from civilization from the viewpoint of the stay-at-home, but the palate of the visitor to Papeete certainly will not suffer for delectable food. In the bustling port town with its 2,000 French residents, some of them competent chefs, one may find vianda that would not be amiss in the restaurants of the Rue de la Paix,—from vin rouge, through poulet roti to cafe noir. And if he wishes native food he may fare well on coconut-fed pig roasted whole, fish with coconut sauce, shrimp, baked banana and baked breadfruit, the latter with a texture like very fine cheese and an indescribable, mildly pleasant flavor. For dessert he will have oranges, pineapples and various tropical fruits.

"The most ambitious sight-seeing trip in Tahiti is a circuit of the island by horse-drawn vehicle, along the coastal strip. This entails the fording of many streams which flow out of the mountains of the interior. Or one may push up one of the many valleys over trails that skirt swift streams and plunge through tunnels of verdure to a mountain top. If one climbs for the view, however, the time must be well chosen, for clouds shroud the mountain summits a large part of the time. The most novel sight-seeing trip is made in a small boat to the coral reefs, where water crystal clear, one may look down upon a beautiful under-sea garden of weird and beautiful growths among which dart brilliantly colored fishes."

MOTOR TRUCKS USED BY 51 RAILROADS NOW

Fifty-one steam railroads are listed using motor trucks to handle freight as compared with thirty-three a year ago, according to results of a survey just completed by the motor truck department of the national automobile chamber of commerce. Twenty steam railroads, or their subsidiaries, are now using over 219 motor buses. This survey represents the first attempt to list steam lines which have instituted auxiliary bus service, most of them within the last twelve months.

Of the railroads using trucks, thirty are doing so under contracts with terminal companies at either Cincinnati or St. Louis by which less than carload freight is interchanged by this means. Thirteen other roads use trucks at other terminals. Twenty-two railroads supply truck service at other points, eight to replace trains carrying package freight and ten to give store-door delivery in some form.

Ten of the railroads using motor buses have established routes parallel to som of their rail lines, five have substituted bus for rail service on branch lines, while two are using buses as feeders through territory not previously served by rail. Three railroads are making use of buses through arrangements made with bus operators as to ticket interchangeability or as to service in place of discontinued local trains.

More than 498 gasoline or gas-electric rail motor coaches are being operated by 190 steam and electric railroads. In the survey made by the same organization one year ago 482 rail motor vehicles were shown to be in use on 174 rail lines.

Twenty-six of these roads ar econsidering additions to this type of service, having ordered thirty-eight more units. Twenty roads were considering additional rail motor equipment at this time last year. Eighteen other rail lines not now using such vehicles are considering initial installations. These figures were taken from data supplied by 201 officials representing 174 railroads and from other sources believed to be reliable. In the survey made a year ago 140 officials representing 135 roads supplied informa[tion]

CORONER SAYS STATE SHOULD PROVIDE FOOTPATHS

In a finding in which Coroner John J. Phelan of Bridgeport, found two persons criminally liable for the death of a pedestrian who was struck by the car in which they were riding, the coroner advances the opinion that the state or town should provide footpaths alongside the highways. Mrs. Mary E. Fitzgerald and Elmer T. Sterry, who was teaching her to drive the automobile were held criminally liable for the death of Milford Sanfors, a Redding High school pupil, whom the car struck at Georgetown while he was walking six feet to one side of the paved part of the road. Under a state law both instructor and pupil are liable in accidents and both have been arrested by state police of the Ridgefield barracks.

Coroner Phelan's finding says: "Before closing this report it may not be amiss to say there was no sidewalk or footway for pedestrian traffic on or about the place of accident to give the deceased or others a reasonable chance by their use to save life or limb from a careless driver of an automobile.

"Cases of this character herein discussed cannot fail in my judgment to cause resentment in the public mind for such palpable omissions by the state or town authorities to provide such safeguards. It should go without saying that since the state has handed over the main highways to motor vehicle traffic and thereby deprived the humble pedestrian of the personal security that was his before the dangerous pessence of that traffic, the state by way of restitution should give heed to the constant dangers of the pedestrian and provide him with secure sidewalks or footways along such main traveled highways of the state."

EYESIGHT SAVING DAY IN EDUCATION WEEK

Eyesight conservation day as an annual event in the schools of the nation will be inaugurated as a part of the program of education week, November 15 to 22, it is announced by the eye sight conservation council of America.

The eyesight feature of education week has been approved, according to the announcement, by John J. Tigert, United States commissioner of education, who, with Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, and other federal officials, is a member of the board of councillors of the eyesight conservation council.

The aim of eyesight conservation day, it is explained, is to establish in every city and town in the United States a scientific practice uniting the teachers and parents in a common effore to eliminate conditions which are producing defective eyesight in millions of school children.

During education week the eye conservationists plan to set in motion machinery which will enable leaders in education to ascertain the extent to which poor eyesight actually exists among the 25,000,000 school children of the United States.

Simple visual acuity tests indicate that approximately twenty-five per cent. of this number have manifest defects of vision and other symptoms of eyestrain which materially hamper school work.

Commissioner Tigert reports to the council that he has established a positive relatio between backwardness and poor eyes. This relation, he says is yet uncertain and "co-efficients of correlation between progress and vision should be worked out."

One of the greatest disturbing factors, in the opnion of Commissioner Tigert is that faulty eyesight invariably leads to other troubles. Eye conservation, it is urged, should begin at the cradle, even controlling the use of toys, and be continued from kindergarten to college.

School and college officials now have fairly definite data upon which to develop an effective system of eye conservation, it was said, as a result of an extensive survey of the field recently completed by the council, the findings being embodied in a report called the most far-reaching of its kind ever prepared.

The facts disclosed by this survey are being placed at the disposal of the country's educators for use during Education week. They cover the results of eye tests of more than 24,200,000 students enrolled in public schools in state normal schools, universities and colleges.

One survey of 247 city schools showed that out of one group of 863,-936 children 21.9 per cent. had defective vision.

The lowest percentage of defective vision reported by any normal school or college was 14.5 per cent. Two-thirds of those reporting found defective vision within the range of from 25 to 50 per cent.

So wide a variance was reported in tests conducted in New York, New Jersey, Maine, Missouri and New Hampshire, ranging from 3.5 per cent. to 58 per cent., that council's officials assert that something is obviously wrong with these findings.

Effort initiated on conservation day will, it is planned, provide the workers with the facts so that errors thought to exist can be wped out.

MOST TERRIFIC STORMS OF HISTORY ARE RECALLED

"Equinoctial storms" are a myth and have no standing in meteorology. They are "line squalls."

"There is no maximum of storm frequency, according to statistics either in this country or in Europe, close to the date of either equinox," according to the American Nature Association.

"Of course in the long run many storms do occur about these dates, just as they occur at all other times," the writer points out, "but there is no scientific reason for supposing their occurrence can be connected in any way with the sun's passage over what the schoolboy described as a 'menagerie lion running around the earth.'"

An "equinoctial" is looked for in the United States particularly in the autumn. The autumnal equinox occurs during the season of West India hurricanes, and it occasionally happens that storms of this character sweep up our eastern seaboard within a week or two of the date in question, extending their influence far inland. These events have probably helped to foster the widespread belief in autumnal equinoctial storm.

"As for storms, the 'big wind in Ireland' Jan. 6-7, 1839, according to contemporary newspaper accounts was one of the great weather disasters of modern times.

"The 'great storm' of 1703 is supposed to have the most severe tempest that ever visited the British Isles. It cost the lives of more than 8,000 Englishmen, including some 1,500 men of the Royal Navy.

"The Barbados hurricane of 1780 was probably the most destructive hurricane that has occurred in the West Indies.

"Saxby's gale swept over eastern Canada with terrific force Oct. 9, 1869. It owes its name to the fact that it was predicted by a Lieut. Saxby, of the British Navy.

"In the Backergunge cycle, Oct. 1-, 876, more than 100,000 people were drowned by the storm waves over the Ganges Delta.

"The blizzard of March 11-14, 1888, also known as the great March blizzard, the New York blizzard, and, in New Hampshire, as the 'townmeeting storm,' is historic.

"The Samoa hurricane of March 16, 1889, wrecked American and German warships in the harbor of Apia, with heavy loss of life.

"The St. Louis tornado of May 27, 1896, was the most destructive of the three tornadoes that have occurred in three American cities, the others being the Louisville tornado of 1890 and the Omaha tornado of 1913.

CALIFORNIA LEADS WAY IN COUNTY LIBRARIES

The residents of approximately 200 of the 3,065 counties in the United States enjoy county library service. Forty-two of the 200 counties are in California. Since 1911 the development of county libraries has distinguished that state and stimulated a great interest in the provision of libraries in rural communities throughout the country. Prior to 1911 there were a few isolated instances in which counties had established libraries, but they created no wide-spread interest. About two-thirds of the states and Hawaii now have laws, most of them passed within the last decade, authorizing the residence of a county to levy a tax for library purposes. Some other states besides California in which the residents of certain counties have taken advantage of the provisions of their laws and established county libraries are: Indiana, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, New Jersey, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Tennessee, Texas, Wisconsin, and Wyoming.

A county library system provides for an extension to rural areas of the library service which large cities enjoy. It makes the county, outside of cities and towns maintaining their own libraries, the unit of taxation for support and provides for the establishment of a central library, usually at the country seat, with branches located at various points throughout the county. For example, Monterey county, California, with an area of 3,450 square miles, a population of 27,392, and taxable property amounting to about 40 millions, has a central free library at the county seat, and 12 branches. In 1924 it had 35 employees — in the central office and 25 in the branches—circulation 62,107 books. There is a library tax of a little more than one-third of a mill on the dollar.

COUNTRY SCHOOLS AND SMALL CITY SCHOOLS

More than 500 county superintendents of schools have recently sent to the bureau of education, the department of the interior, reports concerning the educational work under their supervision. These reports cover one-sixth of the rural territory of the United States are fairly representative of school conditions in the open country, country villages and small cities of less than 2,500 population. Only the cost per pupil in 1924 will be noted here.

For the entire country the average cost per pupil was $58 in the one-teacher schools, the schools of two or more teachers in the open country, the consolidated schools and those in villages where at least 50 per cent of the enrollment came from farm homes. These groups combined make up the rural schools.

In the same counties in the large villages and small cities were less than 50 per cent of the enrollment from farm homes the average cost per pupil was $101.

Dividing the whole country into four geographical divisions it appears that in the north Atlantic division the average cost per pupil was $69 in the rural schools and $83 in the larger villages and small city schools.

In the north central division the average cost per pupil was $78 in the rural schools and $111 in the larger villages and small cities.

In the two southern divisions combined the average cost per pupil was $34 in the rural schools and $44 in the larger villages and small cities.

In the western division the average cost per pupil was $87 in the rural schools and $117 in the larger villages and small cities.

GAY AND LUCRATIVE SEASON EXPECTED FOR MONTE CARLO

MONTE CARLO, Nov. 12—Monte Carlo has finished its summer housecleaning and brighter, gayer than ever is ready to receive the thousands of visitors during the coming season.

Important alterations have been made in the casino, the most striking of which being the enlargement of the popular roulette rooms at the expense of the exclusive baccarat salons. The new management—which took charge a little over a year ago— has realized that more money flowed into the coffers of the casino from the habitues where a five franc bet may be made than from the fashionable inner rooms, where the 1,000 franc wagers looked upon with some disdain by the blase croupiers.

Out of the gross receipts of 110,-500,000 francs taken in at Monte Carlo casino during the last year, more than 70,000,000 came from the chemin-de-roulette tables.

Roulette is the game reason that attracts visitors to Monte Carlo. The casino at Cannes, under the management of Eugene Cornuche, the "boss" of Deauville has been competition for Monte Carlo since the war. The Cannes casino receipts reached a little over 60,000,000 francs last year, but Cornuche has given up hope of ever catching up with Monte Carlo.

"Players get tired of baccarat and boule," Cornuche said. "They will spend two or three hundred francs to run over to Mont Carlo from Cannes and Nice, just to get a chance at the roulette."

Casinos in France are not permitted to operate roulette wheels and the Cornuche the proprietors of the gambling plants at Nice, Menton and other Riveria resorts feel that no real competition can be made in Monte Carlo, as long as the little principality enjoys exclusively the roulette privileges.

The Monte Carlo expenses in the last fiscal year amounted to less than 50,000,000 leaving a net profit of 63,-876,310 francs, two-thirds of which only were paid out in dividends to the shareholders. They received 600 francs as a dividend for a 500 franc share, nominal value.

The balance of the money was expended in the construction of a new building for the installation of the sporting club; a new cinema house and theatre and the erection of a summer casino at Larvotto. Ten new tennis courts have also been set out, six at the Festa Tennis club and four at the Condamine.

CHAMPIONS OF 1925 OCCUPY ALMOST CERTAIN PLACES IN SPORT HISTORY

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—(By the Associated Press)—Seldom in the course of the hectic campaigns in modern sports is it as easy to pick out and label the outstanding heroes as in 1925. The current season has a climax or two left but for the most part the champions in nearly every major branch of competition are established firmly on an unchallenged basis.

The current phenomenon, Red Grange, for instance, stands alone on the gridiron pedestal. The east has its Eddie Tryon and Al Kreuz and Swede Oberlander. The south its Doug Wycoff, the far west its Ernie Nevers and Ott Imlay and the middle west its "Cowboy" Nick Kutsch and Benny Friedman. Among others, but Grange stands head and shoulders above them all, acclaimed by the majority of critics as the greatest ball carrier of all time.

It is a source of regret that the death of Walter Camp prevents Grange from joining the select circle of stars who have gained a place on the late Yale critic's All-American selections three years in a row. The Illinois meteor deserves the distinction and undoubtedly would have gained it had Camp lived to perpetuate his famous mythical teams. As it is Grange must be content with a popular verdict in his favor and a place on any All-American teams selected by critics following Camp's example.

Just as Grange tops the gridiron field, Paavo Nurmi stands out among track and field athletes, while Big Bill Tilden and Mlle Suzanne Lenglen dominate the tennis word and Rogers Hornsby looms large in the major league baseball field. Even in golf, where there is usually much dispute among the bears, few will question the top-ranking position of Bobby Jones, who won the American amateur title for the second successive year, besides forcing William Macfarlane to a 36-hole play-off before losing his national open championship quest. Unless it is Walter Hagen, the P. G. A. champion, there is no one to challenge the all-around consistency of Jones over the last few years of campaigning on the links.

Joyce Wethered, the British star, likewise tops the women's golf list, for she conquered the American champion, Glenna Collett, on the way to triumph in the British championship. There may be some differences of opinion as to Hornsby's place at the top in baseball but the great Cardinal manager, leading his league at bat for the fifth straight year besides pulling his club up in the National league race, is generally conceded the palm for all-around day in and out performance.

The list of backfield aces led by Red Grange presents an unusually difficult problem this fall in making All-American or even all-sectional selection selections. Probably the middle east would agree generally upon Grange, Kutsch and Friedman for three of its all-star backfield but Molenda of Michigan, Marek of Ohio state, McCarthy of Chicago and Baker of Northwestern would demand consideration in picking the fourth attacking weapon.

Tryon, Oberlander and Kruez also would be hard to keep off any all-eastern backfield array with Phil Bunnell of Yale or George Pease of Coumbia among the outstanding candidates to fill the fourth post at quarterback.

The east also has an unusually excellent crop of ends figuring in this season's struggles. At least four teams have exceptional wingmen with Dartmouth's aerial success depending a good deal upon Tully and Sage. Army boasting a fine pair in Captain Baxter and Born, Pennsylvania possessing Thayer and Singer while Brown is well fortified with Captain Tuffer and Broda. Of this collection, Broda, Tully and Born have stood out particularly in their major tests so far.

HARVARD COACH SITUATION IS CAUSING COMMENT

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—Harvard's coaching situation, as a result of the disappointing showing of the Crimson eleven this fall, is arousing considerable comment.

The most persistent of reports in circulation connect the name of Reggie Brown, former aid to Percy Haughton at Harvard and now assistant coach at Brown, with the possibility of shifts in the personnel of the directing staff at Cambridge.

Brown, according to one published version today, and Ed Robinson, head coach at Brown, both have been approached by Harvard athletic authorities with the idea of taking charge of the Crimson's gridiron forces next year. Recently, another report linked Brown with Percy Wendell, Harvard backfield star of recent years who now is coaching at Lehigh after successful experience at Williams.

Those who favor the idea of Wendell going back to his alma mater in a coaching capacity understand that his contract with Lehigh is so phrased that he may be released at the close of this season if Harvard sends him a call.

Robinson, on the other hand, is not a Harvard man but weight to the idea that he may be approached is seen in the recent statement of Henry Pennypacker, chairman of the Harvard athletic committee, that the head coach need no longer be a graduate of the Cambridge institution.

Brown is acknowledged to be one of the keenest strategists in the east. He was widely credited with organizing the defense that stopped Dartmouth's vaunted running and passing game.

Charley Crowley, another former Harvard man and now head coach at Columbia, also has been mentioned in reports of Harvard's expected reorganization but he is expected to remain in New York at least another season.

ACADEMY SQUAD HOLDS LAST PRACTICE FOR CHAPMAN

Thursday afternoon Coach Whitney put his charges through what will probably be their last practice before the Chapman Tech game Saturday afternoon on the local campus. The local boys have practiced long and hard this past week and are in fine form for Saturday's contest. The first part of the week the squad was given easy workouts while Wednesday, Whitney, sent them through a long scrimmage in which the first team showed up to good advantage.

The entire squad is optimistic in regards to Saturday's game and the local boys expect to pile up a larger score than they did in their last game which they won by the score of 14 to 13. The local team will give Chapman a hard battle that—if ends in a victory for the N. F. A. will give Norwich better than a fighting chance to win the eastern Connecticut championship.

DR. PRINCE SAYS GAMES REVIVE FOND MEMORIES

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 13—Support of the theory advanced by George Owen, former Harvard football star, that few gridiron warriors enjoy their tussles for the pigskin has come for a psychologist who further asserts that nobody "cares a brass button" whether they like it or not so long as the crowds watching the games have their fun.

Dr. Morton Prince, Boston physician and psychologist who was graduated in the Harvard alumni bulletin, published today, that he believes the only enjoyment the average football player gets out of the game is the enjoyment of memories when he looked back at a successful season.

"It is the same thing as when one has been through some frightful, anxious adventure, like a ship wreck at sea or a lucky escape from the charge of a lion while game hunting. We are in love with our memories, though the original experiences were far from lovable."

DARTMOUTH HAS WORKOUT ON MUDDY GRIDIRON

FLINT, Mich., Nov. 13—(A. P.)—Dartmouth's football team worked out here this afternoon for more than an hour at Athletic park, despite a hard rain and a muddy field, kicking, dummy scrimmage and about half an hour of forward passing with the second and third teams opposing the varsity, featured the workout. Although no tackling was permitted, the men were soaking wet and coverde with mud when the workout ended.

Coach Jess B. Hawley tonight expressed concern over the weather conditions. The Chicago university team, which the Green meets Saturday at Chicago, outweighs Dartmouth the coach said, and if it were necessary to resort entirely to straight football the eastern aggregation might be at a disadvantage.

The Dartmouth party is made up of about sixty persons, 35 of whom are players. They leave at midnight tonight for Chicago.

NO SCRIMMAGE FOR CHICAGO BEFORE DARTMOUTH GAME

CHICAGO, Nov. 13—(A. P.)—The University of Chicago football team will take the field against Dartmouth college Saturday without having had a single scrimmage since the Illinois game last week.

A heavy rain this afternoon turned the Maroons' practice field into a mud lot, entirely under water, the worst field Coach Stagg has seen in his 33 years at Chicago. The squad galloped through the mire for an hour and a half, chiefly for rehearsing a few new plays for use against the New Hampshire eleven. These plays, however, were given no real test because of the field's condition. A little time was spent in defensive drill.

If there is no rain in the six hours preceding the kickoff, Stagg field, which is not used for practice, is expected to be in excellent condition.

The Dartmouth squad due to arrive here at 8 a. m. tomorrow and will go to the South Shore Country club.

NUTMEGS HOLD DRILL FOR LORRAINE GAME

The Nutmegs will hold a final signal drill this (Friday) evening in preparation for Sunday's game with the Lorraine Mills football team of Pawcatuck, Conn. The entire squad have drilled daily this past week and are in excellent shape for their coming contest. Hagberg, Pallocha, Chase and Sadinsky, four regulars who did not participate in last Sunday's abbreviated game at Jewett City, will be in the local team's lineup this Sunday against the club from the southeastern part of the state. Besides these, Kelly, Carlin, Grover, Williams, Herberts, Butts, Capt. F. McGrath will be in the starting lineup.

The management of the Nutmegs has gone to considerable expense and trouble to put Shehm Field into perfect playing condition. The entire gridiron will be both roped and lime-marked off and special police protection will probably also be had for the game.

NO PROSPECT OF EASTERN CONFERENCE SAYS BLOSSOM

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 12—(A. P.)—There is no likelihood that an "eastern football conference" similar to the western conference will be formed in the near future, according to John T. Blossom, Yale's graduate director of athletics, who gives his views in the current issue of the Yale Alumni Weekly.

"There was considerable talk about three years ago," Mr. Blossom says, "as to the feasibility of forming a baseball league, or conference, which should include Yale, Harvard and Princeton. Such an arrangement would have permitted the unification of training and other rules among the members of the conference. Both Yale and Princeton were inclined to favor this plan, but the Harvard authorities did not feel that they could neter into it without serious disarrangements of their early-season schedule. The plan was therefore dropped, and there is no immediate probability of its being revived."

ODDS FAVOR YALE, BROWN AND DARTMOUTH SATURDAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 13 (A. P.)—Odds have lengthened on most of the favorites in this Saturday's football battles.

Yale rules a 3 to 1 choice over Princeton, with a wager of $3,000 to $1,000, the largest reported on the basis of these odds, which have lengthened from 2 to 5.

Other wagers today established Army an overwhelming favorite over Columbia at 3 1-2 to 1, with Pennsylvania, Dartmouth and Brown each quoted at odds of 2 to 5 over Pittsburgh, Chicago and Harvard, respectively. Colgate is a 4 to 5 choice over Syracuse.

Wagers on the outcome of the Army-Navy classic here Nov. 28, also have witnessed an increase of odds on the Army from 2 to 1 to 2 1-2 to 1.

CRIMSON COURT CANDIDATES TO START PRACTICE SOON

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 12—(A. P.)—Harvard basketball team candidates will start practice Nov. 23, under the eye of Coach Edward Wachter, of Troy, N. Y. Adolphis Zaboraku, star of last year's varsity team, will coach the freshmen, who have a stiff schedule. The varsity schedule, announced tonight follows:

Jan. 12, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; 16, Holy Cross; 22, Colgate; 30, Connecticut Agricultural: Feb. 6, Springfield college; 8, University North Carolina; 12, Amherst at Amherst; 13, Williams at Williamstown; 20, Yale at New Haven: March 2, Brown; 6, Worcester Poly Tech.

TENNIS STARS ANNOUNCE THEIR ENGAGEMENT

SAN FRANCISCO, Col., Nov. 12 (A. P.)—The engagement of Alfred Chapin, Jr., of Springfield, Mass., and Miss Charlotte Hosmer, San Francisco, noted tennis players, has been announced. The wedding date has not been set.

The two became engaged in Mexico City last month during a match there. Chapin ranked fifteenth in last year's list of national tennis stars. Miss Hosmer won the coast tennis championship last year.

MANY IMPORTANT CHANGES IN SWIMMING RULES

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—(AP)—Several important amendents to the swimming rules will be recommended to the Ama. U. convention which assembles at Pittsburgh Sunday for its annual meeting.

These include the return of the 220 yard event to the outdoor championship program, and making of the long distance team championship a permanent fixture on the program, a recall by a second pistol shot when a false start is made and an addition of a rule which will make it compulsory to hold the indoor championships in an enclosed pool with the water at a temperature of not less than 72 degrees.

It will also recommended that the present diving rules be amended to conform with the rules of the federation international amateur natation which govern diving at the olympic games.

Track and field will also come in for some changes, one which will be recommended will change the distance between hurdles in the 440 yard three foot hurdle event to correspond with the distances now prestribed for the 400 meter hurdle. The idea of this change is to enable hurdles to accustom themselves to conditions prevailing in olympic competition.

Several other changes will be proposed which will affect boxing, wrestling, handball, tug of war and squash handball.

ANOTHER SHIFT MADE IN HARVARD SQUAD

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 13—The Harvard varsity line-up suffered another shake-up today as Head Coach Bob Fisher continued to shuffle his squad in the hope of finding a winning combination for the Crimson's last two football games with Brown and Yale this year. Two new faces appeared on Team A.

Henry Chauncey, an old Groton school star and a freshman back last year, who has been playing on Team B, this year, was promoted to the varsity, replacing Al Miller, 200 pound fullback and sprinter. Illness has kept Chauncey out of all but a few scrimmages, but his work yesterday apparently impressed Fisher. Miller went to Team B.

The other new comer was George Hoague, a substitute guard last year, who went in at right guard in place of Borden Tripp. Kilgour, regular left guard, did not get into uniform today, but will start the Brown game. It was said, as will Crosby, first string left-halfback, whose place today was filled by Issy Zarakov.

It was announced that the squad will not leave for Providence until Saturday morning. The stadium will not be deserted, Saturday, however, as the freshmen stage their annual tussle there with the Yale yearlings.

AGGIE FRESHMEN PLAY FINAL GAME TODAY

(Special to the Bulletin)

STORRS, Nov. 12—The Connecticut Aggie freshmen will wind up their grid season tomorrow, when the Massachusetts Aggies two year eleven is met here on Gardner Dow Field.

Connecticut's yearlings will find the Massachusetts Farmers heavy and experienced opponents, who to date have dropped but one contest. A comparison of the season's records of both elevens seems to give the M. A. C. team a slight edge.

Coach Alexander sent his men through a snappy session of signal practice this afternoon in the final preparation for the game. It will be the third year that the teams have met, with the Storrs team winning the first two contests.

Six games have been played by the Connecticut freshmen to date. Two resulted in victories, two in defeats, and two were scoreless ties. Rhode Island State freshmen and Milford Prep both fell before the Storrs yearlings. Tufts freshmen and Springfield freshmen succeeded in turning back Alexander's men, while scoreless ties were played with Wesleyan freshmen and Kent school.

ROPER SENDS HIS SQUAD THROUGH FINAL PRACTICE

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 12—(AP) Preparation for what will be the fiftieth meeting between the Princeton ton today when Coach Will Roper sent his men through a hard signal drill. The team will entrain for New Haven tomorrow morning, and will hold a brief practice in the bowl tomorow afternoon. The night will be spent in Lyme. There will be 35 team members, eight coaches and six managers to make the trip.

The day's work was confined largely to dummy scrimmage, staged by 22 men, all of whom are expected to see action Saturday. Sammy Ewing was kept at his drop-kicking, and was getting results. Keene Fitzpatrick reported that the entire squad, with the exception of Bartell, second choice center, was in fine condition. Roper will have a full dozen of good backs upon which to place his confidence in the big game.

A rally attended by many of the undergraduate body was held at Alexander Hall tonight. President John Grier Hibben, head Coach Roper and Captain Ed. McMillan were the speakers.

YALE TEAM PERFECTING AN AERIAL DEFENSE

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 12—A signal drill and a dummy scrimmage was the work of the Yale varsity football team today in its preparations for the game with Princeton Saturday. Tomorrow the bowl will be turned over to the Princeton team which will stop here on its way to its quarters in Old Lyme.

In the dummy scrimmage today, the work consisted largely in breaking up forward passes. All of the backs were given considerable work in running back punts, and Wadsworth and Allen tried kicking. Larry Noble was placed in the backfield by the coaches today, but it has not been determined whether or not he will start the game against the Tigers.

Bill Mallory, captain of the 1923 team, arrived this afternoon and was at the field with the other coaches in uniform. He assisted in the coaching of the backs.

Yale Yearlings vs. Harvard

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 12—(A. P.)—The Yale freshman football squad will leave tomorrow for Cambridge where the team will meet the Harvard freshmen Saturday afternoon. The defeat by Princeton is the only one of the year for the Blue yearlings. A hard game is looked for at Cambridge.

MANY GRIDIRON STARS WILL PLAY AGAINST EACH OTHER ON SATURDAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—Five great struggles featuring individuals who have attained fame on eastern football fields, will draw the cheers of thousands this Saturday. At the same time one contest, the Yale-Princeton game at New Haven, is expected to be a clash in which machines of great power will be dominating forces overshadowing individual performers.

Swede Oberlander, Dartmouth's backfield marvel who two years ago played as a lineman, meets an exceptional foe in "five yards" McCarty of Chicago, a plunger who has gained his nickname through vicious attacks on opposing lines. Oberlander undoubtedly is adept in more departments of the game than McCarty but the mighty Chicagoian may break through at anytime and is always good for the last five yards to a touchdown.

At Syracuse there is another great individual performance in the making, with Eddie Tryon, little halfback who conquered Princeton, playing for Colgate against Harlan Carr of Syracuse. They are of the running type, open field workers par excellence—dodging, twisting mites to whom long runs around the ends and through the tackles are comparatively common.

Tryon faces an old friend in Shrimp Foley of Syracuse, another light and speedy back, who used to play beside the Colgate captain in the backfield of Suffield school in Connecticut.

Al Kreuz, herd of Pennsylvania's victory over Yale this season, will be pitted against the 195 pound Andy Gustafson, fullback of Pittsburgh. They are plungers who hold their feet and do much of the kicking for their teams although it is reported that Kreuz, as the result of injury, may be unable to manipulate his famous left toe on Saturday.

Harry Wilson, former Penn State star now playing for the Army, will meet a worthy opponent in the brilliant Columbia captain and quarterback, George Pease, at the Polo grounds in New York.

Wilson scored the Army's only touchdown against Yale this year with an 80-yard run after intercepting a forward pass. Pease scored against Cornell in the same manner with a long sprint and ran back a kickoff against John's Hopkins for a touchdown.

Jackson Keefer of Brown, appearing against Harvard for the last time, will find his mettle tested by the Crimson captain, Dolph Cheek, who is rexarded as a brilliant performer in a season that has seen Harvard suffer many reverses. Keefer scored a touchdown against Yale with a 35-yd. sprint from regular formation and his ability in an open field kept Dartmouth in doubt throughout three periods.

GRANGE MAY NOT START AGAINST WABASH

URBANA, Ill., Nov. 12—(A. P.)—A heavy rain and decision by Coach Zuppke to start his second team against Wabash Saturday combined today to spread gloom among the many students here who had been looking forward to seeing Red Grange run wild in his last game on the gridiron where he won much of his fame. For it may be that Red has already worn the famous "77" Jersey for the worn the famous "77" jersey for the last time on the field of the $2,000,000 Illinois Memorial stadium.

Coach Zuppke apparently is looking to next year in giving his second string men an opportunity to meet Wabash.

Grange today spiked persistent rumors concerning his actions at the close of the football season and ridiculed the idea that he would run for congress.

Grange denied he was being tempted to play for a New York outfit that was willing to give $40,000 for three games, "Red" is now sure of what he will do and insists that he still thinks about the other games.

When shown a copy of the petition being circulated to have his name put on the ballot as a candidate for the republican nomination for congressman-at-large, "Red" laughed and hastened to exhibit the document to Coach Zuppke.

"Make me a postmaster will you, Red?" Zuppke asked. Red returned to practice today after a brief rest yesterday, but is still bothered by a bad leg. He will not start against Wabash, Zuppke announced tonight, but may get in the game if he is needed and is in condition to play.

BENNY LEONARD HAS LONGING FOR RING AGAIN

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Benny Leonard, less than a year after retiring as lightweight boxing champion of the world, years for a fight, by his own admission, but the objections of his mother have not been overcome.

Leonard told of his desire to Don Gloves while going through light training in a gymnasium and his return became almost a probability when it was learned that he had communicated with the state athletic commission. Tex Rickard, promoter, admitted that he was considering the retired champion as a principal in matches this winter.

"And there is the prospect which has often been mentioned," Rickard added, "That he will face Mickey Walker for the welter-weight championship next summer. You know Leonard will have to re-enter the ring as welter as I don't think he can make 135 ponds. There will be plenty of opponents for him and he is a favorite with the public."

"I may get in a punch or two next summer," Benny said. "Sure I want to fight again. I have been feeling like returning to the ring for some time, perhaps if I can prevail on my mother, who doesn't want me to fight, I will be among those present next summer."

FOUR CLUBS ADDED TO U. S. GOLF ASSOCIATION

VARIED PROGRAM OF STUNTS OF "Y" GYM

Good fun and athletics were combined in the employed boys gymnasium class at the "Y" last evening when after a varied program of gym stunts the boys enjoyed refreshments. This was followed by a brief talk by Secretary Hill and games, after which the athletic teams captained by James Falcone and Floyd Lambert were obliged to "wash the dishes" for losing the evening's gym games.

The Olympic event, the rope climb, was captured by James Falcone who "skinnied" up the 12 foot rope in 3 4-5 seconds, followed by Arthur Armstrong and William Selvidio who placed second and third. The team standing is as follows:

SPORTING NOTES

Sporting writers are accusing Dartmouth of using a lively ball in the game against Cornell Saturday.

Seven regulars of last year's Syracuse's football team were lost by graduations, but the goal line has not been crossed this season.

Eddie Tryon of Colgate will meet an old friend in "Shrimp" Foley of Syracuse Saturday. They were backfield-mates at Suffield school in Connecticut.

The new Madison Square Garden will have 14,000 seats when the six-day bicycle race starts on November 23, just twice as many as the old structure downtown contained.

Harry Wills, negro heavyweight and his manager, Paddy Mullins, leave for Memphis Saturday. Wills is to appear in an exhibition bout there and has other engagements in the south.

Basketball appeared unheralded in the sporting world yesterday when the Brooklyn Law school quintet boarded the battleship Illinois in the Hudson to defeat the Naval Reserves, 23 to 21.

Paderewski played at Princeton Tuesday night and appears at New Haven tonight—a sort of calm before the football storm which is due for Yale bowl Saturday.

Indications are that Murray Hulbert of New York, president of the Amateur Athletic union, will be re-elected at the annual meeting in Pittsburgh which opens next Sunday. He has held the post one year.

In the present season Man O'War's second crop, including Mars, Crusade, Dress Parade, War Lord, Volunteer, Washington, Edith Cavell, Taps, Corvette Siren, Medal, Swanee, Assembly and Fortress, has won a total of twenty-five races.

Figures show that Man O'War is truly a wonder sire. His first crop, which included American Flag, By Himself, Gunboat, Flagship, First Mate, Maid at Arms, Lightship and Florence Nightingale, captured numerous rich stakes.

Humbert Fugazy, who promoted the Italian hospital fund boxing bouts, one of the most successful outdoor events in New York the past summer, has announced that next season he will conduct various sports at Ebbets Field home of the Brooklyn Dodgers. Fugazy plans a professional football team among other things.

SCATHING DENUNCIATION OF D. C. STEPHENSON

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Nov. 12.—(A. P.)—D. C. Stephenson was denounced as a "man who holds himself above the law and a destroyer of the virtue of women," by Charles E. Cox in the state's closing argument in his murder trial in connection with the death of Miss Madge Oberholtzer here today.

Earl Klenck and Earl Gentry, bodyguards of the former Ku Klux Klan leader in Indiana and co-defendants in the case, escaped with scarcely less scathing denunciation by Cox. Klenck was described as a "gorilla" and Gentry as Stephenson's "iron man" and "slugger."

When court adjourned, Cox had not finished and the state still had one-half of the eight hours alloted it for arguments. William Remy, prosecutor, had opened the argument, being followed by Ira Holmes, of defense counsel, who urged that regardless of what might have been done, Stephenson was not guilty of murder.

ADVOCATES POWER POOL FOR N. ENGLAND

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 12—(A. P.)—A great power pool for New England which would make surplus electrical energy in any community available to the rest of the section was advocated by Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric company in an address today before the New England conference here. In a session devoted to power as one of the major problems of New England, Martin J. Insull, president of the Middle-west Utilities company, Chicago, explained that the Insull interests had entered the New England field to provide a "power pool" for Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont; and Dexter P. Cooper, author of the Passamaquoddy Bay project at Eastport, Maine, described his plan to generate power by harnessing the tides of the Bay of Fundy. Samuel Ferguson of Hartford, Conn., president of the Hartford Electric Light company, presided at the session.

Several hundred representatives of agricultural, commercial and industrial organizations in the six New England states were welcomed to the conference by Mayor O'Hara, of Worcester, on behalf of the city, and by Governor Alvan T. Fuller on behalf of the state and the New England governors. On motion of Governor John G. Winant, of New Hampshire, John S. Lawrence of Boston, chairman of the governors' joint committee, named the following committee to prepare plans for a permanent New England conference: Clarence E. Stetson, Bangor, Maine; Charles F. Lowe, Montpelier, Vt.; John F. Kinsley, Worcester; E. Kent Hubbard, Hartford; Edwin O. Chase, Providence, and George A. Wood, Portsmouth, N. H.

Mr. Young, who said he had a right to appear at the conference as the accredited representative of the Greenwich, Conn., Chamber of Commerce, held that the secret of maintaining high wages and low costs was in placing more and more power back of the individual worker.

"We must more and more make our capital provide us inanimate slaves," he said. "These slaves must run our machines—they must obey our orders—they must be available when and where and in such numbers as we may need them. The electrical art has made this possible."

"The six states of New England represent a natural economic unit with its industry dominant and its agriculture furnishing its perishable 'food supply,'" Mr. Young said in outling his power pool idea. "Specifically now what can it do? My answer is create a New England power pool and draw from that mobilized supply, through adequate integrated transmission systems, the power you need for your industry at the most economic point of production. All of your sources of power which are developed or can be developed should feed into your power pool."

Mr. Insull said the interests he represented had been in business in New England for thirteen years but had recently acquired new holdings in Northern New England with the idea of power mobilization, and to obtain the advantage of the diversity of load. The trend of the power business towards larger district units made necessary, he said, the holding company to take care of the enormous sums of capital required for expansion. The electric power business, he said, required $5 of capital for each dollar of income received and he placed the amount invested in the business in the United States at $6,500,000,000.

"We are in New England doing business because we believe in New England," he said. "I believe there is coming into New England a revival. These meetings themselves give good reason for the belief. I believe New England is going to awake from the complacency of self-satisfied middle age and arise again in all its vigor, put its shoulder to the wheel and replace what industries it has lost or may be losing due to the change in economic conditions by other industries which will more than take their place."

Mr. Ferguson called attention in his address to the responsibilities of the utility companies to the rural communities.

"It is obvious," he said, "that if rural extensions are made to carry themselves from the start, the price of current will be too high for universal farm use, and therefore, it seems logical that the cities should carry the burden of unprofitable rural extensions through the development period until the farm use can be built up to self-sustaining proportions. We must work with the farmer to break the vicious circle now existing—namely, that the rural uses are so small that prices must be high to cover costs, and conversely, because of the fact that prices are high, rural uses are confined to the minimum absolutely necessary. I believe the problem will be solved through the co-operation of the utility companies with the agricultural organizations throughout New England, which work is being actively undertaken at the present time."

FUEL SITUATION NOT AS BAD AS DESCRIBED

BOSTON, Nov. 12—(A. P.)—The fuel situation in New England could not be as bad as was described by E. W. Goss, representative of the "New England Governors' fuel committee before the Interstate commerce commission in New York today, Eugene C. Hultman, chairman of the state commission on the necessities of life, declared tonight. Mr. Goss, in a plea for lower railroad rates for bituminous fuel said "women and children are freezing to death in New England," and described epidemics of "influenza and pneumonia."

Mr. Hultman said he was assured that there was sufficient fuel at present in New England for immediate needs and that he was "not alarmed about the future." He pointed to a statement made on November 5 by Governor Trumbull of Connecticut who appointed Mr. Goss as his representative, in which the governor said 80 per cent. on the winter's fuel requirements for Connecticut already were in the state and Mr. Hultman said he believed similar conditions existed elsewhere in New England.

Mr. Hultman said it undoubtedly would be necessary for New England to use some fuel other than anthracite if the present strike continued in the Pennsylvania mines, but said he thought Mr. Goss had been "carried away with his subject," in his New York testimony and had gone "a little too far."

It's always a great bore for the burglar if the safe is locked.

HEAVY LOANS TO ITALIAN GOVERNMENT EXPECTED

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(A. P.)—With the ban on Italian financing lifted by the agreement reached at Washington today for a settlement of Italy's war debt to the United States, bankers expect a loan of $50,000,000 or $100,000,000 to the Italian government and at least $50,000,000 of industrial bond issues to follow within a short time.

New financing for the Italian government will be used to strengthen its financial position preparatory to a restoration of the gold standard and a probable revaluation of the lira. Of the money to be obtained, $50,000,000 will be required to absorb a credit granted by J. P. Morgan & Company last summer to a consortium of Italian banks for exchange stabilization purposes on behalf of the government.

No formal application for a loan has been received by the bankers but it has been known for some time that a careful financing programme had been devised in Italy, to be put into effect as soon as a debt settlement had been arranged. The initial credit of $50,000,000, guaranteed by the government, was placed for one year with the three Italian banks of issue—the Bank of Italy, the Bank of Naples and the Bank of Sicily.

International bankers expressed their satisfaction with the terms of the debt agreement negotiated at Washington, considering them liberal to Italy and at the same time satisfactory to the United States. The opinion was expressed in some quarters that the settlement would hasten another and more determined effort to fund the French debt.

The man who has little and wants less is richer than the man who has much and wants more, and more likely to get it.

Broadway Theatre

Shows may come and shows may go, but the show at the Broadway Theatre the last half of this week will long linger in your memory as the best yet.

Norwich theatregoers are well acquainted with the quality of B. F. Keith vaudeville and they can find this kind at the B'way always.

The feature attraction is the Gaulamais Revue with the Gualamais musical four. Seven players are featured in this extraordinary attraction and the company may well be proud of the class of entertainment it has to offer.

Arthur Dunn & Kitty Nelson, two versatile comedians were very good in a variety of comedy, songs and steps.

As an extra added attraction the management obtained the services of Scotty McDonald who has just arrived from bonnie Scotland. He is, as an entertainer, in a class by himself and deserves the support of everyone especially local Scotchmen.

Frey & Fetter offered more comedy that just struck the funny bone for a bulls-eye.

Kennedy & Nelson are as funny as they are clever and entertained the capacity crowds of yesterday to the very best.

Lionel Barrymore is the featured player in the photoplay "A Man of Iron" and gave one of the finest screen portrayals seen here for some time.

We say "Don't Miss This Program."

Isa Kremer Coming To Broadway

When asked what she enjoyed most about Americans, Isa Kremer, the world famous balladist, replied: "The hearty manner in which you laugh.".

"I have found," she continued, "that it is the healthy people who laugh and you Americans are a healthy class. You laugh at your work, you laugh at your play, and if it were possible I believe you would laugh at your own funeral."

Miss Kremer, who comes to the Broadway Theatre next Monday evening, for a concert, certainly will bring her cup of cheer. She too has learned the art of laughter. The concerts are filled with humorous songs. She likes to portray the joys of people. A good joke is always welcome with her, and she knows a few of them herself. She will always look at life through its rays of sunshine, yet she has passed through some trying times.

"The negroes have a hearty laugh," she says. "I just love to hear them. Someone told me the negro invented the hearty laugh; if that be true he is not a bad fellow to take lessons from. So when I say the most enjoyable trait I find about Americans is the hearty laugh, just count me a pupil."

That kind of sleep is the greatest aid to health, beauty, vigor and strength.

And you can do it. Those who are troubled with fitful, broken slumber have found that this condition is changed as soon as they begin to use a new preparation called Neura.

Breed Tehatre

An interesting sidelight in connection with The Iron Horse, the William Fox epic photoplay built around the transcontinental railroad pioneers, is the number of unsolicited testimonials received from men in all walks of life, commenting on the general excellence of the picture.

The effect of this great American Odyssey, as one writer called it, on all who see it seems to be so impressive that they cannot allow the opportunity to congratulate the man who was responsible for it to pass.

From governors of states, railroad presidents, labor leaders, down to the average man on the street, these testimonials flow in.

Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York is one of the high public officials who could not resist the temptation to congratulate Mr. Fox. In a letter to the producer he says:

"A number of state officials saw The Iron Horse with me. It was the unanimous opinion of everybody present that it was not only amusing and interesting, but it was highly instructive. We were all of one mind that it should be a great success."

Howard Chandler Christy, America's foremost artist, after seeing the instructive and inspiring film wrote Mr. Fox:

"Last night we saw The Iron Horse and this is to congratulate you and to thank you for a most entertaining and exciting evening. Not only is it a splendid artistic production, full of interest and action and humor—it is the kind of thing every youngster and grown up in this country should see—to stimulate their minds in the making of this great nation of ours.

"A picture of this kind stimulates healthy imaginations and forms real character. One comes away from the theater feeling that the evening has been gloriously spent and that the history of our country is unlimited in the picturesque—the heroic and romantic.

"We are all indebted to the producer of such a real picture."

Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, is another of the high public men who wrote Mr. Fox after he saw The Iron Horse.

The Iron Horse will be shown at the Breed theater all next week.

Princess Bonnie

Wherever Princess Bonnie has been staged the show has gone over with a bang and the staging of the show by local talent for Fletcher Post, American Legion, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of next week at the Broadway theatre, will prove no exception judging from the excellent manner in which the cast has taken to the show.

Splendid scenic effects, elaborate costumes, good dancing and singing are bound to capture the interest of the audience for the play abounds in all of these things.

The play tells the story of Bonnie, rescued 14 years before the opening of the play, from a ship wrecked off the coast of Maine, to grow up as the adopted daughter of Captain Tarpaulin and his maiden sister, Aunt

MRS. MYRA FRINK WARD

Crabbie. How the mystery of her parentage is unravelled affords the interesting features of the play, but there is much for enjoyment during the acts before and after her discovery by her parents.

In the playing Princess Bonnie no better choice could have been made than that of Mrs. Walter Buckingham, and her talent on the stage is well known in this section of the state. As the maiden sister of Captain Tarpaulin, the Legion has been extremely fortunate in securing Mrs. Myra Frink Ward for the part.

A trained public speaker, used to the stage, Mrs. Ward has always handled her parts in a most creditable manner, her part in Bimbo placing her high in the ranks of local players. She will be seen at her best in Princess Bonnie.

Other members of the cast, Miss Eunice Taft, Miss Mary Prodell, Frank Crowell, J. Warren Kane, Herbert McNeeley, George Madden, Walter LaFontaine and Harry Bowers are all well known to Norwich audiences and are destined to handle their parts in a most creditable manner.

Tickets are now on sale in many stores in the city and exchanges for seats at the Broadway theatre may be made at Enkler's drug store beginning on Saturday.

It is expected that work will open very soon on the state aid roads—Stickney and Bigelow—and the Kostu house, near Mashapaug, has already been rented for some of the workmen.

Each of the local schools will hold one evening session, next week, to give the parents and friends of the children a convenient opportunity to visit the schools and to observe the daily routine work of the pupils.

A very enjoyable meeting of Mashapaug Lake grange was held at the town hall on Wednesday evening, Nov. 4th. Ponoma helped to give her program quite a humorous turn and created, numerous "aughs." Refreshments were served.

The town has done well for some years.

Much sadness is felt in Mashapaug and, indeed, throughout the town at the news of the very serious illness of our young townsman, Harry Young. He was carried to the Wesson Memorial hospital, Springfield, Mass., last Monday morning. He had been suffering from ulcers of the stomach, and complications had developed. The news from Springfield yesterday afternoon, was very unfavorable. His bride of five weeks accompanied him to the hospital.

One of Union's daughters, Mrs. Ellen Kimby Beard, who has spent many years as a missionary in China, called on friends here last week. She was accompanied by her brother and sister of Putnam, Elibert Kinney and Miss Emma J. Kinney. Mrs. Beard expects to sail from San Francisco for China on Nov. 21, where she will rejoin her husband and oldest daughter and resume her missionary work. While on her journey west she is stopping at Oberlin, where two of her daughters are taking their college training. She is also stopping in Geneseo, Ill., to visit her cousin, Miss Addie Paul. The latter is a niece of the late Miss Addie Paul of Union.

The day when vegetation of lakes and other large bodies of water yield vitamins and people drink river water without fear of germs that produce disease, may soon dawn, it was indicated at the closing session of the National Academy of Science in Madison, Wis.

NEW ENGLAND FARMING NEEDS EVERY POSSIBLE AID.

(Written Specially for The Bulletin.)

A farmer up in Berkshire county, Mass., recently told an investigating committee that he was making $2,000 a year and eight per cent on his investment from his farm.

He also expressed the belief that, if other Massachusetts farmers would work "as hard as factory hands and take full advantage of the help offered them by their agricultural colleges," they could do as well.

Now, if you've read these "Talks" with any sort of care and consecutiveness, seems to me you must have noticed that, while I have always admitted and deplored the fact that most New England farmers are merely making a living,—and not a very good one at that,—there was still and nevertheless room for profitable farming right here and all around us.

I can even remember quoting on several occasions that wise remark of the old Roman:—

"The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings."

Meaning thereby that our failure to get a good living and some profit off our farms was, ordinarily, due to our own selves and not to the farms. This Berkshire county man's testimony seems to fortify that contention. He makes four times what any farmer in my little town is making, and a good percentage of profit on his investment, besides.

How does he do it? Well, as to the details I wasn't even interested enough to try to find out. Because, in the first place, his methods and devices and formulas are unquestionably planned to fit his farm, his capacities, and his surroundings. Which does not mean that they would fit any other farm or any other farmer's capacities. Some of our critics find fault because farmers are so "individualistic." Great Scott! That's just exactly what they have to be. Each one has to learn what his farm will do and what he is capable of making it do. His own particular farm. I mean, not somebody else's in some other county or state. It is not only quite possible, it is extremely probably that what means good pay and profit on a Berkshire county, Mass., farm might mean the exact opposite on a Windham county, Conn. farm.—Anyway, servile imitation of another man, no matter how successful that other man may be, is not the main road to one's own success. "Copy-cat" is a poor critter and always will be. In the second place, small details are of trivial importance, because this farmer has given, in what I have already summarized of his statement, the two vital and ruling elements of his success.

First, hard work: Second, taking advantage of the help offered by the agricultural colleges. There's small use considering details and ignoring such broad principles.

Now, you and I know perfectly well that, when the farmer works, he works harder and longer hours than "factory hands." "When he works," I say. But he doesn't work that way all the year 'round. The very nature of his business forbids. He can't grow crops, which is his main function, when the ground is frozen three feet deep and the thermometer is flirting with the zero mark. If he is a dairy farmer he will, unquestionably, find his work cut out for him, all winter. But we can't all be dairy farmers, and for the rest of us winter is time rather for waiting and "puttering" than for hard work. I greatly doubt whether factory hands work as hard as farmers during the hurry and seeding and harvesting. But they work 12 months in a year, where the farmer has to squeeze his activities into six months. That is, he has to, unless he can contrive some means to beat the weather and find himself some profitable occupation while his acres are snowbound. City people, who work in shops or stores or banks or factories, and have cars to carry them to and from their work, rarely appreciate at its true value the handicap in wintry prohibitions under which the out-door farmer labors.

But, is there no way in which the ambitious and foresighted farmer may find earning occupation during what are, now, his enforced winter vacations? There used to be, in the old days, when I was a boy one neighbor used to make a good many dollars every winter, shaving out ax-handles. He picked out wood hickory; he seasoned it judiciously; shaped the helves to fit the hands of his customers; he finished them artfully. People came from 20 miles away, when they had to wade snow-drifts afoot, too, to get ax-handles from him. One of them would outlast half-a-dozen of the machine-turned things. Another neighbor raised, every year, an acre or so of broom-corn. He set up a crude forming machine in a vacant room of his house and, when winter forbade him from working his soil, he made brooms. Good brooms, too; not with dyed and colored and ye-weakened straw, but with straw retaining all its natural toughness and springiness, fastened on good, straight-grained, basswood handles, almost as tough as hickory and as light as cork. He usually had orders enough given him before Thanksgiving to keep him busy all winter.

Other farmers resorted to other devices, fitted to the times and their neighborhoods. It is a confession of our own inferiority if we put forth the claim that there is no longer any call for good brooms and good axhelves. Good heavens! There is call for forty-eleven other things! Those old chaps didn't take to broom-making and helve-shaping because they specially liked those jobs, but because there was pay to be earned doing them. They used their gumption a little. Have their descendants less gumption than they had?

If modern farmers had the same urge to work and the same sense of thrift and the same degree of gumption their dads and granddads possessed, I rather fancy there are a whole lot who could find something to do even during the winter which would keep them out of mischief and bring in some money.

But the Berkshire farmer we started out to talk about laid down a second principle. Not only would he require farmers to work hard and all the year 'round, but he would have them take advantage of the help offered by their agricultural colleges.

To some of you, as I perfectly well understand, this is like daunting a red rag in the face of an infuriated bull. "Book-farmin', Oh, fiddlesticks," cries one; "Don't want no theorizin' dudes on my place," shouts another; "I'd ruther have one good plow-hand than sixteen college purfessers," sneers a third; "The way father farmed it 'e good enought for me," says still another.

But, dear fellow, you're not farming the way father did. That's the first answer. Father went at his farming with all the strength he had and with all the gumption he possessed and with all the information and instruction that was available to him. He was handicapped in a hundred ways. He had to go by guess half the time and by gosh the other half. There was no one to tell him that this field lacked lime and that field wanted phosphorus and another was short of humus. He had only stable manure and land plaster and Chilean guano, and it took him half his life to find out, through failure after failure, what you could learn in 15 minutes if you only took advantage of the information freely at your disposal. He had never heard of the nitrogen-gathering, potash-saving bacteria, on whose activities, more than all other sources combined, fertility depends. He did the best he could in an ignorance he wasn't to blame for. But the modern farmer either stolidly or stubbornly refuses to walk in the light which is offered him, is to blame. The one sinned through ignorance; the other sins against knowledge.

Oh, I know that some of the agricultural college boys are sapheads. I know of one, myself, who actually thinks that his three years of college work authorize and fit him to tell all his experienced old farmer neighbors that they are doodle-bugs and has-beens. He has been three years on his own farm, since college, and hasn't yet raised enough on it to keep a cow.

I also know another neighbor who hired a "practical farmer," one of your theory-despising kind, two years ago, to work his farm. And the first thing that "practical" chap did was to ruin the finest meadow on his employer's farm. That meadow was the best natural grassland within miles. For I don't don't how many year,—more than 20, anyway,—it had yielded better than two tons of dried hay to the acre, without any fertilizing. The "practical" man plowed it all up, killed all the wild grasses, and sowed it to timothy and clover, neither of which will grow on it, simply because that was the way he had been accustomed to doing on entirely different land. The field is now and is likely to remain a sickly waste of weeds and sedges.

You see, a "practical" farmer is just about as likely to make an ass of himself as a "theorizin' " farmer, when he kicks his gumption out of doors and undertakes blindly to follow either a college theory or a paternal example.

Some years ago, a couple of young men in the tobacco-raising region of this state took over their father's farm. It hadn't been doing well for some years under his management. It did no better under theirs. At last, more in despair than in hope, they went to an agricultural college professor and asked his advice. He looked over their land, tested their soil, and advised them just what analysis showed to be lacking. At his suggestion, they tried lime, phosphate and soy beans. The first season showed improvement; the second produced a profit for the first time in a dozen years. The old farm is once more making not only a living but money for them.

"Shall any good thing come out of Nazareth?" asked certain wise men of old. You may have the same feeling towards the agricultural college that certain old Jews had towards Nazareth. But something good did come out of the despised village. And something good can sometimes be gotten from even the agricultural college.

In the present condition of New England farming it would seem hardly wise to refuse any aid, from whatever source.

There is no imminent danger that we shall any of us ever know more than is good for us.

THE FARMER.

STRAWBERRY CITY PREPARES TO ANSWER MID-WINTER CALL

PLANT CITY, Fla., Nov. 5. (AP)—S-t-r-a-w-b-e-r-r-i-e-s! This midsummer cry in northern and western cities will soon be echoed here when the Florida berry growers begin gathering their crops. The greatest yield of the local fields comes shortly after Christmas when thousands of crates are shopped to distant markets.

Strawberries require a special method of cultivation, involving expensive irrigation systems and constant field work. The crops in this vicinity are valued at more than $1,000,000 a year and the strawberry acreage is constantly increasing.

Representative Black, Democrat, New York and a labor delegation protested to Secretary Wilbur against proposals for complete construction in China of six new gunboats for the Yantze river patrol.

WESTERLY

Automobile parkers in the vicinity of Dixon square, Westerly, will begin the study of a new series of rules and regulations, the result of the decision of the new committee of the newly elected Westerly Town council, in charge of the police and traffic affairs of the town. This committee consists of Harry H. Coleman, Robert E. Trainer and Isaac G. Smith and they have decided to change the automobile restrictions which have been in force. Hereafter, automobiles in front of the Rhode Island hotel will park alongside the curb and not head in diagonally, as heretofore. The diagonal white parking space lines were blotted out Thursday morning by a liberal application of black paint to the highway surface. In front of the Westerly Memorial and Public library the street front of the building where automobiles are forbidden to park has been extended about half way to the postoffice and for the remainder of the distance but a 30-minute interval for stopping has been put into effect. Thursday morning Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown and Patrolman George H. Champlin who began a week's tour of day duty were kept busy in the roles of guides and instructors.

Thursday, the steam shovel of Samuel Nardone & Co., which firm has the contract for the installation of sewer mains in Westerly, began excavation work on Dixon street and by night had approached the main building of the Rhode Island state armory located on this street. It is expected that easy digging will be found along this street, free from the rock, boulders and granite ledge which have slowed down the installation work on other streets of the town. In order for the big steam shovel to operate, it became necessary to cut a large limb from an elm on the property of Mrs. Elizabeth L. Chester which overhung the street.

MYSTIC

Armistice Day was observed here by ringing of the bell in the Union Baptist church at 11 o'clock, for two minutes, so that everyone hearing it would stop work for the two minutes as requested by President Coolidge. The clear, loud tone of the bell on the clear day reminded all of the great rejoicing seven years ago when the armistice was declared, the stores closed at noon and all business activities ceased. Many went to Westerly and witnessed the parade given there. In the evening St. Mark's Episcopal church was filled at the union church service which was very impressive. The hymns were selected for the service and the four pastors had a part in it. Rev. F. G. Chutter delivering a scholarly sermon appropriate for the occasion and sounding the conditions of today. MYSTERIOUS THIEF IS DETECTED AT NOANK

(Special to the Bulletin)

NOANK, Nov. 13—The dock thief has been caught in the act and owners of lobster pots may now safely leave their gear on the docks without fear of finding them gone in the morning.

Mysterious thefts of lobster buoys has caused one local fisherman some concern, and he determined to lay in wait and catch the thief. He remained at the dock working on his gear one day this week when suddenly he heard a scraping noise, and looking around, discovered something making off with one of his lobster buoys.

He quietly followed the thief, up the road and into a vacant lot some distance from the dock. Here the thief paused for awhile and the move was fatal, for the local man caught him and sent him flying home.

The thief was a dog and a search of the field disclosed a collection of lobster buoys, the haul of many weeks by this four legged thief, which had kept all local Sherlock Homes puzzled for some time.

WOMAN'S SECRET OF BEAUTY

Beauty lies in the care a woman bestows upon herself and in keeping at bay those dreaded ailments peculiar to her sex, which drag her down and leave telltale traces upon her countenance. Sparkling eyes, the elastic step and a clear complexion never accompany organic troubles. Distressed expressions, a sallow complexion, dark circles under the eyes, lassitude, headaches and mental depression are the telltale symptoms of women's ailments. Women so troubled should not lose a day in taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, the most successful remedy known to overcome woman's ills and restore health and beauty.

—Bobby Coon.

Bobby Coon knew that the sensible thing for him to do would be to curl up in his hollow tree and stay there. But Bobby wasn't ready to do this. No, sir, it wasn't quite late enough in the season. Bobby wasn't through laying up fat. He still had an appetite. So, though he knew that hunters were looking for him by day and night, Bobby refused to stay at home. He slept most of the time during the day, but every night saw him out looking for more food in order that he might store up more fat under his skin.

But always Bobby was listening for the voice of a dog following his trail.

Bobby waited where he was

It had happened at this season of the year every year since he could remember. Perhaps it was because Bobby always had escaped that he felt sure he could escape again. There were few tricks for fooling dogs and hunters that Bobby didn't know. He knew all the old tricks for which Coons are famous and he had added a few of his own. In a way Bobby looked on it as a sort of game. It always tickled him when he succeeded in fooling the dogs and the hunters. He never stopped to think of what would happen if he should fail to fool them.

One night Bobby's trail was picked up by that dog before Bobby had had time to get a mouthful to eat. In fact, that dog had picked up that trail right close behind Bobby. Under the circumstances Bobby was rather glad that he hadn't had time to eat. It was easier running on an empty stomach than it would have been on a full stomach. Still, Bobby didn't feel like running particularly that night and, furthermore, he wanted to eat, not run. So he looked about for the quickest way of getting rid of that bothersome dog.

Now it happened that Yowler the Bob Cat had started out hunting that evening at just about the same time that Bobby had started out. As Bobby Coon ran he came to the fresh trail of Yowler the Bob Cat. A crafty look came into Bobby Coon's eyes. He turned and began to run a little faster and he ran in the same direction that Yowler the Bob Cat was going. The truth is Bobby was following Yowler's trail.

Now, Bobby was too fat to run very far. At the first opportunity he jumped up on an old stump and from there to a tree. Up this he climbed and from a fork high up he waited for what would happen. Hardly had he reached his perch when along came that dog down below with his nose to the ground, and a most excited dog he was. It wasn't the scent of Bobby Coon that was filling his nose. It was the stronger scent of Yowler the Bob Cat. That dog had forgotten that he was supposed to be hunting Bobby Coon. Straight on past the stump to which Bobby had jumped the dog ran. On and on he went, barking excitedly. Presently in the distance he began to bark in one place. Bobby knew then that Yowler the Bob Cat had gone up a tree.

Bobby waited where he was. By and by he saw lights coming through the Green Forest and beneath him passed several hunters. Two were carrying lanterns. They were talking excitedly and hurrying toward that barking dog. As soon as they had passed Bobby Coon came down from that tree and hurried to another part of the Green Forest in search of that delayed dinner. And all that time he chuckled. He knew that Yowler the Bob Cat had stayed up in that tree only until he had heard the hunters coming. Then he had jumped and run, while the dog still supposed him up that tree.

"There is nothing like making use of one's neighbors, especially when they know nothing about it," said Bobby Coon. "I must find out where Yowler is in the habit of going these moonlight nights, for I may want to make use of him again."

Judge—And what did you say when your wife refused to allow you to go to your lodge meeting?

Defendant (charged with wife beating)—I didnt say nothing, your honor. One of them strong silent men, that's me. Judge.—Life.

"Uncle Tom," said his young nephew to an old bachelor, "tell me about some of the narrow escapes you've had from the women."

"Boy," was the response, "if there was any narrow escapes the women had 'em!"—Judge.

There is no use trying to joke with a woman. The other day Jones heard a pretty good conundrum and decided to try it on his wife.

"Do you know why I am like a mule?" he asked her when he went home.

"No," she replied promptly, "I know you are, but I don't know why you are."—Pittsburgh Sun.

CENTER OF CIGAR INDUSTRY IN TAMPA MOSTLY SPANISH

TAMPA, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Ybor City is the center of the cigar industry in Tampa and of its population more than 25,000 people are of the Spanish race. A great many of them use the Spanish language almost exclusively.

Ybor City was named after one of the progenitors of the Ybor family, early settlers in Tampa. It appears as a city transplanted from Spain. The traditional love of the Spanish for music and drama resulted in the erection of Centro Asturiano, a handsome opera and club house, where Metropolitan stars have frequently entertained.

Other Latin elements also are found in Ybor City, notably the Italians, who have built a beautiful auditorium as an adjunct to their club.

Local activity in real estate has affected Ybor City and resulted in the displacement of some landmarks, but the Latin element pursues its way uninfluenced by such material matters as land values.

On April 12, 1887, an Arab pearl diver remained under seven fathoms of water for 109 seconds.

Wire for an emergency telephone to fight a recent forest fire in California was delivered across a mountain to foresters by airplane.

A new form of steel has been invented by a Swiss named Mosshard, which is asserted to be 40 per cent. lighter than ordinary steel and to afford 30 per cent. saving in construction costs.

George Newton is wondering why he is picked on. A hailstorm at his farm near Defiance, O., ruined his corn and cabbage, and cucumbers in the garden were spilt by the hail, which was apparently confined to the eighty-acre farm of Mr. Newton. Neighbors reported heavy rains, but no hail.

Tipping the scales at 100 pounds, Merdith S. Taylor, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Taylor, Nicholas county, Kentucky, is believed to be the largest child for his age in the state. He weighed eight and one-half pounds at birth. He now has a forty-inch chest. The parents are each below the average weight and have two other children, each of whom is of normal weight.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Wheeler, of Pine Grove, Pa., were served with an injunction to prevent them from lying on a pavement used as a detour. Believing it to be their private property, they took for their motto, "They shall not pass," and, stretching out on the street, placed themselves in danger of being run over, and got on the nerves of motorists who feared killing the couple.

With only nine jurors, the court instructed the bailiff, at Toledo, O., to pick up three men sitting in the rear of the courtroom. "Get into the jury box," he commanded. Spectators began to grin. So did the three men. They had just pleaded guilty to the charge of burglary. The court noticed the mistake in time and three other talesmen were selected before the trial began.

"Deaf as an adder" is an old English catchword; but a German biologist, Professor Kal Berner, has proved that at least some reptiles can hear. He experimented on 2two species of lizards, eight kinds of tortoises and a crocodile. The tortoises never gave any sign that they heard his signals, but the lizards and the crocodiles responded. A sleeping lizard would open at least one eye when an electric bell was sounded. Changes in the rate of breathing also indicated the perception of sound, and this was used to measure the limits of pitch audible to reptilian ears. Lizards could be trained to respond to sounds. Each day, while they were being fed, a certain note was sounded on a pipe. After two months the sleeping animals would awake and go at once to the customary feeding place when they heard the familiar tone, showing that they had become used to the idea of music with their meals, and indeed that to them music meant meals.

Half the world is half asleep

Can success in life be undermined by constipation? Indeed it can. The poisons of this disease tire you out, wear you down, make you listless and make you lose interest in things in general. Ambition is most often prompted by a thoroughly healthy body. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN brings permanent relief from constipation.

He didn't have the energy to fight

Lost . . . another big order . . . the fourth defeat that day. All because he didn't have the energy to fight when his prospect said "No." Something had blunted his senses and stolen his strength. What was he coming to?

That "something" was constipation, the world's most universal disease. What a shame so many people suffer from constipation when there is really such an easy, pleasant, sure way to bring permanent relief—the regular use of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN—two tablespoonfuls daily; or in chronic cases, with every meal.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is what doctors call a bulk food. As it travels through the system its fiber remains unchanged. Therefore, it sweeps the intestine clean and drives out the vicious poisons of constipation. ALL-BRAN also absorbs and carries moistures through the intestinal tract, stimulating it to healthy, normal action. ALL-BRAN works as nature works. You need never increase the amount eaten. How different from habit-forming pills and drugs, which become ineffective unless the dose is steadily strengthened and increased.

You'll like Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Serve it with milk or cream, sprinkled over cereals, or cooked with cereals; in soups, or made into the many recipes given on the package. You'll like it with fruit. If eaten regularly, it is guaranteed to bring permanent relief or your grocer returns the purchase price.

KNOW THE TRUTH ABOUT BRAN

To be effective, bran fiber must go through the various digestive processes without submitting to any of them. It must pass through the entire alimentary tract without its form being changed.

What happens when a bran food is eaten?

After the saliva has acted upon it, it passes through the stomach and into the intestines, where every part which is not fiber is absorbed.

In ALL-BRAN the quantity of fiber is so great that it furnishes bulk enough to prevent and relieve constipation.

In a part-bran food, the quantity of fiber is so small that there is only a puny amount to do a herculean task.

ALL-BRAN brings sure results. Demand it.

Caution! Be sure to get Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Only ALL-BRAN brings sure results. A part-bran product can be, at best, only partially effective—perhaps not at all. Served in leading hotels and restaurants. Sold by all grocers.

PREDICTS SOUND WAVES AS FIRE EXTINGUISHERS

BOSTON, Nov. 12—(A. P.)—Sound waves may be used to extinguish fires in the future and may be used as a weapon of war, Howard Coonley former president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and present civilian director for the chemical warfare service in the New England district, predicted in an address today before the Women's republican club of Massachusetts.

Mr. Coonley's forecast was made in the course of a lecture on the progress of chemical warfare. Chemical warfare he characterized as humane and he doubted if any international agreement to limit the use of gas would ever be effective.

Mr. Coonley said that the fire department of a great city would know the tone pitch of buildings and that an advanced bracing fork would be used to extinguish fires. "In case of fire the tuning fork would be vibrated and in a few minutes the fire would be extinguished," he said. "That sounds extravagant, but many of you will live to see it done."

Experiments, he said, have already been conducted on this own house. The reason why the vibrations would not shake the house into a mass of ruins, he said, was the adjustment would be just enough out of tune to avert this.

Some people who claim to have seen 21 summers are telling the whole truth.

THE SECRET OF THOSE WONDERFUL ENGLISH COMPLEXIONS

Grandmother's Recipe — Kept Her Youthful Locks and Clear Creamy Complexion with Common Everyday Buttermilk and Cream.

Every woman reader of this paper who prizes a clear creamy white complexion—and snow-white hands and arms will be glad to know that while preparing this old-time recipe at home was always mussy and troublesome they can now obtain at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation called "Howard's" Buttermilk Cream.

The directions are simple and the woman who has hitherto refused to indulge in such so-called "vanities" might well be excused for using Buttermilk Cream, since beauty simply thrives on buttermilk. No pimples or ugly sallowness, no wrinkles or lines around the eyes and mouth, but just that creamy delicious color that makes even a good-looking woman still more beautiful.

You can get it at any pharmacy or department store simply asking for "Howard's" Buttermilk Cream and remember—it's only sold on a positive guarantee of satisfaction or money back. Lee & Osgood Co., can hardly keep it in stock there's such a demand.

STORMY SESSION OF DEMOCRATS

tee was indicated by remarks made. John A. Cornell, of Bridgeport, representing the 22nd district, urged adjournment, characterizing the meeting as a "disgrace to the party." A woman member of the central committee declared that "if this is what we women have stepped into by entering politics, the sooner we step out the better."

Mayor David E. Fitzgerald, of New Haven, who has been mentioned prominently as the probable successor to Chairman Yeomans, and Thomas J. Spellacy, of Hartford, whose name has been put forth as the possible successor of National Committeeman Homer S. Cummings, were attacked by Dr. E. G. Dolan, of Manchester, committeeman from the fourth district, for what he termed as their action in voting against the candidacy of Governor Smith, of New York, for the presidency at the democratic national convention in New York. Mayor Fitzgerald and Mr. Spellacy were prompt in their reply and denounced the Manchester doctor for his accusation, which they denied.

When it became known that the activities of Mayor Fitzgerald and Mr. Spellacy at the national convention in New York were to be under fire at the meeting today a hurry call was sent to the printers for a sufficient number of copies of the report of the secretary of the Connecticut delegation to the national convention giving the full details of the 103 ballots cast there. These were distributed to those present at the meeting.

The arguments today centered around statements published in Hartford on Friday, November 6, which quoted one of the members of the democratic state committee from Hartford county as charging at a meeting in Hartford that Mr. Spellacy and Mayor Fitzgerald had entered into a promise with the McAdoo forces at the national convention that they would vote for McAdoo in return for a campaign contribution here in 1922 from Thomas M. Chadburn, of New Work city.

Mr. Spellacy replied to this charge at considerable length.

"There are times," he declared, "when one must speak out on personal affairs. I have no desire to disturb the harmony in this party which has had such a long and honorable career and which has seen the rise and fall of every political party, save one. Any person at any time has a right to oppose me for election to any office for any reason to all or for no reason. But I insist that whoever does oppose me must adhere to the truth."

Reading the statement issued in Hartford in which it was alleged that a check received from Thomas M. Chadburn, of New York, for the campaign of 1922, when Mr. Spellacy was running for United States senator and Mr. Fitzgerald for governor of the state, had influenced these two men to vote for McAdoo at New York, Mr. Spellacy replied:

"The campaign of 1922 was amply financed. It was by no means a poverty campaign. Money came in by the thousands and tens of thousands. J. P. Garvin, of New York sent $10,000, Fred Gimble sent $1,000, Bamberger gave $1,000, Dunnenfass gave $1,000, Mr. Slepack, who formerly lived here in New Haven, sent $1,000, and much more came in from New York. I could go on down the list and cite you funds which came into the campaign fund from New York. But not one dollar, not one cent ever came from this man Chadburn. Why I didn't even know the man. I have talked to members who attended this meeting (in Hartford.) Every member except one who was there is present here today at this gathering. Those who were there and I have talked to, say no such statement was made at the meeting. That I ever accepted money from this man, or that any of the votes were swayed is an absolute falsehood. It is a state's prison offense. Under the corrupt practices act, no promise can be made for any campaign contribution. No campaign fund can be accepted without its being reported to the secretary of state.

"If the man who made that charge at the meeting is man enough to get up and furnish proof, here is the place and this is the time to produce it."

Mr. Spellacy then spoke of his activities at the New York convention. He declared he voted for Governor Smith 96 times out of the 103 ballots cast, and attended every conference. He explained that the first vote was given as a complimentary vote to Governor Brown, of Vermont, who had been responsible for the democratic victory in that state.

"Mr. Cummings," he said, "was pledged to McAdoo. Can we afford to drive such men out? It was agreed to vote six times for McAdoo but at no time should there be a majority. We did that and 93 times thereafter we voted for Al Smith. When it was shown that Al Smith was out of it and after the state of New York had switched its vote, we voted for Underwood.

"I have been a friend of Al Smith for years. I contributed to his campaign fund for governor back in 1918 and have aided him in every campaign since that time down to the recent campaign when he was out for Walker. Do not think that John W. Davis would have selected me as eastern campaign manager in the presidential campaign if he had not communicated with Al Smith as to his wishes. Do you think he would have placed an enemy of Al Smith in that position?

"I have carried on correspondence with Governor Smith for a long time and each letter is begun with a 'dear Tom,' and contain other terms of affection and endearment."

At another point in his remarks, Mr. Spellacy declared it had been said that he had not given Hamilton Holt his whole-hearted support in the latter's campaign for the United States senatorship. He went on to explain that he had urged Governor Smith to write a letter furthering the candidacy of Mr. Holt. He said he had a large package of letters, telegrams and other documents which supported his statements relative to his great friendship for Al Smith.

"This whole thing," he continued, "is a campaign on the part of certain ones to rise to power by getting on the band wagon of Al Smith."

Dr. Dolan, of Manchester, again took the floor at the conclusion of Mr. Spellacy's address.

"You all know who is being attacked," he said. "I am neither a lawyer, nor a public speaker. This whole thing is a question of veracity and truth. Two weeks prior to the New York convention I had invitation to dinner with Franklin D. Roosevelt, Herbert Slope, Joe Johnson, Judge Brosner, Mr. Roosevelt, his secretary and myself were there. After some other talk we discussed the situation in Connecticut."

Later, he said, he went to the Cummings dinner and to a conference in the Hotel McAlpin where he said a suggestion was made by "three Connecticut leaders," that the delegation be solidified and unified. It was the plan, he said, to vote ten at the beginning for Smith "to satisfy the Connecticut democracy" and then to go to McAdoo. Mayor Kinsella, he said, objected as did he and some of the women in the convention delegation. He referred to what he characterized as the "silly proposition" which was later suggested about voting for Governor Brown.

Dr. Dolan then told of what he called efforts to block Connecticut yielding to the New York delegation in the roll call of states for the nomination of Al Smith. He said that when he broached the subject of yielding he was told not to insult the national committee through whom the leaders said, the offer would be made. He was told later, he said, that for three days before the convention efforts had been made to find Mr. Cummings to have him notify the New York delegation of Connecticut's willingness to yield.

"Mr. Spellacy," he continued, "asked the man to stand on his feet. I have never been called a coward and I have never backed water."

He admitted that at the meeting in question he did say "why wasn't the check from Mr. Chadburn in the 1922 campaign filed with the secretary of state," and that he had received the reply from someone at the meeting that it wasn't necessary to file it in Connecticut as it had been made in New York.

"For thirty years the democratic party has had no real victory in Connecticut. The Baldwin victories were not because, but in spite of party leaders. The party has degenerated and degenerated until today we are about in the same class as the socialist party. There are plenty of democrats out there in the state. They are only waiting for the proper sort of leadership."

When Dr. Dolan had taken his seat, Mr. Spellacy immediately gained the floor.

"I want to ask the gentleman from Manchester one question," he said. "Do you intend to charge——"

"I have rested my case," interrupted Dr. Dolan. "I rest my case with the democrats of Connecticut."

"If you openly charge me with this you give me a chance to deny the charge," said Mr. Spellacy. "I can make you prove it in court."

Mayor Fitzgerald, gaining the floor, vigorously denied the charges alleged to have been made.

"I don't know Chadburn," he said, "and took no money from him in any campaign". Later he declared that he would "make somebody bite the dirt."

"The doctor has mentioned Mr. Roosevelt," he continued. "I would like to have Mr. Roosevelt here right now to tell something. We needed political strategy there to put Al Smith across but we couldn't put it into the doctor's head."

As to the charges that the "three leaders" had balked the move to have Connecticut yield to New York, he said that when Mr. Dolan made the suggestion, the Smith forces were not ready for the move. After a further vigorous attack on Dr. Dolan, Mayor Fitzgerald said that he believed that Dr. Dolan was earnest enough and perhaps meant well but that he had gone astray in his efforts.

Mrs. Fletcher, of Hartford explained that she was the one who had answered Dr. Dolan when he asked about the Chadburn check. She said she had told him that it had been filed in New York, but that she was busy at the time he asked her, and had not looked the matter up. Later she found, she said, that the Chadburn contribution was not in that campaign at all. In fact, she continued, Chadburn had declined to make a donation in the 1922 campaign, explaining that he had given so much in New York that he didn't feel he could contribute in Connecticut.

Several vacancies were filled at the meeting. James C. Dillon, was appointed to the vacancy in the second district caused by the death of his father. James J. Walsh was named to succeed Mayor King in Meriden who resigned. The appointments of successors to Mrs. Carolyn Ruuts-Rees and Miss Adelle Murray, both resigned were deferred until later.

Committees will be appointed by Chairman Yeomans to prepare resolutions on the death of Committeeman Dillon of Hartford and Mrs. Josephine Cassidy of Bridgeport.

THE SILENT MAN

The silent man but seldom feels
Regret for what he's said.
He is not prone to rushing in
Where angels fear to tread.
He ponders thoughtfully before
He speaks to old or young,
And carefully he always keeps
A watch upon his tongue.

The silent man but seldom gets Into an argument;
He listens to what others say,
Refraining from dissent.
And so his standing's very high
In other people's eyes,
For every fellow thinks that those Who take his word are wise.

The silent man is popular,
He's certain to have friends
And there is bound to be much grief
When his life's journey ends,
Some day he'll have a monument—
At least a marble slab
Inscribed: "Here lies a worthy man,
Who lacked the gift of gab!"

Sails Tried in Ploughing

BRIGHLINGSEA, England, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Sails were introduced as an aid to ploughing in a soil tiller's match near this little seaside resort of which many of its residents are yachtsmen as well as farmers. The wind at times aided the horses in dragging the plough along but at other times puffs blew the implements to one side and spoiled a straight furrow which hindered the contestant's chance of winning first prize. Men as well as women participated in the contest, which the judge decided was a great success, but thought there was little possibility of sails ever putting horses or motors out of business when it comes to ploughing.

WEST VIRGINIA TO DEDICATE ITS NEW $600,000 STADIUM

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 12.—(AP)—With Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania and Governor Gore of West Virginia heading groups of distinguished spectators from two states, West Virginia University will dedicate its new $600,000 Mountaineer Stadium, November 14. Penn state will oppose West Virginia in the gridiron clash.

The stadium was built from funds contributed by more than 7,500 West Virginians. It is horseshoe shaped and at present will seat 33,000. Erection of an upper tier would increase the seating capacity to 50,000, and the building of another section at the end would make the capacity 75,000 or 80,000.

James M. Lewis, aged recluse, who was found dead in bed at his home 23 Rosemary street, by the police yesterday, it was revealed today had $122.75 secreted about the place. This amount was found yesterday, but a further search of the place today did not result in additional money being found. The money has been turned over to Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman.

Charles Leffingwell, 17, residing on South road, Poquonoc, was taken into custody at his home this morning by state police charged with burglary. He was taken to jail in default of bail to await trial in the Groton town court next Monday morning.

Leffingwell, who is on probation from the state school for boys at Meriden, it is alleged, gained entrance to the home of Mrs. Bertha Utley, Benham road, Groton, last Sunday evening by means of a skeleton key. Benham ransacked the house, it is claimed, stealing $100 and taking two revolvers, one a 32 calibre and the other a 38 calibre. Three other youths, all minors were arrested Tuesday, as being implicated in the robbery and are now in custody of Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield.

An automobile owned by Harold Mc Grath, 278 Crystal avenue, was stolen last evening from that avenue, where it had been parked. McGrath reported the theft to the police and a request was made of the state police and the authorities of Norwich, Westerly, New Haven and Hartford to be on the lookout for the stolen machine. This afternoon the car was recovered when the Cranston, R. I., police notified the local police that the car had been found abandoned there. McGrath went to Cranston later and operated the car back to New London.

Viola Mayo, the wife of Lonnie Brewer, will receive her mail at the county jail until after the holidays have passed for she went there from the police court this morning to serve 60 days and to work out costs of more than $20. That means a stay of more than 60 days. Viola told the court that she had been endeavoring to get on the waiter wagon, but she did not succeed. "I'll help you," said Judge Prince. Viola was in court on the 3rd inst., and then made all sorts of promises as to her determination to abstain from the use of intoxicating liquor. She was shown leniency then and while she was sentenced to jail for ten days, the execution of judgment was suspended. After last midnight Viola was drunk again—so drunk that she couldn't get her legs under her so that she could stand upon them. She was in the rear of the former Soltz building on North Bank street where she was so helpless that neighbors could not distinguish whether she was dead or sleeping. The police officer was notified and Officer Philopena demonstrated that Viola was so weak-kneed and so dizzy headed that she was helpless. He took her into custody. Today the woman confessed that she was unable to refrain from drink. Viola's record shows some twenty arrests.

A meeting of the advisory board of the Diocesan Bureau of Social service held this week in the home in Jay street with Frank L. McGuire presiding. Rev. Matthew J. Judge of Hartford was the guest of honor. Classes conducted by the bureau are progressing splendidly. Mrs. Clarence A. Carr is in charge of a children's sewing circle of 65, and Miss Julia O'Sullivan of Federal street is instructor of a class of eight adults in advanced sewing. The class in lip reading, in charge of Mrs. Rose Ashure of East Lyme, is proving a decided success.

Fully 40 representatives from the various churches, clubs and organizations of the city met in Bulkeley auditorium this week to discuss plans for a community chorus which will be under the direction of Benjamin Knox of Hartford, well known singer. The plan was prompted by Mrs. Isaac Andrews of Huntington street and a skeleton organization was formed of which Councilman James A. May was made chairman, Miss Gladys Pettigrew secretary, Miss Dorothy Hand, chairman of publicity, assisted by Mrs. Lewis J. Phillips, Mrs. Ira L. Avery of Groton, Miss Gladys Pettigrew, Miss Flora Gardner and Miss Edith Simpson. The plan is to raise the membership to 100 before the next meeting. There will be a series of 12 rehearsals followed by a community concert. The publicity committee will soon start a drive for making New London a singing town.

The New London police this evening were requested by the New Haven police to be on the lookout for an automobile, which was stolen from a street of the latter city early tonight. The car is a Ford coupe and is owned by the Claflin Construction Co., New York. The machine is equipped with both New York and Connecticut registration and valuable papers were in a case in the machine.

Mrs. Wateryia Wieczorek, 10 Sixth street, was arrested this evening by Patrolmen John Foley and Frank Philopena charged with breach of the peace. The woman was released upon providing a surety on her bond of $100 for her appearance in the police court tomorrow morning in Josefa Kupis.

The arrest of the woman was the result of Mrs. Wieczorek's daughter, Julia Welcsorek, 16, lodging complaint with Policewoman Jane Cassidy, the girl declaring that her mother had unmercifully beaten her without just cause or provocation. Not only did the girl allege that her mother had beat her, but she declared that the beatings had become a sort of regular events, the last of which occurred Tuesday. When Policewoman Cassidy heard the girl's story of the alleged beating at the hands of the mother the girl was taken to the office of Acting Prosecuting Attorney Perry J. Hollandersky, to whom the narratives of the beatings were related. The official immediately issued a warrant and it was given to Patrolman Ernest Opperman to serve, but that officer was unable to locate Mrs. Wieczorek. Tonight Patrolman John Foley ascertained that the woman was at home and accompanied by Patrolman Philonena the two officers went to the Weiczorek home and placed the accused under arrest.

John Quinn, 690 Bank street, dispenser of alcoholic drinks a long time and who slashed his throat with a razor at the court house Tuesday is suffering no ill effects from his attempt at self destruction and within a few days the wound will be healed.

The work of raising the U. S. S. S1 which was rammed off Block Island on the night on Sept. 25 by the Savannah liner City of Rome, is progressing as rapidly as weather conditions will permit, but it will be at least a week or 10 days before the undersea craft is brought to the surface. When the submarine is floated the craft will be taken to Brooklyn navy yard and the bodies found will be identified and then shipped to their homes or homes of relatives. Of the 33 lives lost, there are still 23 officers and sailors to be accounted for.

Mrs. Robert A. T. Sibbod, Masonic street, was in Providence today where she attended Southern New England conference of social service.

The condition of Ernest Perrelli, 16 Jefferson avenue, who was struck by an automobile, owned and operated by Carl H. Briggs, 343 Main street, last Saturday evening at the junction of Bank and Truman streets is reported this evening as being slightly improved at Lawrence-Memorial associated hospital, although the victim has not been removed from the danger list. The improvement is indicative of the victim's ultimate recovery. Perrelli was engaged to be married to a New London young lady and but for the untimely accident he would have been married next month.

A regular meeting of Hiawatha Council, Daughters of Pocohontas, was held this evening in Pequot lodge rooms and was attended by a representative number of members. Routine business was transacted.

The court martial of the crew of the United States Coast Guard patrol boat, 187, charged with receiving and distributing liquor has started at the local sectional base, [illegible] pier and will last several days. The session is being held in chambers.

It is altered by two Filipinos, members of the crew of the patrol boat, who were arrested on State street several weeks ago by State Police Officer Henry J. Albright and who had liquor in their possession, several quarts, that the liquor was given them by the master of the patrol boat and that the liquor originally came from a rum-runner off Block Island and was given the skipper of the coast guard craft.

JOHN ULOOCK, DESERTER, SLIPS AWAY FROM GUARD

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 12—John Ulock, a military prisoner, made his escape from a guard in this city this afternoon and probably has made a getaway, for the prisoner was not located, although the police and a military guard scoured the city for Ulock.

Ulock was a private at Fort Wright, Fishers Island, and deserted several weeks ago. He was taken recently at Boston and today Private Douglass Patterson, Fort Wright, who had been sent to Boston to take charge of Ulock, returned to New London with with the prisoner. The guard and the prisoner had passed through North Bank street, but when John street, leading to the government pier, where the prisoner was to be placed aboard a transport to be returned to the island fort was reached, Ulock suddenly bolted and running through John street, ran through Potter street and escaped. Patterson at once reported the escape of the prisoner at the police station. Ulock is described as being 18, five feet, seven inches in height, light hair and blue eyes. He wore an olive gray army uniform.

EAST LYME GROCER TOOK MARKED BILLS FOR HOOCH

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 12—Ruby Parker of East Lyme, where he has been a grocery dealer and feed merchant many years, is under arrest for the fifth time for the sale unlawfully of intoxicating liquor. He was nabbed last night by State Policemen Fred Caron and Bernard Kennerson, though the officers were obliged to lie on their stomachs in concealment while the trick that put Parker in their clutches was pulled off. Parker was caught with the time-honored scheme of marked money, so there isn't any doubt of his conviction in the minds of the police officers. Messrs Caron and Kennerson said they were convinced that Parker was selling booze, and they were just as positive that he would not sell to them. So they solicited the aid of Constable Edward Sladden, giving him two bills that bore in the corners the initials of the officers. With these Mr. Sladden went to Parker and asked for a quart of whiskey. He was supplied with hooch and for it he paid $3. As soon as the deal was completed the officers went into the Parker place and there they recovered the marked bill, giving him another banknote for it. They learned that Parker had a short time before bought a coon skin from a neighbor and for it he had paid a dollar. The seller of the skin was found and from him the second marked bill was secured with assurance that he would appear in court Friday evening when Parker is to be presented before Justice Watrous and testify as to whose the bill came from.

Parker has been arrested for his offenses so often and has fought the law so fiercely that the session of the court Friday evening will be held with all the people present who can find a place in the town hall. Parker has, according to the officers, served a jail term for his offenses. They believe he will serve another one on his fifth arraignment.

DR. JOHN CHAMPLIN HEADS COMMISSION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Nov. 12.—John Champlin, M. D., of Westerly, was elected chairman of the Rhode Island State Public Welfare commission Thursday at a regular meeting of the board, at the home of Mrs. Charlotte M. Miller, a commission member who resides at one of the La Forge cottages in Newport.

Robert C. N. Monahan of Pawtucket, chairman for the past four years had tendered his resignation as chairman and although he continued a member of the board of which he has been a member for eight years, the condition of his health was the cause of his retirement from the chair.

Dr. Champlin was the vice chairman to which office Mrs. Pearl M. T. Remington of East Providence was elected.

At the meeting of this commission one of the important of the numerous Rhode Island commissions, dinner was served and the session was attended by practically the entire membership.

Dr. Champlin resides at 3 Granite street, here, and has practiced medicine for many years, having a Watch Hill office at his seashore cottage during the summer. He is the president and general manager of the Westerly Automatic Telephone Co., and active on the staff of the Westerly hospital.

ROBERT DAUGHERTY STRUCK WHEN DERRICK BOOM FALLS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 12—Robert Daugherty, about 35, employed as a laborer by the Clark Construction company, of Waterbury, which concern is erecting the new theatre on the Mercer site, State street, was perhaps fatally injured this afternoon when he was caught beneath a falling derrick boom. He sustained a fractured spine and that he was not killed outright was undoubtedly due to the fact that the boom was prevented from falling to the ground by landing on a pile of lumber. The man is now a patient at Lawrence hospital. He has a sister, with whom he resides, Mrs. Edward Heffernan, 38 Williams street. Daugherty, with a score of other laborers, was at work about 2:30 o'clock and when the derrick boom was hoisted to lift a weighty quantity of building material, the boom suddenly collapsed. Daugherty was in the path of the falling boom and was unable to get from under it, being struck across the back and forced to the ground. The boom landed on a three foot pile of lumber and but for the lumber being in the position to hold up the boom, Daugherty would probably have been crushed to death. He was given emergency medical treatment and then rushed to the hospital.

INJURED PARTIES SHOW IMPROVEMENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 12.—The condition of Mrs. Urban Homer of Riverside, R. I., injured Wednesday afternoon in the automobile collision near Dunn's Corners, and taken to the Westerly hospital, was reported on Thursday night as fairly comfortable. Following the taking of an X-ray picture it was found that she had sustained a fractured pelvic. At 1.12 Thursday morning Mrs. Homer gave birth to a child at the hospital that lived until 4 o'clock and then died from premature birth.

Charles Homer, her six year old son, also at the hospital, suffering injuries and a possible concussion of the brain and skull fracture, was improved late Thursday and if it continues so he will be discharged from the hospital in a few days.

Antonio Cappreccio, the driver of the truck is suffering a cracked rib, according to Dr. Henry Johnson, who attended him.

BANKRUPTCY ASSIGNMENTS INCREASE IN NUMBER

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 12—It was declared today that there had been more assignments in bankruptcy in New London in six months than had occurred here in six years. A cause for this sort of thing was sought for and perhaps it will be found. A certain class of tradesmen have sought to secure a settlement of their debts on a basis of paying 25 cents on the dollar. If that plan was not acceptable the debtors are declared to have gone into bankruptcy. Now a study of the law is being made by creditors for their protection, they say.

TESTIMONY OF RHINELANDER IN HIS ANNULMENT SUIT

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 12—(A. P.—Nov. 12—(A. P.)—Leonard Kip Rhinelander would never have married Alice Beatrice Jones if he had known that her father was a negro and that she was not of Spanish extraction as she assured him.

This was the testimony today of the scion of an old and wealthy family in his suit to gain annulment of marriage to the daughter of a negro cabman. The suit is based on the allegation that the defendant deceived him into believing her white.

"If you had known that she was of colored blood, would you have married her?" Rhinelander was asked.

"Absolutely not," he answered, displaying for the first time a vigor that had been absent throughout his testimony.

Speaking with the stammer that was characterized his thus far, Young Rhinelander related how he had discussed her race with Alice when he learned that her oldest sister, Emily, had married a negro butler. She told him, he said, that the Jones family was English, of Spanish extraction and that they had never seen a negro until they took a walk on Fifth avenue in New York after their arrival from England. Emily had been banished from the Jones house for two years because of her marriage to the negro, Rhinelander said he was told.

He had married her, knowing the humble 'social' position of the Jones family, he testified, adding that he had loved her deeply. It was only when he saw her birth certificate, describing her as "black" that he believed she was a negress he testified. He left her after the marriage, he said, when doubt as to her race began to come upon him.

Most of the day was spent in reading Alice's letters to Leonard over the objectio not her counsel, Lee Parsons Davis, who said there was no reason to fill the record with the "filthy" passages. Justice Morschauser overruled him, and Mr. Davis then began to read portions of the letters himself, objecting to the omission of certain passages by Isaac N. Mills, counsel for the plaintiffs.

"Don't read only the dirty parts," he said, "give her credit for some nice thoughts," he remarked as he read portions of letters expressing concern over Young Rhinelander's schooling and future.

One letter expressed interest in when he would come of age. Another said: "I suppose I will have to wait as long as you are not independent. When you are you will have to be more careful of your money."

Another: "I had no idea you loved me. I thought that for both of us it was only a pastime. Do you think you could ever love anyone like you love me."

Of the more than 460 letters Young Rhinelander received from his wife, 37 were read today. A batch of letters written by him to her are in their possession of Mr. Davis and he has threatened to read them and "wreck this boy" if necessary. Sixty of Alice's letters, reported to have vanished yesterday, were found today among other papers.

During the latter part of the day Mrs. Rhinelander buried her face in her coat and at times wept. Her mother also appeared on the verge of breaking into tears.

HEAVY DEATH TOLL IN WRECK ON PENN. ROAD

PLAINSBORO, N. J., Nov. 13—(A. P.)—Speeding through a dense fog that blanketed this tiny farming hamlet of a few hundred souls, not far from the university town of Princeton, the Pennsylvania railroad's mercantile express from St. Louis early today crashed into the rear sleeping car of an express train from Washington, and exacted a large toll of dead and injured. Both trains were bound for New York.

Estimates of the dead ranged from nine to thirteen and the injured from thirty one to forty. Some of the injured may die. The exact number of dead may not be known until the wreckage is cleared, which may not be until tomorrow morning. All night wrecking crews worked slowly in a pouring rain under the glare of flickering lights, while curious crowds stood nearby watching the operations. State troopers and railroad police guarded the tangled wreckage.

One report was that engine trouble had developed in the locomotive causing the necessity of proceeding cautiously. Another was that it was several minutes ahead of schedule, that it had come to a dead stop and that the flagman had gone ahead to learn if the St. Louis train had passed the point. There were no indications to the contrary. The flagman had just boarded the Washington train and it again got under steam when the St. Louis train, speeding at a rate said to have been 55 miles an hour, crashed into the rear car of the Washington express.

MRS. LANSDOWNE WITNESS IN MITCHELL COURTMARTIAL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—(A. P.)—Margaret Ross Lansdown testified today before the Mitchell courtmartial that Captain Paul Foley, Judge advocate of the Shenandoah court of inquiry, had submitted to her a prepared statement which she was to adopt as her testimony before the navy court inquiry into the disaster which cost her husband, Commander Zachary Lansdowne, his life.

She was one of three witnesses called to support charges made by Colonel William Mitchell which led to his trial before the military tribunal on specifications citing conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline. The Foley incident came as a surprise and was intended to substantiate Colonel Mitchell's declaration that a navy officer endeavored to have Mrs. Lansdowne give the naval court "false testimony" and retract her former statement before that tribunal.

Mrs. Lansdowne, however, was not interrogated directly as to the motive Captain Foley had in mind when he sent her the statement nor did she testify that it constituted an attempt on his part to have her give false testimony. She did tell the court that the statement falsely represented her attitude on the Shenandoah disaster and was an "insult" to her husband's memory.

Under cross-examination by the court, the witness reluctantly admitted that she received Captain Foley's statement from Mrs. George W. Steele, Jr., wife of the commandant of the Lakehurst air station and an intimate friend. She testified that it bore no signature, not even a mark to show that it came from the navy department, and that she had destroyed the paper.

RECOVERY IN MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 12—(By the Associated Press)—Stock prices made spirited recovery from recent weakness at the opening of today's market, but sold off from their earlier high levels in the afternoon as professional traders reduced commitments to await developments after the close of the market. These proved to be extremely favorable, as the New York Federal Reserve bank announced that its rediscount rate was unchanged, and the directors of the General Motors corporation declared an extra cash dividend of $5 on the common or $1 more than was generally expected earlier in the day.

Closing quotations were generally one to two points higher, although there were a number of gains substantially in excess of these figures and a sprinkling of losses ranging from fractions to two points. The average of 20 leading railroad stocks established another new record high. Trading started off at a fast pace, with the ticker 10 or 12 minutes behind the market towards the end of the first hour, but it slowed up perceptibly in the later trading. Total sales were 2,860,800, or nearly a million below those in Tuesday's record-breaking session.

Speculative interest centered largely in the motors, fluctuations in which were rather erratic. General Motors opened 5 3-4 points higher at 145, advanced to 145 3-4, broke to 136 and then rallied to 139 3-4. Hudson closed 6 1-4 points higher at 118 1-2 after fluctuating between 115 and 120 1-4. Mack Trucks showed a similar net gain at 222 3-4 after having sold as high as 226. White and Packard each closed a point higher, the last named touching a new high record for the year at 48 1-2.

Du Pont was the spectacular individual performer, opening 23 points higher at 270, climbing to a new high record for all time at 271 1-4 and then breaking to 248. Nash Motors soared 16 points to 450 and Louse-Wiles Biscuit jumped 15 to 125, but the turnover in each case was small.

U. S. Rubber common, which is expected to resume dividends shortly after a lapse of over four years, was bid up 7 1-2 points to 94, the highest price since 1920. New peak prices also were attained by American Brake Shoe and Foundry, American Ice, American International, American Sugar Refining, California Packing, International Combustion Engineering, May Department Stores, Mid-Continent Petroleum, Railway Steel Spring, Schulte Stores and Utah Copper.

Rails were under steady action although the failure of the Southern Pacific to increase its dividend caused disappointment in some quarters. Baltimore and Ohio, Northern Pacific and Lehigh Valley were bid up to new maximum quotations while New York Central, Illinois Central, "Nickel Plate" and Seaboard Air Line closed a point or so higher.

U. S. Steel common showed a net gain of one point at 133 3-4 on buying apparently influenced by reports of a further improvement in trade conditions. Some of the other strong spots in the industrial list were Adams Express, American Safety Razor, the Commercial Solvents issues, Detroit Edison, Federal Light and Traction, General Electric, International Business Machines, McCrory Stores, Otis Elevator, Remington Typewriter, Sloss-Sheffield Steel, United Drug, Woolworth and Youngstown Sheet and Tube, all up 3 to 6 1-2 points.

Call money renewed at 4 1-2 per cent., and held steady at that figure. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Sharp ten point rallies in Italian and French currencies on the announcement that an agreement had been reached for the funding of the Italian debt, was the feature of the firm foreign exchange market. French francs were quoted around 4.07 cents and Italian lire just under that figure. Demand sterling ruled slightly higher around $4.84 3-4, and Norwegian and Danish krone made substantial recoveries from yesterday's weakness.

NORWICH TOWN

Rev. George N. Edwards of Walla Walla, Washington, one of the three leading field workers of the Sunday School Extension society, is to give an address at the First Congregational church Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. The several Congregational churches of Norwich have been invited to unite with the Norwich Town church for this meeting, which is under the auspices of the Missionary committee of the Young People's Christian Endeavor society. The stewardship superintendent, Ralph H. Marah, will preside at the meeting.

Rev. Mr. Edwards' work in Washington, Oregon and Idaho, affects city suburbs, also frontier fields and migrant workers in lumber camps, as well as fisheries and fruit growing districts. It is a type of work of exceptional interest in fields quite new to people in this vicinity.

Rev. Mr. Edwards has been serving on the missionary team in Maine, and will be in Connecticut for a short period only. He is one of the most gifted speakers of this denomination, as recommended by the Woman's Congregational Home Missionary union, of Connecticut.

The beautiful yellow chrysanthemums used in the decorations on the platform at the First Congregational church, at a recent gathering, were distributed among several members of the parish who are either ill or shutins due to advanced years.

Mrs. Robert Boisson, of East Town street, motored to Hartford Wednesday to see Miss Christine Bacheler's exhibition of sketches and paintings done during a year and a half spent in France. Mrs. Boisson had as her guests Miss M. Bacheler, Miss Anna L. Ely and Mrs. Edith Wilson. While there they met Mrs. Budiong, of Providence, who was at the exhibition in the Athanaeum, having come with her pastor, Rev. Theodore Bacheler and his wife.

The Neighborhood Whist club was pleasantly entertained Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin L. Kennedy, of Town street. Four tables were in play. Mrs. Joseph Boylan and John Olsen won first prizes. The consolation awards went to Mrs. John Hoppman and Miss Rose Matassa, the latter substituting for a gentleman. At the conclusion of play there was a social hour during which the hostess served sandwiches, cake and coffee.

Mrs. Mary Gaffney and daughter Miss Marjory Gaffney, of Danielson, who motored to Norwich Wednesday, were callers during the afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin L. Kennedy.

There is to be a religious service at Scotland Road hall, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, under the auspices of Scotland Road Christian Endeavor society. Clyde M. Beebe of East Town street will conduct the service.

A pleasant surprise was given Mrs. Clementine Lane, a member of the Bacheler family of East Town street, Wednesday afternoon, in observance of Armistice day, forty children comprising both grades of Miss Bessie M. Grant's room at Town Street school, appeared on the lawn in front of the house and sang patriotic songs, and gave the salute to the flag. The children were accompanied by their teacher.

LIONS CLUB VOTES APPROVAL OF COMMUNITY CHEST FOR NORWICH

The community chest was the chief topic of discussion at the weekly meeting of the Norwich Lions club Thursday noon at the Wauregan hotel. President William A. Anderson presided at the meeting which had a good attendance. David Kerr acted as song leader. As a tribute of respect to those who were killed or died in the world war, the club stood at attention for one minute.

Tom Savard was awarded the attendance contest prize, an ash tray donated by Abner Schwartz. The community chest movement came in for considerable discussion and the club went on record as endorsing the community chest idea for Norwich.

John J. O'Rourke, secretary of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce, was present as a guest and spoke for the chamber relative to the chamber's efforts to arouse civic pride and to awaken civic spirit among the people of Norwich; through the slogan and essay contest now being conducted by the chamber. Mr. O'Rourke urged the club members to send in slogans. He announced that the chamber is to hold a Thanksgiving dinner at the Wauregan hotel on the evening of November 23rd with prominent speakers who are to relate what Norwich has to be thankful for, with the idea of arousing civic pride.

On behalf of the club Lion Max Hanover presented President Anderson the gift of a handsome sweater, scarf and pair of stockings in honor of Mr. Anderson's birthday. The meeting closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

CAN PRESENT HEALTH FROM MANY ANGLES

This week's health bulletin issued by the state department of health says: One day of American education week has been designated "Health Education Day." This gives communities a splendid opportunity to arouse an interest in health by presenting health from its many angles to both children and adults.

For those who are planning special programs at this time it is announced that some health material is available from the state department of health.

New attractive child health posters are ready to be loaned for such special days, or for a week or two where they may form a health background in school room or health center.

Slides on every phase of health are available to interest children, mothers, professional or lay groups. Calls for these should come in early as there are not many duplicates.

There is no better way to get the health message over to a mixed group than by moving picture films. Some thirty-four of these are ready for distribution. That they are popular is shown by the fact that they are in constant demand in the state and people view them with enthusiasm whenever they make their appearance.

Members of the staff are ready to give health talks. These are available for any group, mother's clubs, granges, parent and teacher associations, schools and other community organizations. These may be illustrated, or not, as desired.

Many popular health leaflets are available for general distribution.

A list of health plays has been compiled and one copy of each is on file. Lists will be sent on request. Plays will be sent for review.

Further information in regard to illustrative material is given in our "Health Service Bulletin" and "Catalogue of Slides" both of which are available on request.

FLORIDA CAMPERS' SCHOOL MEETS AN EMERGENCY

A resident of Lebanon, Mrs. Leander Livermore has a winter home in the Florida city, Kissimee, from which the following dispatch was issued Thursday:

Nothing dismayed because local schools were filled to overflowing by the children of regular residents, "tin-can tourists" encamped here have instituted their own school from curriculum to campus.

Following a mass meeting attended by some 200 of the demi-bourgeoisie of the motoring public, most of whom are here as a result of the Florida land boom, the "tin canners" decided to erect their own building, employ their own teachers and prescribe their own course of study according to the recommendations of a school board of their own election.

When Miss Isabelle Upham, employed to teach the school, which is housed in a temporary building thrown up by carpenters who are members of the colony, rang the bell for the opening session yesterday nineteen boys and girls ranging from first to eighth grades, responded.

L. D. Modgin, owner of the tourist camp, is chairman of the "board of education."

UPSET FOLLOWS CRASH NEAR PARK CHURCH CORNER

Five Willimantic people fortunately escaped injury when the machine they were riding in, a Dodge sedan, driven by Ernest Bellavance of 33 Jackson street, upset near Chelsea Parade early Thursday evening after colliding with a Chrysler sedan, owned and operated by Charles P. Wilbur of No. 50 Philips street, New London. The Dodge sedan was headed north up Broadway and the New London machine was being driven in a southerly direction when the two machines came together near Park church. Both machines were near the middle of the road at the time of the crash.

It is said that the Willimantic machine had come up behind a horse and wagon and pulled out to the left in order to pass the wagon just as the New London machine reached the same spot. The Willimantic sedan shot across the street and over the trolley tracks to the left and then upset on its right side on the sidewalk at Chelsea Parade.

The Chrysler was put out of commission. Both front tires were flat and the steering gear was twisted. The Dodge sedan was considerably damaged. It is owned by Herman Brettschneider of No. 13 Railroad street, Willimantic and is a public service car, bearing the registration number, O-683. The registration number on the Chrysler is L-885.

TWO FOR SUPERIOR COURT FROM SAYBROOK CRASH

Daniel Sheehan of New London, and Arthur Gromko, of this city were bound over to the next term of the superior court, upon the conclusion Wednesday afternoon at Saybrook of the hearing of charges growing out of actions of the two young men on Tuesday night. On that night in an automobile alleged to have been taken without the permission of its owner, Joshua Sands, of Lyme, Sheehan and Gromko crashed into a telephone pole in front of the Le Bon restaurant in Saybrook and then resisted Constable A. C. Beckwith, who attempted to arrest them. The two were later arrested by officers from the Centerbrook police barracks.

Presented before Judge Thomas Kervin Wednesday afternoon Gromko pleaded guilty to driving an automobile without a license and driving while under the influence of liquor and pleaded guilty to the charge of taking an automobile without the owner's permission. Sheehan pleaded not guilty to a similiar charge, and pleaded guilty to being intoxicated and to resisting an officer.

C. E. Holman, of Lyme, employer of the two men, appeared as a character witness for the two men, and went surety on their bonds for appearance before the superior court to which Judge Kervin remanded them.

SECOND MEETING IN SCOUT TRAINING COURSE

Six more men began the Scout leaders training course at its second meeting held Wednesday night at Scout headquarters, when Louis M Crandall of the leadership and training committee gave an inspiring talk in which he emphasized the idea of service, showing that the troop will be very much what the Scout leader makes it.

Assistant Scoutmaster Thomas Baldwin, Jr., gave instruction on the Morse code of signalling, mentioning that two boys in his troop signal daily to each other, one from the top of a tree in Mohegan park and the other from his home, developing high speed in this way.

Edward Preston, assistant Scoutmaster of Troop No. 8, explained the ten tests for second class Scouts, and Scout Executive F. A. Benton explained and demonstrated the treatment for resuscitation in case of apparent drowning, gas and electric shock.

The next meeting will be an outdoor one at Mohegan park at 3 o'clock on Saturday afternoon this week, when the second class outdoor subjects will be demonstrated. The speaker at the next indoor meeting will be Max Hanover.

POWER FROM FUNDY TIDES DESCRIBED AT CONFERENCE

In the power division of the programme of the New England conference which is being held this week at Worcester and which is attended by James L. Case, president of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce, Robert W. Perkins and Lucius Briggs, one of the most highly interesting addresses was that given by Dexter P. Cooper on Thursday afternoon when he described the power plant that is to be built on the Bay of Fundy to utilize the rise and fall of the tides as the source of power.

Mr. Cooper spoke as follows:

The power development which I have the honor to describe to you today is located in Maine near Eastport, approximately 300 miles, by land route, from Boston. This power development contemplates the construction of a modern low head hydro-electric station in Passamaquoddy Bay, an arm of the Bay of Fundy, using the tides as a source of supply of water. These tides rise and fall twice daily and the range varies between 18 and 27 feet every two weeks. Every modern hydro-electric station should possess three inherent qualities, namely, ability to produce power cheaply, conveniently and reliably. It is believed that this project has three salient qualities.

Nature has produced two large bays having a combined area of 150 square miles which can be placed, at a small expense, under complete control. This will be accomplished by the construction of dams and control gates at the entrance of the bays. The topography permits the erection of the powerhouse directly between the two bays. The dams are to be constructed of loose rock with a sand and clay blanket for waterproofing. There will be three dams in all aggregating a total distance of approximately 7,200 feet; the maximum head will be 27 feet, corresponding to the maximum tide, and the greatest depth is 175 feet. The gates will be constructed in locations permitting an easy filling and draining of the bays and the combined area of the filling gates will be approximately 220,000 square feet, while the area of the emptying gates have a correspondingly smaller area due to a longer time which will be available for emptying. All of these gates will be constructed on solid rock. The powerhouse will be similar in design to those now in use on freshwater streams, containing a machinery installation identical to any now installed in our head plants. There is not, then, anything in design of machinery of method of construction of this project which is new or which is not gone through the test of time and experience.

The operation of the plant will be one of keeping the two bays, between which is located the powerhouse, at different levels, draining water from the upper bay through the powerhouse and filling the lower bay. The cycle of the tides permits the refilling of the upper bay twice in twenty-four hours, and the emptying of the lower bay twice in twenty-four hours. Whereas the level between the two bays will fluctuate there will be no time when they will come to the same level and the output of the powerhouse will be continuous throughout the twenty-four hours of the day and is such quantities as will be controlled by the demands of the market. Owing to the regularity of the tides and their known fluctuation, which can be predicted months and years in advance, the reliability of this power is assured.

Between 500,000 and 700,000 H. P.

The amount of power which can be developed will depend largely on market conditions and for the present the plan is to develop between 500,000 and 750,000 horsepower. The annual production of this plant will be approximately three billion kilowatt hours which amount is, according to the 1923 statistics of the U. S. geological survey, seventy-five per cent. of the output of the public utility plants of New England in that year. The cost of this power will be well within range of the cheapest hydro-electric station in this country with the added asset of, positive assurance of output. It will be possible to sell a part of this power in New Brunswick and in Maine, and owing to the location of the project, it will be easy transmission distance to all of New England. The project is located partly in Canada and partly in Maine, it is then, essentially a project affecting the future of all the North Atlantic coast and what will be its influence on New England?

Permit me to treat this question as I would any engineering problem. The known facts are: The people of New England are the product of generations of struggle, sacrifice and success; they live in the best of climates and they have a varied industry which has had decades of experience. New England possesses one of the strongest financial structures in our country; it also possesses good transportation by land and admirable transportation facilities by sea. The geographical location of New England in respect to the commercial routes to the Far East via the Panama Canal, to South America, to Africa and to Europe is as favorable as could be wished for, so that not only are our home markets and sources of supply of raw materials easily available, but those of the world are also at our door. The foregoing are admittedly facts on which an engineer may safely base his computations for the design of his structure for the future of New England. This structure of New England to which I refer will never be completed, for it will be a structure of many additions and changes, and one showing a constant growth and improvement, while the outstanding details of design will be its markets, production and distribution.

Obviously New England cannot confine her future growth to our domestic markets, and this plan contemplates a greatly enlarged participation in the commerce of the world. To accomplish this her statesmen will require her strong support in leading our nation to the realization that it cannot remain apart from taking an active participation in the affairs of the world.

New England Power System.

The two remaining details of the design, industry and distribution, are so closely related that I will discuss them jointly. The industrial growth of New England may expand along the lines of mass production and mass distribution. This will depend greatly on our expansion at home, and in foreign markets, and the competition we will have to meet. Therefore, this detail of our design will have to be so constructed as to be able to cope with the trend of competition. The relation between finance and industry must then be so arranged that they may jointly exploit science to the limit in the application of science to financing, buying, manufacture and distribution. And it is here that we will find that electric power will come to the aid of New England. With an interconnected power system in New England industry will have an unlimited field of expansion, and such a power system will live because it will serve. Its service will not only be cheap but it will be convenient and reliable. Aside from these three direct benefits there are still the indirect benefits which will bring about, among other things, the decentralization of our industries.

The decentralization of our industries will mean better living conditions for our workmen, greater unit production, lower taxation, losses, the cost of distribution of food stuffs and remove the cause of our problems in the large centers of population.

Meet Foreign Competition.

Another indirect result of cheap power in New England will be her ability to compete in foreign markets; for, like Old England her geographical locations in respect to the commercial routes of the world are particularly advantageous, while New England's advantage over Old England will be her electric power system back of her productive ability and the sooner this advantage is established and put into use the better.

Without doubt we have only, thus far, seen but a part of the possibilities of electricity in the industrial world as it is applied to the mechanical phases thereof, the application of electricity to chemistry is also still in its infancy and we may expect much from this field. Because of water transportation, the cheap power of Eastport will be closer to the phosphate mines of Florida than the water power plants of the southern states.

In the design of our structure I have been cognizant of the many controlling factors which will bring about its successful construction and I deplore the idea of introducing electric power as the sole and only solution of this problem. It is, however, a most important factor in the growth of a country as evidenced by its application in our south and in our west, and I am sure that New England will not overlook the opportunity to avail itself of every reliable source of supply and I am doubly certain that New England will foster and promote the distribution of this power throughout its land.

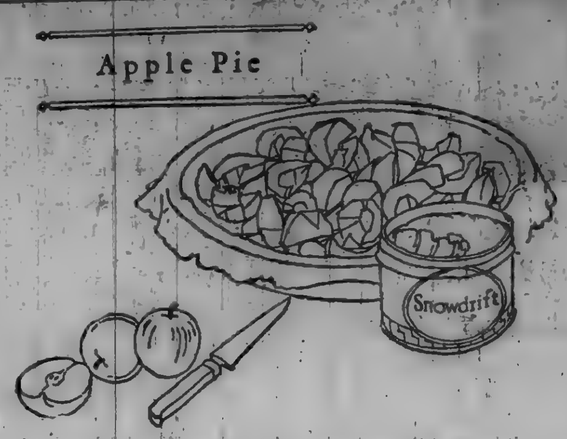
Apple Pie



A good cook who makes her pie crust with Snowdrift and says that Snowdrift is an excellent shortening for pie crust makes her apple pies this way. It's delicious apple pie.

First line a pie-plate with the crust; strew this with a tablespoon of fine dry bread or cracker crumbs and dot with a half tablespoon of Snowdrift. Then fill with the sliced apples which should be mixed with a generous quarter cupful of sugar to each cupful of fruit. Sprinkle with another tablespoon of crumbs, add a teaspoonful of Snowdrift and put on the top crust. Put in a hot oven and as soon as crust has begun to brown a little reduce the heat so that the fruit can cook slowly and thoroughly.

HOOVER COMMENDS OBJECTS OF NEW ENGLAND CONFERENCE

Asserts That New England Must Adapt Itself to the Shifting Currents Caused by the World War—Must Overcome Changes Made in Industrial and Commercial Relations—Dr. Klein Declared That New England Manufacturers Must Prepare to Face a Period of Intensive Competition Abroad During the Next Few Years.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 13.—(A. P.)—A message from Secretary Hoover commending the objects of the New England conference was read at the concluding session of the two day meeting here today by Dr. Julius Klein, director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. Dr. Klein addressed the 700 representatives of agricultural, industrial and commercial bodies attending the conference, assuring them that the foreign trade prospects of New England were brightening. Governor Ralph O. Brewster of Maine, third state executive to appear before the conference, was another speaker at the closing session, which was devoted to discussion of marketing.

Louis Liggett of Boston, presided. A cable was read from Col. F. Vernon Wiley, president of the British federated industries, extending to the conference th ebest wishes of that organization.

Mr. Hoover's letter said in part:

"There is surely no reason for discouragement on the part of the New England states. Aside from all the other economic assets that can be brought to bear in solving the eproblems of New England, she has generations of accumulated skill in administration, in finance, in labor, and in inventive ingenuity. The courage and shrewd foresight of her business folk have formed the heritage of every state in the Union.

"It must be recognized, however, that certain factors have worked against her interests in the last few years. Among these have been the recent shifts in population and changes in industrial and commercial relationships in consequence of the war's effects upon transportation rates, wages, fuel costs and new factory development abroad. Another has been a tendency in certain older, more settled industries toward what might be called absentee administration. There has also been the growth of competitive mass production in certain lines in other parts of th ecountry.

"Most industries in New England are still conducted with units of smaller size than one ordinarily finds in the rest of the country, but to monetize and specialize these units with the higher degree of industrial, administrative and distributive skill that New England possesses is by no means an impossible task.

"A fundamental, comprehensive elimination of economic waste—through improvement of transportation facilities, through more extensive electrification, through a greater simplification and standardization of manufactures, through a more thorough and effective cultivation of foreign markets, through the larger production of these articles that require a relatively high degree of workmanship and sales technique, and through scores of other means—affords ample opportunity for the maintenance of New England's prestige in manufacturing and trading.

"For New England to adapt itself to the shifting currents set in motion by the disruption of the world war undoubtedly requires an intimate study of her economic problems, both as a whole and in an intimate study of her economic problems, both as a whole and in each individual industry. It necessitates a searching inquiry as to what wastes may be eliminated, what markets may be commanded.

"These are problems that can be solved only through co-operation and in establishing such co-operation New England businessmen are rendering splendid service to their whole community—workers, farmers, and commercial interests alike."

Dr. Klein declared that notwithstanding generally favorable conditions in the American export market, New England manufacturers must prepare to face a period of intensive competition abroad during the next few years, and continued:

"Here in New England your export activities have already demonstrated that the products of these northeastern states can penetrate and hold foreign markets. The genius of management is here; you have skilled labor and manufacturing technique of a high order. You produce the kind of goods for which every upward movement of world standards creates a new and always accelerating demand."

Governor Brewster predicted a remarkable renaissance for New England.

"The railroad strangulation of our country which is going on apace," he said, "the cheaper farm lands to be found within our section as compared with the exhaustion of the fre eland of the west, the ceasing of free grazing under the leadership of a New England president, the easing of the irrigation policy, the inevitable increase of railroad rates in the northwest—all of these facts to our judgment are arguing ever more insistently that the great industrial east shall prepare to feed itself from th eagricultural areas which are immediately available."

Mr. Liggett assailed the "dead hand" of trusts and estates which he said exercised a baneful influence upon New England industry. He said also that New England needed a better knowledge of its goods, how they sold, what competition they must meet, and then a determination to meet that competition.

Other speakers were Louis E. Koratein of Boston, whose subject was selling "New England Products in New England;" Arthur G. Staples, of Lewiston, Maine, who spoke on Marketing New England's Recreational Facilities; Frederick A. Carroll, Boston banker, and Major F. F. O'Keefe, of Boston.

TAKING TESTIMONY IN RETRIAL OF OLYMPIA MACRI

LITCHFIELD, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Testimony of John (Sheik) Leonard, until recently a resident of Wallingford, but now of Bridgeport, who was at the lobby of the Palace Theatre in New Haven when John Bagnano was shot by Olympia Macri of New Haven, consumed most of the time today, the eighth day of the retrial of Miss Macri, indicted for murder. Her first trial in New Haven last spring ended in a disagreement of the jury, which stood eleven to one for acquittal. The jury for the second trial was completed yesterday and the first witnesses for the state called today.

Leonard's testimony was enlivened by constant and bitter argument between counsel. Several times during the day Judge George E. Hinman cautioned State's Attorney Armon A. Ludwig and Joseph Koletsky, counsel for the defense, against the personalities being injected into the trial.

Joseph Candee, court photographer of New Haven, was the first witness called. Photographs he had taken for both the state and the defense were identified and described by him.

He was followed by Leonard who in turn followed by Sergeant John Schmitt, of the New Haven police force. Schmitt was the first man to reach the girl as she stood on the sidewalk shooting at Bagnano. He testified that he took the gun away from the girl and put it in his pocket. At the same time someone grabbed the girl and held her shoulders, he testified.

Schmitt positively identified the girl as the one from whom he took the gun on the afternoon of February 26. He was off duty in civilian clothes at the time, he said.

He started to testify as to what Olympia said when he took the gun away from her, when Mr. Koletsky objected as to its admissibility. The jury was dismissed. Until Monday, while counsel debated the point. Judge Hinman reserved his decision until later.

Throughout the day's ordeal Miss Macri sat between her counsel and Mrs. Mary Todd, jail matron. Twice during the day she sobbed softly and several times seemed on the point of again breaking into tears.

113 MILES OF NEW HIGHWAY BUILT IN CONN. LAST YEAR

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 13—Connecticut constructed 113 miles of new highway in the last fiscal year, according to a state highway department statement. A tabulation also showed that $8,041,016.64 remained encumbered on contracts in various states of completion at the close of the period, June 30. It is estimated that approximately 20 miles of additional roads have been completed since th e close of the fiscal year, but could not be included in the annual summary.

Construction of new roadways, reconstruction of others and disconthinuance of several stretches of highway has resulted in a total of 1,871 miles of trunk line and state aid roads now completed in Connecticut.

CLOSING ARGUMENTS IN STEPHENSON MURDER CASE

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Nov. 13—(A. P.)—Eph Inman, veteran criminal attorney, begged a jury today to spare from the electric chair and prison cell D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan, and two bodyguards on trial with him for murder.

It was the last word in defense of the three men, whose case will rest soon after noon tomorrow with the jury of ten farmers, a truck driver and the manager of a gas plant.

Inman charged that his principal client was the victim of enmities engendered in political warfare, and besought the jurors to find the trio not guilty of the abduction and assault of Madge Oberholtzer, of Indianapolis last March 15. The state charges Stephenson, Earl Gentry and Earl Klenck with responsibility for her death, which occurred at her Indianapolis home April 14, after she had swallowed poison in a hotel at Hammond Ind., March 15.

Miss Oberboltzer committed suicide as "a free agent," the chief counse for the defendants asserted in closing his argument. The state has held the men's acts influenced her to take her life by heaping indignities and abuse upon her, and asks their execution for first degree murder.

The court also affirmed a two-year sentence imposed on Milton Lipshutz, Philadelphia, convicted with Langley. Both men were tried in the federal court at Covington, Ky., on charges of attempting the removal of 1,400 cases of bonded whiskey from the Belle of Anderson Distillery at Lawrenceburg, Ky., in violation of the national prohibition act.

GOV. TRUMBULL WARNS HARD COAL SUPPLY IS EXHAUSTED

HARTFORD, Nov. 13—(A. P.)—Governor Trumbull was notified today by a special committee of Connecticut coal merchants that the supply of anthracite coal in the state is virtually at an end and that no more is in sight this winter.

The committee reported that, notwithstanding the executive's statement of two weeks ago announcing that resort would have to be had to substitutes, many consumers who have not yet filled their bins for the winter, were still holding out for hard coal, reluctant to believe that anthracite would not be forthcoming from some source.

About one family in five is without anthracite coal for the winter, and is confronted with the necessity of using substitutes, the governor was told. Although there is an amply supply of low volatile, semi-bituminous coal, the kind recommended by the governor in his previous statement, consumers who are short of fuel have been slow to turn in that type. It was evident to the committee that the governor's statement that there was no need for anyone in Connecticut to suffer for want of fuel, provided they were willing to use substitutes, has been misunderstood by some to mean that anthracite is to be had.

After going over the situation in detail with the coal merchants' committee, the governor was satisfied, he said, that the appointment of a fuel administrator is not necessary. The committee has taken the responsibility for delivering low volatile, semi-bituminous coal to any section of the state which reports a shortage of fuel and has assured the governor that the supply and handling facilities are adequate to meet any demand.

A fair price for this type of coal, delivered, the executive was informed, is from $10 to $11 a ton at the present market, in no case more than $13 a ton, run of mine, and complaints of profiteering by certain dealers were ordered investigated immediately.

"The people must realize that they will have to use substitutes for anthracite coal pr reeze," Governor Trumbull said after the conference. "The supply of substitute fuel is plenty large enough to take care of Connecticut people throughout the winter and those who go without fuel simply do so by their own choice.

"Nothing is to be gained by the appointment of fuel administrators under the circumstances. The fuel which is available is here in large quantities; it is fully as efficient, not to say cheaper than anthracite, and all that anyone needs to do to get it is to order it from his dealer. If this does not bring prompt results, the matter should be reported to me or to any members of the coal merchants' committee, whose cooperation has required the situation being kept well in hand. Fuel administrators are necessary only in emergencies and fortunately there is no emergency in Connecticut."

On the merchants' committee is Lucius Briggs, of Norwich.

RHINELANDER LETTERS TO BE PRESENTED IN COURT

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 13—(A. P.)—Some of the letters which Leonard Kip Rhinelander sent to Alice Beatrice Jones, his negro wife, in answer to her fervid love notes, will be presented during the course of his annulment suit.

Already one of his missives, a telegram, has been produced by Lee Parsons Davis of defense counsel, to counteract the contention of the young plaintiff that he was led into marriage by the aggressive tactics of the daughter of a negro hack driver. Asked tonight, definitely, whether he would introduce some of Leonard's letters as he had threatened, Mr. Davis answered:

"Undoubtedly some of them will be produced during the cross examination."

As he spoke he pointed to a heap of Young Rhinelander's letters whose publication he predicted several days ago would "wreck" the reputation of the young son of an aristocratic huguenot family.

Rhinelander's telegram was placed in evidence today in order to explain one of Alice's letters sent to him while he was in California in 1922. It read: "Will be in San Francisco for at least two weeks as my pal is in the hospital undergoing an operation. If you can possibly arrange to come, take train that arrives in four days. Wire me at Cliff hotel."

Alice's answer to this request was a refusal, based on the expense of the trip and the fact that he had not sent her a ticket. This was two years before their marriage.

Most of the day was taken up in reading more of her letters of which more than 60 already have been produced. Some of them were couched in fervent love terms, others indicated that typical lover's quarels had arisen. One, in particular, warned him that he might lose her if he did not marry her. It was written shortly after Young Rhinelander had informed her in 1922 that he was going to school in Arizona at his father's request, and read:

"I am not going to write again as you have to do the right thing by your father. When you are of age, you can take me if I am still here. Your money came first before me. I never want you to bother me again until you are of age and then maybe you'll be too late. Do not write me any more unless you come back to marry me."

Although Young Rhinelander was on the stand most of the day, he merely identified the letters. Several times he left the witness box to permit minor testimony to be offered by other witnesses. He will resume his estimony Monday, no session being scheduled for tomorrow.

POTATO CROPS INJURED BY ADVERSE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—(A. P.)—Serious damage from adverse weather conditions in October to unharvested crops of potatoes, beans and apples in the northern states, was reported today by the department of agriculture. Reports to the department, an announcement said, indicated that so far the agressive tactics of the daughter of a negro hack driver. Asked tonight, definitely, whether he would introduce some of Leonard's letters as he had threatened, Mr. Davis answered:

Preliminary Work on Rumanian Debt

Debt as Funded on the Treasury Records is $46,508,661, Which $10,380,166 is Accrued Interest.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—(AP)—With the Italian funding agreement ready for formal signature tomorrow the American debt commission began consideration today of Rumanian debt, and that nation's mission, headed by M. Titulesco, has been advised informall that a settlement substantially on the basis of the British terms will be urged.

The Italian agreement apparently has been favorably received in most sections of this country, treasury officials said today on the strength of private advices received since publication of the terms. President Coolidge also let it be known that he regarded the agreement as entirely satisfactory, and fair to both nations. The agreement, in his opinion, represents the maximum burden the Italian people are able to bear, especially in view of the fact that Italy's debts to the United States and England combined almost equally the amount which Great Britain owes this nation.

Little activity marked the Rumanian negotiations today, but experts of the two commissions were engaged in study of the problems and M. Titulesco conferred at length with Under Secretary Winston of the treasury. There were indications that the negotiations would be carried on much in the same way the Czecho-Slovakian debt was considered. In that instance, practically the entire agreement was worked out in meetings between individuals.

Rumania's debt is carried on the treasury records at $46,508,661, of which $10,380,166 represents accrued interest calculated at five per cent. It is regarded as likely that, in arranging for the funding of the debt, the accrued interest will be computed on a lower basis.

Formal commission consideration of the Rumanian debt is expected to be held in abeyance probably until Tuesday. The war department has a claim against the Rumanian government for a small amount and an attempt is now being mde to adjust that obligation so that the exact amount will be known before the commissions take up a settlement formula.

TURNING OUT CABLE WITH CAPACITY OF 132,000 VOLTS

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 13.—(AP)—Electrical cable experts in the Worcester Mills of the American Steel and Wire company, according to a statement made today by one of the officials, have solved a problem in the manufacture of insulated electrical cables so that the plants are turning out for a Chicago power company a cable which has a capacity of 132,000 volts, which is about twice the voltage that could be carried with safety by any previous cable. A vaseline soaked paper is used in insulating the new cable which is then covered with a sheath of lead. The company has been making short lengths of the cable for a year, but experiments conducted at the plant have shown that the new cable carrying the highest voltage known for this kind of power transmission line can be made in longer lengths and used, without leaks, either underground or as submarine cable.

POSSIBLE COMPROMISE OFFER TO SETTLE HARD COAL STRIKE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13—Reports were again in circulation in the anthracite fields today of a possible compromise offer to end the hard coal strike.

These reports had it that the proposal would be either a five per cent. increase in wages or the granting of a partial check-off.

The partial check-off would mean the collection by the coal companies of only union dues but not assessments that might be levied by the union on its members.

There was also a rumor that miners and operators would get together on next Tuesday.

No one in authority would confirm these reports.

Hope Abandoned For British Submarine

No Hope of Rescuing Any of the 68 Officers and Men—Craft Located in 225 Feet of Water.

PLYMOUTH, England, Nov. 14—All hope of rescuing any of the sixty eight officers and men of the submarine Monitor M-1, which disappeared off the Devon coast yesterday morning while engaged in manouvres in the company of a number of other submarines, has been abandoned.

It is believed the sunken craft has been located in 225 feet of water off Start Point, and a last effort will be made early tomorrow morning by a mine-sweeper to get in definite contact with the boat. Divers, however, are unable to work at such depths, and the possibility of bringing up any of the crew alive is regarded as hopeless, although two divers volunteered to make the attempt when the discovery of the resting place became known.

Arrangements have been made for a memorial service at Portland dockyard church Sunday, dashing the last hopes of wives and mothers, whose men went down into the sea in one of Britain's largest submarines, whose loss is one of the most tragic chapters in the country's submarine experience.

Throughout last night and today a fleet of rescue ships searched the waters ceaselessly within a wide radius of Start Point. At 2 o'clock this afternoon a wreck was discovered, which despite the fact that the channel is strewn with wrecks, is believed to be the missing submersible.

The mother ship Middleton, with Rear Admiral Hayward, commanding the submarine flotilla, on board, is proceeding to the scene tonight, but the admiral has no expectation that any of the men are alive, for he is certain signals would have been received.

The admiralty has not yet officially announced the location of the wreck, but the speed with which the names and addresses of the officers and crew were announced is taken as indicating that the navy officials have given up hope of rescue. No explanation for the disaster is offered, the officials insisting that the ship was seaworthy.

Friends of one of the members of the crew Engineroom Artificer Bell, says he had a premonition that the boat would not return from the exercises on which she set out yesterday morning. On hearing of a previous occasion, Bell told them, the M-Q suddenly sank by the stern and was righted and then the forepart submerged unexpectedly.

FOLEY REFUTES CHARGE MADE BY MRS. LANSDOWNE

Has Requested Secretary Wilbur to Relieve Him as Judge Advocate of the Shenandoah Court, so That He Might Appear Before the Court as a Witness—Concedes That He Wrote Out a Statement For Mrs. Lansdowne, But Disagrees With Her Reconstruction of It From Memory.

ASHINGTON, Nov. 13—(A. P.)—The Mitchell court martial refused today to strike out the testimony of Mrs. Morgaret Ross Lansdowne or to hear out of order Captain Paul Foley, judge advocate of the Shenandoah navy court of inquiry, in reply to her charge that he had sought to influence her testimony in the statement she was to make before the naval court.

Colonel Sherman Moreland, chief of the Mitchell prosecution, moved to eliminate from the record the statement of the widow of the commanding officer of the Shenandoah on the ground that it related to facts developed subsequent to the offense cited against Colonel Mitchell in the charges of conduct prejudicial to military discipline. His motion was over-ruled.

Advised of this development, which took place when the court first opened its session, Captain Foley appeared an hour or so later with a request that, as a matter of "personal privilege and fair play," he be allowed to take the stand to reply to Mrs. Lansdowne's statement of yesterday. Defense counsel objected on the ground that rebuttal testimony was out of order since it would come in the midst of the presentation of the defense. This view was sustained by the court.

Still determined to make a speedy reply to Mrs. Lansdowne, Captain Foley immediately requested Secretary Wilbur to relieve him as judge advocate of the Shenandoah court so he might appear before that tribunal Monday, when it will inquire into the charges Mrs. Lansdowne had laid against him. At that time, the navy court will hear both Mrs. Lansdowne and Captain Foley, as well as several other witnesses who have knowledge of facts relating to the incident.

These incidents as well as several other developments in the army court today served to slow down its proceedings, stop them entirely several times and finally compel a recess until Tuesday. Only two witnesses were heard, as against an average of four or five for the preceding sessions this week, as frequent and long drawn out were the wrangles between defense and prosecution counsel on the question of admissability of evidence, oral and documentary. The witnesses were J. Edward Cassidy, consulting engineer and colonel of the chemical warfare reserves, and Major Herbert A. Dargue, of the air service.

In making his request to Secretary Wilbur, which was taken under advisement, Captain Foley said the charge made by Mrs. Lansdowne had made him an interesting party in the Shenandoah inquiry and that consequently he felt he could not continue as the judge advocate charged with eliciting before that court all of the facts relating to the subjects under investigation.

Mrs. Lansdowne, as the first witness before the navy body Monday will be questioned on the basis of her statement to the Mitchell court that Captain Foley had prepared and sent to her a statement she was to read to the naval court, which falsely represented her attitude on the Shenandoah matter and was an "insult" to her husband's memory.

Dr. William Beverley Mason, uncle of Mrs. Lansdowne, with Mrs. Mason and Mrs. Foley, will be called as witnesses who were present at the interview between Captain Foley and Mrs. Lansdowne after which he prepared the statement which she was to present as her statement to the navy court.

Mrs. George W. Steele, Jr., wife of the commandant of the naval air station at Lakehurst, who delivered the statement to Mrs. Lansdowne, also had been summoned to appear before the naval court. Several other witnesses besides Captain Foley also probably will be heard in connection with this new phase of the Shenandoah inquiry.

Captain Foley freely concedes that he wrote out a statement for Mrs. Lansdowne on the basis of a conversation with her, but he disagrees with her reconstruction of it from memory before the Mitchell court after she had destroyed the original. He, too, has reconstructed the statement from memory and will present his version of it to the Shenandoah court.

Only a single copy of the statement was made, Captain Foley says, and that was the one sent to Mrs. Lansdowne. Besides Mrs. Steele, several other persons saw the statement and they probably will be summoned before the naval court.

While the Mitchell court would not hear Captain Foley today out of order, Colonel Moreland and his associates decided tonight that he and other essential witnesses would be called in retrial before the army court martial, and that the record of the case as developed before the Shenandoah court would not be accepted as constituting the record for the army court.

NEW PLAN TO RESTORE THE FRENCH TREASURY

PARIS, Nov. 13—The newest plan of Premier Painleve for restoration of the French treasury was examined in detail for many hours today by the finance committee of the chamber of deputies. Its chances of being endorsed by the committee and voted by the chamber early next week, appeared to have been much improved. No essential changes were made and the plan will go before parliament as drawn up by M. Painleve after he had accepted the main points of the socialist program with the explanation: "I make these concessions to the cartel." The plan calls for a moratorium on short term bonds and a capital levy, described as a "national contribution," and stipulates that industrial and commercial stock companies should share their profits with the state to the extent of 15 per cent. The Paris bourse showed no ill effects from the announcement that the bill continued a levy of 1-2 per cent. on securities, real estate and other property. On the contrary French rentes of three, four, five and six per cent., most directly affected, improved over yesterday's closing prices.

There was also a gain for the franc on the exchange market, it being quoted at 24.57 to the dollar, as against 25.09 yesterday.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR WRECK PLACED UPON ENGINEER

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Nov. 13—(A. P.)—Full responsibility for the wreck of the Pennsylvania railroad's St. Louis to New York Mercantile express and a Washington express near Plainsboro, N. J., early yesterday, in which ten persons were killed and twenty-nine injured, was this afternoon placed upon Timothy J. Carroll, engineer of the St. Louis train, following a joint session here of all officials concerned. Nine of the ten bodies had been identified at the time. The tenth remained in th morgue of Coroner W. E. Gowes, at New Brunswick.

The court of inquiry was attended by representatives of the Pennsylvania railroad, Interstate Commerce commission, Public Utilities commission of Middlesex county. Although agreeing that Carroll, in passing signals, was at fault and responsible for the crash, it was not said whether charges of manslaughter would be made against him. One official said Carroll might be subpoenaed to appear before the Middlesex county grand jury next week.

The officials met behind closed doors at the Jersey City Pennsylvania railroad headquarters. James T. Maybury, Jr., head of the railroad division of the public utilities board stated that evidence showed Carroll had passed two caution signals a mile apart, and did not know the Washington train was ahead of him until he saw the engman's flare on the tracks. It was then too late to stop.

ANNULMENT OF UNUSUAL MARRIAGE IN WATERBURY

WATERBURY, Nov. 13—He took me down town to pay a bill at the Connecticut Light and Power company, and he married me instead."

Such was the complaint of Guiseppina Martellone in superior court today in seeking annulment of her marriage to Joseph Cesare. Only three witnesses had been heard when Judge Arthur F. Ells announced his decision annuling the marriage.

The story of the 20-year-old girl's marriage was a most unusual one. The girl testified that on May 4, 1924, Cesare called at her home and invited her to take a walk. He told her that he had a bill to pay at the light company and that he wished to make a purchase at a store. Unconsciously the girl, who then was 18, accepted the invitation.

However, Cesare is alleged to have taken her to the city hall, where he secured a marriage license without her knowledge. Then, continuing the "shopping tour," the couple went to Justice of the Peace Edward J. McDonald, where they were married. All this was without the knowledge or consent of the girl. At one point of the ceremony, the girl joined hands with Cesare. This, he is alleged to have explained, was to show her friendship for him.

SEVEN MINERS DUG THEIR WAY OUT FROM CAVE-IN

TRENTON, Mo., Nov. 13—Seven miners early today dug their way to freedom after having been entombed for eleven hours more than 200 feet under ground by a cave-in of the shaft of the Trenton coal mine.

They were none the worse for their experience. They had taken food into the mine with them and there was ample air supply.

Rescue workers, who had dug feverishly at the fallen earth and rock shutting the men in, heard the click of shovels on the other side of the barrier late today. Soon the entombed miners tunnelled through to the open passage.

DECREES GIVEN IN TWO DIVORCE CASES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 13—Decrees were given in two uncontested divorce cases which were aired at the session of the Windham county superior court Friday forenoon.

The cases were those of Esther L. Larned 12, vs. Charles E. Larned, both of this city and of Corinne L. Phaneuf vs. Idola Phaneuf of North Grosvernordale. Next week court will be held in Putnam when several jury cases will be heard. The jury has been called to appear in court Tuesday morning at Putnam. Judge Edwin C. Dickenson stated that all jury cases stand as assigned. A number of additional assignments were made. Some of these will be brought up at the short calendar next Friday morning in this city. Cases assigned following the short calendar for next Friday are: First, Maurice Palmer vs. Eddie John; second, Fred M. Smith vs. John Hopkins.

Judgment for the plaintiff to recover $328 for labor performed, was awarded in the case of Martin Kostelich vs. John Jackowich.

The case of Richard G. Watrous vs. Guilford Smith, which has been assigned several times and is now in the hands of a state referee, was granted a continuance.

Relative of the case of Archie H. Gallup et als vs. Theron T. Palmer, a motion for extension of time for discontinuance, it was stated that there was a prospect that a settlement might be effected during the coming week.

A settlement out of court was announced in the case of Henrietta Borgeson et als vs. Frank E. Green.

There was no opposition in the case of John Markowski vs. John Jackovich [illegible] over a loan. A decision of [illegible] to failure to plead was reserved [illegible] the court until a bill of particulars is furnished by the attorney for the plaintiff.

The cases of Katy, Louis L. and [illegible] Rosiena Tine are to be [illegible] Putnam and will be assigned next week. Damages are claimed by the plaintiffs as the result of a collision of automobiles on the North Windham road several months ago. The case of Merrill H. Jones vs. D. V. Frigon & Company is to be taken following the short calendar session of court here next Friday.

The uncontested divorce case of Esther L. Larned vs. Charles E. Larned, on grounds of desertion, was then taken. The plaintiff said that she was married to Larned in August 1921 and that he deserted her on April 20, 1922. The desertion came just one hour after their baby died. She could give no reason why her husband had acted in this manner. Judge Dickenson asked the plaintiff's attorney if there was no means of reconciliation, but information was given that a previous attempt made to unite the couple had been unsuccessful. Testifying that the plaintiff had not lived with her husband for the past three years were her mother, Mrs. William H. Martin, Miss Molly Parent and Miss Maud Deming. Judge Dickenson then granted the decree and allowed the plaintiff to resume her maiden name of Esther Lillian Martin.

The second uncontested divorce case was that of Corinne L. Phaneuf vs. Idola Phaneuf of North Grosvernordale. The plaintiff sought the decree on grounds of adultery and sought the restoration of her maiden name of Corinne Laurencelle. Testimony was given that the plaintiff was married to the defendant on May 10, 1905 in North Grosvernordale by Rev. Thomas Cooney. They lived happily for the first years of their wedded life but about five years ago the husband's attitude began to dampen toward his wife and on January 22, 1924 he left her and never returned. The woman said that before he deserted her her husband often spoke of a woman whom he called "Felice." She did not know this woman's last name but before he left he told her that the woman "got him in bad." Mrs. Phaneuf said that she had heard that her husband was living with "Felice." Constable Nere Codprre of North Grosvernordale testified that he knew the defendant quite well and recalled the time when Phaneuf deserted his wife. He learned later that Phaneuf was living in Manchester with the other woman. He stated that her name was Felice Kenneski. Last July Constable Cordierre made a trip to Manchester and located Phaneuf who told him that the Kenneski woman had borne him a child. The birth certificate showed that a child had been born to the woman at the Memorial hospital, Manchester, on June 25, 1924. Judge Dickenson then granted the decree on grounds of adultery and allowed the restoration of the maiden name. Court then adjourned until next Tuesday morning at Putnam.

RECOMMEND CHANGES IN WATER SYSTEM OF CITY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 13—A recent report which in the main calls for further reinforcement to the water distributing system as drawn up by Henry W. Taylor of New York city, consulting engineer, was made public in concise form Friday. Mr. Taylor was authorized by the common council to conduct a complete investigation of the local water supply and distributing system and in making recommendations for improvements to present plans and specifications for the same. Additional recommendations made recently total in cost about $14,500. This amount added to the amount of the original recommendations made would entail a total expenditure of approximately $93,000. The improvements at the pumping station are primary according to Mr. Taylor and he is not alone in the opinion that they should be effected first, if the voters decide as to the respective merits of these two important improvements. City Engineer Robert E. Mitchell has compiled figures which show effectively some of the conditions which now exist. At present 29,040 gallons of water per minute are used to pump 760 gallons into the supply reservoir. Under the proposed plan it would take only 19,360 gallons of water per minute to pump 850 gallons. This saving would amount to about 10,000 gallons of water a minute and would mean that the steam pumps would be required only in unusually dry weeks. Another factor of moment is the immense cut in the cost of fuel for the station. It now costs the city about $3,000 annually for coal to operate the steam pumps. The new apparatus would abolish the use of these pumps to such an extent that the annual coal bill should not be over $300. This saving alone could be applied on the expenditure and in a period of years would clear the city of debt whereas at present the money is being paid out with no material or lasting return.

Mr. Taylor recommends the enclosing of three important areas in large mains, some district with 12 inch and others with 14 inch pipes, so that at all times there would be a noticeable increase of pressure for domestic, mercantile and fire protection purposes. The areas thus proposed are: from the pumping station to the intersection of Valley and Jackson streets, present 14 inch main; from that point to High street and over to the supply reservoir, 12 inch main; from Jackson and Valley street intersection down Jackson and over Pleasant street to the reservoir, 14 inch main; from pumping station down to intersection of Lewiston avenue and Jackson street, present 14 inch main, up Lewiston avenue and down High street to connect with the 12 inch main on Valley street, 12 inch main; the extension of the 8 inch main down Ash to Main street for the completion of the circuit. The present 8 inch main goes about 700 feet on Ash from Jackson street. Another urgent recommendation which Mr. Taylor makes is that the city secure control, by purchase or lease, of existing storage areas on the water shed.

Hundreds of gifts and sums of money amounting to $226 were received at the annual "Donation day" held at the Card Home for the Aged, Inc., here, Thursday. The donations were largely in the form of canned fruits, jellies, vegetables and household articles. The King's Daughters were in charge of receiving the donations from 3 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The leader, Mrs. Charles B. Lamb served lunch, assisted by Mrs. Fred White, Mrs. Jennie Bradshaw and Mrs. McGill. Mrs. Clifford E. Williams and Mrs. Edward Bass received the donations. Mrs. A. Vantine Anderson and Mrs. R. C. Fletcher registered the guests. The house committee was composed of Mrs. Frank M. Smith, Mrs. Arthur W. Gates, Mrs. H. Clinton Lathrop and Miss Annie H. Smith received.

The student body of the Windham High school met at Lyceum in the auditorium Friday forenoon and witnessed a delightful program given by the senior class. President John Nichols was in charge of the meeting. Miss Bunny Thompson, secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting. Thomas Meikle and Mary Rose Savory favored with the presentation of "The Hot Sketch," a singing and dancing number and later the former rendered a vocal solo. Marvella Curran was at the piano. Gertrude Dondero gave a humorous reading. Jessica Fenton pleased with a fine exhibition of original drawing. Scenes of 1776 and 1925 were presented by Elinor Stanley, Ruth Taylor and Natalie Burnham. Irene Colgan, Virginia Paine and Mildred Davis. President Nichols and Manager Robert E. Dziomba referred to the Windham-Bristol football game at Recreation Park Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Nettie E. Chapman, wife of Samuel C. Chapman, died quite suddenly at her home in Chaplin, Friday morning, of chronic myocarditis. The deceased had been a newspaper correspondent from the town of Chaplin for the past two years. She was born in this city, March 8, 1880, a daughter of George E. and Laura M. (Jones) Snow. Besides her husband and parents she leaves one son, Robert C.; one daughter, Elizabeth P. Chapman; one brother, School Committeeman Robert O. Snow, of this city, and one sister, Mrs. Ruth E. Barton, of Hartford.

Miss Julia McCarthy died at St. Joseph's hospital late Thursday night. She is survived by one brother, Dennis; one sister, Mary; one nephew and three nieces, all of this city.

An effort is being made by the democratic city committee to induce Alderman Pierre J. Laramee to enter the field for mayor in the coming city elections, it was said Friday following another meeting of the committee, held for the purpose of choosing a standard bearer. The democratic caucus will be held in the town hall this (Saturday) evening when the merits of the several prospects for mayor will be discussed. The name of John C. Tracy yet persists in the talk of the republican choice for candidate for mayor. The republican caucus will be held Monday evening.

The services for Mrs. Anne Sweeney were held at 8 o'clock Friday afternoon at the J. C. Lincoln company parlors on Church street. Rev. A. Stanley Muirhead of the Methodist church officiated. Nephews of the deceased acted as the bearers. Burial was in the new Willimantic cemetery.

At 11 o'clock Friday forenoon the funeral services for Charles Ingraham were conducted at the late home, 10 Pleasant street, by Rev. A. Stanley Muirhead. Burial was in the Pachaug cemetery, Jewett City. Members of the Masonic order with which the deceased was affiliated were bearers. The J. C. Lincoln company had charge of the arrangements.

Funeral services for Gordon E. Keefe were held Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the home of his parents Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Keefe, of Gilead, with Rev. W. W. Malcolm officiating. Burial was in the Gilead cemetery. The J. C. Lincoln company had charge of the arrangements.

Spurts of rainfall Friday followed a driving storm which had lasted practically all through the previous night. Willimantic, set in its cosy little valley, avoids the severity of all ethereal disturbances and it is believed that the rain and fairly high wind was just the edge of the storm which raised havoc in and about New Haven.

Cars and pedestrians were sent scurrying for shelter about 4:30 Friday afternoon when two blasts of dynamite were discharged on the site of the new Community hotel. Chief McArthur, Captain Grady and Officer Tombrio, of the police department, were shielded from possible projectiles from the blast. The work was done with experienced hands, however. A puff of smoke, a dull boom and tons of dirt and rocks broke into easily handled fragments. Not a single rock blew over the danger-line.

Members of the Jolly Twelve met with Mrs. George Drake recently and were served a pink and white lunch, amid decorations of corresponding colors exhanced with pink and white chrysanthemums.

Mrs. A. Anderson entertained the Sewing society of the Swedish Lutheran church at her home Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Peterson and her daughter, Mrs. Longren, of Norwich, were present as guests. The hostess served luncheon.

Kappa Phi Gamma society of the Normal school held a costume cotillion in the kindergarten room with a large attendance Thursday evening. Music, games and refreshments were enjoyed.

At a meeting of the mothers of the Congregational church Mrs. Helen Boss Cummings gave an interesting talk on her experiences and impressions of the Latin quarter in Paris which she visited some time ago.

Mrs. Thusa G. Turner, of the faculty of the Windham High school, was presented with an appropriate testimonial by the commercial division of the senior class during the first period of school Friday morning, in honor of her approaching marriage.

MAJORITY STOCKHOLDERS ARE BUYING UP SHARES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Nov. 13.—Following an announcement Thursday that the majority stockholders of the Phoenix Building company had purchased the holdings of minority stockholders and now control practically the entire issue of shares of the corporation, and that E. W. Scott would re-assume the management of the property at once, it was made known Friday morning that another minority stockholder, not concerned in the recent action to have a temporary receiver appointed, as was done, is now insisting on a continuance of the temporary receivership. A hearing likely will be held next Friday on the matter of the receivership in the superior court for the county, in the meantime Erving W. Davis will continue as temporary receiver. During the present week Attorney Arthur G. Bill and Mrs. Fannie Paine, minority stockholders who brought the petition for the temporary receivership, have disposed of their holdings to representatives of the majority stockholders.

TROUBLE BREWING OVER STERLING TOWN ELECTION

DANIELSON, Nov. 13.—A situation is brewing over in the town of Sterling. It may get into the full glare of the limelight in the not distant future. The stage appears to have been set for it at the annual town election in October. When the votes cast in that election in Sterling were being tabulated one of the counters, it is alleged, was a candidate on the town ticket, in the republican column.

However, candidates who won office in the election have since functioned in their official capacities. One of them is a grand juror who signed a complaint under which a man and his wife were fined and required to pay costs for non-payment of personal taxes.

Now the man who was fined has consulted a Danielson attorney and among other things it is alleged that certain items of expense in the costs of court were illegally assessed. That's one thing. Another is, though it is not apparent that a lawyer has been consulted about this as yet, that a claim will be set up that the entire town election in Sterling was illegal because a candidate on the ticket assisted in counting the ballots and that candidates who were declared elected and have since been discharging the duties of their respective offices are not holding them legally. Incidentally, one town office holder has been told that he will be arrested and prosecuted for discharging the duties of an office to which he has no legal title. And there you are.

All of this may amount to nothing or a great deal, even the possibility of a special election in the meantime it gives Sterling something to talk about and the people of other nearby towns something to ponder over. It is a tonic in a dull and grey period of the year.

Attorney Arthur G. Bill of Danielson is counsel for the man who wants to find out all about the costs assessed against him when he was in court for non-payment of personal taxes.

Speaking of early winters and hard winters, Judge James N. Tucker of East Killingly contributed this information Friday. In either 1866 or 1867, Judge Tucker could not be positive Friday, there came on November 12, this date is clear in Judge Tucker's mind, 15 inches of snow. It came in a storm that started as heavy rain. On March 7 of the following year, Judge Tucker came to Danielson on business and while here heard a man remark that some of the snow that fell on November 7, was still piled up in the rear of his barn. This must have been what is known as a good, old-fashioned winter.

Under the heading "Weather Orders" a New York daily of national reputation on Thursday editorially discussed men who make long distance weather forecasts. Not all of them are connected with the Smithsonian Institute, the United States Weather Bureau or astronomical observatories, says the editorial. "Any man with assurance may be a weather prophet." "A reputation is easily gained by the hardy annuals of this type." And so on. "Spring is not spring without them." "They order winter betimes. They are familiar and tolerated fakirs." These sentences are taken at random from the editorial, all carefully connected to make interesting reading in view of the weird weather that is being foretold for 1926 and 1927—years that are to be without a summer.

The local interest in the editorial lies in the following: "Nature often founds the best laid plans of the scientific weather observer. Such being the case, Charles B. Montgomery of Oneco, Conn., the Cloud Digger, who recently made his 76th semi-annual forecast, may be right when he predicts a good winter for the ice-cutter and the coal man and the wood man. "You are facing," he says, "a long, disagreeable winter." He is more definite and positive than the Farmer's Almanac.

That's that. On the heels of this and what the scientists are saying about dire cold weather for the coming winter and no summer weather for 1926 and 1927, the Cloud Digger has made known that he is to break a rule of long standing—that is, not to make any but semi-annual forecasts, and issue a special forecast at once. It will be based, he says, on research of his own records pertaining to the weather and covering a great many years.

All of which recalls that Mark Twain once remarked that although people are always complaining about the weather, nothing is done about it.

Through the release of the annual report of the county commissioners it becomes a matter of public knowledge that Windham county's expenses during the past fiscal year were materially more than the slender revenues that now accrue to it. The county lost money in maintaining the jail at Brooklyn and the county home for children in the Sawyer district of Putnam. This is through no fault of the administrations of these institutions. They simply cost more than they produce in the way of revenue.

For instance, the jail cost $14,857.02. There is a deficit of $6,140.45 right there. Some years ago there was talk, following the advent of prohibition, of closing the jail. It has since been demonstrated that this would be impractical as prisoners continue to be all too plentiful, for one reason or another.

The receipts at the jail this year amounted to $8,216.57. Of this amount $6,243.45, received from the state for the board of prisoners. The remainder was largely revenue from the jail farm. There were days when the Windham county jail was talked of the country over as not only self-supporting, but as a money-saver. There were numbers of years when it showed a surplus of several thousand dollars. Those were the times when there was a heavy revenue from the labor of prisoners hired out by the day under guard of keepers to labor on various projects. The opportunity to do this has very largely disappeared in later years.

The deficit at the county home the past year amounts to $4,297.44. The total expenditures at the home amounted to $2,688.69. The state paid $21,982.50 for the board of children there.

Though the county's deficit is in excess of $10,000 this year, credit must be given for heavy expenditures made in the upkeep of the jail and county home. These are large properties, kept in good repair and there is no small expense to so doing.

The report gives the county's assets as $128,000. There are liabilities in the form of outstanding notes amounting to $20,000. The balance in the treasury was $40.70 at the close of the fiscal year, September 30.

A new detour arrangement is in effect between North street and Elmville. This detour sends traffic via North street from Main to Maple street and northward to what is known as the Chicken Farm road, bringing cars back onto the state highway at Elmville, just south of the bridge. Morin avenue, Lewis boulevard and Judd avenue are all cut off from the state highway for the time being.

At the state armory work on the improvements and modernizations to be made there at the expense of several thousand dollars is underway. The first work has had to do with making sewer connections. The other work to be done will progress as rapidly as is possible and will be completed during the winter season.

CHILDLESS HOMES

Read Mrs. Benedict's Letter Praising Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Kewanee, Illinois.—"When I was married about a year and a half I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because of ill health. I did not have any children. I now have two healthy little girls and I am sure I would not have had them had it not been for your medicine. Last spring and summer I got all run-down, irregular, and I had awful headaches, and my back and side hurt me so that I could stay up only a short time. My limbs would get so tired and ache till I could cry. I started to take the Vegetable Compound again and used the Sanative Wash, and it was not long till I was relieved. Now I do all my own work and help others. I sure praise Lydia E Pinkham's medicines to any one I meet that is suffering from similar troubles. I think if mothers with girls would give it to them when they come to womanhood it would make them stronger. People who have known me all my life are astonished to see me now as I was always sickly when in my 'teens and until I started taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. MARY R. BENEDICT, 313 Payson St., Kewanee, Ill.

Davies, recently returned to New York accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Nash of Darien, who had assisted for weeks in his care and by Fred Lachapelle, in Mr. LaChapelle's automobile and is reported to have stood the trip well.

Mrs. Fred Green is about again after a recent illness.

Bennett's lumber camp has been inoperative for some time on account of the hunting season.

Fred Green shot his 17th coon recently; a fine specimen weighing over 24 pounds and exhibited in one of the Plainfield stores.

The six church fellowship of the South Windham conference is to meet at Westminster Tuesday, Nov. 17, at 11 a. m. This includes the churches of Canterbury Green, Ekonk, Waurekan, Central Village, Brooklyn and Westminster. An invitation has been extended Packer, and the church at the Plains and to all interested. Coffee is served during the noon informal social hour, basket lunches being brought by those attending.

Early in the week Mrs. William Davies of Elm Arch farm was crossing the one-way bridge in Moosup when an automobile approached rapidly from the other direction; Mrs. Davies hoping to avoid collision ran her machine against the side of the bridge. The automobile speeded by safely, while Mrs. Davies machine was badly injured the other driver not stopping for any help or inquiry.

Ben Davies who has been working in Versailles is at his home here for a season.

Miss Bonita Dersenberri has returned to New York where she has been in an office for about eight months.

Miss Nellie Colburn who has had a summer position in Bristol, R. I., is now visiting her family, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Colburn, their sons and Mrs. Church, mother of Mrs. Colburn. The Kvasnika—the new owners of the former Turnesson place—have four children in the Gayhead school, and this brings the number of pupils in that district to 29.

Raymond school has a new teacher, Miss Gladys Salmon, of Allen Hill, Brooklyn, who motors back and forth between school and home.

Several schools are rehearsing Thanksgiving programs.

Mrs. Jessie A. Meade, who had been for a week at Sunnymeade, ill with a severe cold, was at church Sunday having previously visited her son Fred and his family at Ancrum, N. Y. Another son, J. Murray Meade, with his family brought his mother up from his home in New London last week and called to take her back Sunday. Mrs. Meade returning to New York early this week.

Mrs. Martha Warren lately of Bridgeport, formerly of Westminster, who has been with some of her relatives in Miami, Florida, returning visited friends and relatives in and around New York and is now with the family of her brother, William E. Davies at Elm Arch farm.

Mrs. Warren was not especially fond of Florida and is glad to return to the bracing air of old Connecticut.

Mrs. Charles Robbins and daughter Viola Bennett were in Willimantic on Thursday.

Mrs. Smith of Howard Valley was in town Tuesday, with Mrs. William E. Davies of Raymond district.

Miss Ruth Elizabeth Pellett made some of her first calls since her arrival at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pellett, on Thursday of this week. Her aunt, Miss Margaret Inglis of Plainfield, chaperoned her. Miss Inglis has been visiting her for the past fortnight.

About a year ago, Rev. Morris S. Ailing, secretary of the Connecticut Federation of Churches and pastor at Storrs, spent Sunday here with some of his college young people. They plan to be here Sunday morning and evening, Nov. 22nd and will conduct the worship.

AUTOMATIC TRAIN CONTROL

One more frightful railroad wreck has occurred causing many casualties, and it was in the class of too many which have occurred in the past and which follow the disregard of the signals that are supposed to govern the operation of trains.

The first train was obeying signals. It had stopped when ordered and was just gathering speed when the second train crashed into it, the second train having gone past a stop warning and a caution signal, though it doesn't appear that conditions favored one train any more than the other when it came to seeing the signals. The engineer of the second train was aware of the fact that the train ahead was late and had left Trenton but five minutes ahead of his train, which was on time. He attributes the crash to the fog that prevailed.

This is of course another one of those instances which go to emphasize the importance of having an automatic train control that will act when the human agent fails to. If it was because of the fog, through which the engineer could see and respect signals and the other could not, it demonstrates clearly that had there been a device for controlling the trains and making the second as well as the first train obey the safety requirements there would have been no wreck, lives would not have been sacrificed, passengers would not have been injured, the equipment of the railroad would not have been battered to pieces and the prestige of the road would have remained untarnished.

It is for the prevention of just such deplorable wrecks that so much insistence has been placed upon the train control equipment, and on installing it by a certain time instead of waiting until the highest type of such a device may be perfected in the unknown future.

Whether it is fog, death, sleep, illness or inattention which makes the engineman fail to abide by the signals, the need of an auxiliary protection that will work under all those conditions has long since been apparent.

UNSAFE PLAYGROUNDS

It is the expressed belief of the Automobile Legal association that the person possessing the ability to plan a programme that will largely reduce the automobile highway accidents can write his own check for the service. Such a person it believes will render to mankind full value for any part of a million dollars and in addition receive the thanks of millions of parents of school children whose worries over the possibilities of accidents work greater havoc in their daily lives than all other worries combined.

The need for such a programme is thoroughly understood. It is seen every day in the impatient driver, in the congested conditions of the highways and in the speed at which some insist upon driving when more caution should be observed. It is also seen in the handling of vehicles by young and unlicensed drivers.

There is a distressing illustration of such a speed in the fatal accident in Middletown, where a boy who was coming down a grade on a coaster was struck by a truck guided by a youth who was driving without a license, pitched off and killed. Here was a combination of highway conditions which if eliminated would do much toward increasing highway safety.

It is not to be supposed that the boy on the coaster thought he was endangering his life, but that is about what it amounts to in these days when children use the streets for a place to play. The companion of the dead boy had in fact given warning of the approach of the auto, but according to the statement of the truck driver he had not seen the boys on the coaster until he struck them. Because the boys were playing in the street does not mean that they ought not to have been guarded against harm, but it is too frequently the case that under such conditions the auto driver has no warning and is unable to stop his machine. It makes most every auto driver shudder to have a youngster ahead of him on a coaster because there's no telling what he may do, or whether he may flop directly in the path of the machine. The streets are most certainly not safe places to play.

OCEAN TO LAKES

Lake ports have been clamoring for development which will make it possible for ocean going vessels to reach them in the belief that it will provide facilities for a better handling of their trade and put them in closer touch with world markets. It is therefore a matter of much consolation to Chicago that it has had a half dozen dozen ocean going steamships tied up at its wharves during the past season and it has started some to speculating on the possibilities of opening an outlet by way of the Mississippi.

Ocean steamers which reach the lake ports at the present time are restricted in size because of the limited capacity of the Welland canal. Thus only ships of 3000 tons or less can get through. Should the St. Lawrence development which has been discussed be carried out the limit would be removed and the ports along the lake and the cities which do business through those ports and which have by no means abandoned hope of that project being successfully consummated in time, would realize their long sought ambition.

Before that arrives the lake ports are promised even better ocean steamship service through a deepening and widening of the Welland canal so that ships 820 feet long and 100 feet wide can be passed through. Whether that would serve to satisfy the demand for the St. Lawrence project or only whet it remains to be seen. Likewise much will depend upon the transportation service that is afforded in the meantime. Where transportation is satisfactory it is not the practice to go seeking for something else.

Little has been heard of late concerning the St. Lawrence project. It cannot be considered dead and in the area about the lakes it might be difficult for get the admission that it is even sleeping. It will be through the use of present canal facilities and the employment of the additional advantages when furnished that there will be a worthwhile demonstration of the desire and the need for the much more elaborate development of the St. Lawrence.

THE DAVEY BILL

The idea of reorganizing the government departments so that they can function more efficiently is not a new one. It has existed for years and several efforts have been made to have it put into effect. Authority has been granted for study and even for action but either the steps taken have not been adequate or else congress has failed to act upon recommendations made.

In this connection it is interesting to note that Congressman Davey is to present a bill to congress giving authority to the president to reorganize the executive departments. The president has repeatedly expressed himself upon the desirability of such reform. He has got forth reasons why it should be done and of course he has recognized the necessity of having it done in a manner that will get results and do for the government what such a reorganization would be expected to do for a private business.

Putting the authority in the hands of the president would mean that something could be accomplished, progress could be made and a much needed blow struck at the wastefulness that exists in departments and their bureaus. That it is a democratic congressman who backs the legislation carries its own significance. It means that there is recognition of the changes that the president has asked for and indicates a desire to carry such a plan out in a non partisan manner. Having pointed out a condition which ought not to exist it should not be difficult to get the sanction of congress to eliminate it in the interest of good government and the best interests of the country. By putting it in the hands of the president needless delay and red tape would be cut.

PROTECTING THE ROADS

In Rhode Island the state board of public roads has decided to give special attention to the violators of highway laws. This action is commended by the Providence Bulletin which declares "There is need of sharp supervision of the practice of drivers of heavy motor vehicles on the state roads. The law on weight is clear enough, but there is always temptation to ignore provisions made for the protection of the property of the taxpayers. Excessive loading is destructive to highway surfaces, but many drivers care nothing for that—and unless watched will evade the law."

Overloading not only has its bearing upon the surfaces of state roads but it likewise has its serious effects on bridges. There are even hard surfaced roads which are not built to carry freight car weight and there are the macadam roads which are easily wrecked by the overloaded vehicles especially during the season of the year when the roads are in an unsettled condition because of the frost, but when bridges are subjected to weights which they are not intended to carry, and which warning is invariably posted, there is a menace to life as well as to property.

The Rhode Island board has evidently been forced into its decision by the conduct of that class of motor truck operators which gives no heed to law or anyone else so long as it accomplishes what it undertakes. Apparently the protection of the highways by certain truck owners in our neighboring state has been a matter of secondary or less consideration. Action which is deemed necessary to correct the situation is a needed bit of enforcement which the violators have invited.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The outcome of the child-woman murder case in Colorado will surprise no one.

Are we going to save water, or are we going to make it necessary to start the pumping station again?

It is all right to talk about world peace but one solid year of it would be an excellent object lesson.

Probably the belief that the coal strike is nearing its end is due to the extensive use that is being made of substitutes.

While 1926 may be a year without a summer, as claimed, there is no reason to expect that the icemen will refuse to fill their houses.

The claim that there is no good whiskey available is doubtless true, but the great trouble is that drinkers are no longer demanding that kind.

Congestion of the ether caused by radio points to the need of even as stringent embargoes as Florida has had to establish because of visitors.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

A threatened shortage of coal (that is anthracite coal) is not without some advantages. Should it long continue it is doubtful if it would result in much or any hardships here in New England, as long as there is soft coal in undoubted abundance. Even before that is resorted to there is still wood in considerable quantity that could be used before winter in its real severity swoops down upon us. But the writer has in mind that old saying that "necessity is the mother of invention." We must evidently have the human mind jolted hard by threatened suffering before it will think its way out of the difficulty. It is in this way that substitutes are brought to light. One man has already invented a conical-shaped grate by which buckwheat coal can be successfully used. Somebody will yet find someway by which oil or electricity or other natural substance will relieve the helpless public from the tyranny of strikes and the greed of mine owners.

What science has done through its labor-saving devices is one of the marvels of modern times. Machinery has gone far in lifting labor out of that form of drudgery that once made it virtually slavery. We now have the living man preserved in the image of God where once we only had the pitiful slave or beast of burden. But is there not a tendency in this active age, controlled by the big business interests, to carry this tendency to production so far as to make havoc with many of our natural commodities? To illustrate: the steam-driven, or portable, saw-mill is now being carried to the timber in the forest, where once the logs of the forest were carried to the stationary mill—a much slower process. Fewer men are now employed; havoc is created by the wastage, and the portable mill moves on leaving desolation in its wake and also dwindling communities.

Instinct versus intelligence always forms an interesting study. It presents a problem which thus far has baffled the philosophical mind. Nobody is dead sure just where the one ends and the other begins. A certain act on the part of a lower animal one person will put down as instinctive, for no better reason than because it is done by a dumb animal; while another person, judging the act by itself alone, says it is intelligence. Again the same act done by man oftentimes the same as a lower animal that is called intelligence, by the animal instinct. Now we are told that squirrels in vast numbers are swimming across the Mississippi river from Wisconsin to Iowa. Why? Probably this is the reason: in Wisconsin the corn crop is very light, but in Iowa it is unusually abundant. Who told the squirrels? Certainly if man should make such a move we would not hesitate to call it intelligence. Is it only instinct with the lower animal?

Dr. Robert E. Speer, the well-known Presbyterian layman of New York made a very impressive address in Washington on Christianity and the Races—viewing the subject more from the moral and spiritual standpoint, than the political—in fact the political side was hardly referred to. Dr. Speer was wise enough to leave untouched the social side. The social aspects of the question are of such complexity, and human prejudices being just what they are, that, at this stage of the game, as far as the Negro problem is concerned it does not easily lend itself to solution. Let the matter of justice be settled first. Dr. Speer made these four points: 1. The race problem is not insoluble. 2. The races have not been without their historic value. 3 The true idea of racial settlement will be found only in religion. 4. Our practice of Christianity will be an important item in the settlement of the problem.

The most potent argument in favor of the abolition of war is the proper observance of Armistice day. When in 1921, by means of a "loud speaker," 150,000 people heard the exercises at the funeral of The Unknown Soldier in the Arlington cemetery, they were made to feel as never before that you could multiply that dead soldier by the ten millions. And what has the world to show for this wanton slaughter of its young manhood? Property loss is not to be considered for one moment by the side of one dead soldier. Devasted fields can be restored, but not dead soldier lads. And one such boy is worth more than all the material wealth destroyed in the late World war. Why should such boys be murdered just to help scheming prime ministers and kings loot some neighboring monarch? The World war has left a vast wreckage of men and money and what is there to show for it? The mere possibility of another war shows that humanity has passed the peak of civilization and is going the other way.

"A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" is a dictum of scripture that is borne out in every phase of our modern life. The writer once asked a certain judge, who at that time was attorney general of Connecticut, if in his judgment, the people with all the conveniences of living which modern science has made possible, have been made correspondingly happier than their fathers were? "Emphatically no," he said. Gas, electricity, steam heaters, trolleys, telephones, victrolas, wireless, automobiles and radios seem to have absolutely nothing to do with contentment of spirit. These things have started a thirst that nothing will quench. Unless the source of contentment is found in a man's own soul these things that come from the outside will never satisfy. Unless we have that "peace that passeth all understanding" we have nothing.

What a blessed thing it would be for all auditoriums, whether churches or otherwise, if we could have simplifiers as well as amplifiers. It is doubtless true that there are fewer speakers who fail to be heard than understood. 1. There is the muddy thinker who is not understood because he does not think clearly. 2. There is the profound thinker whose trouble lies in shooting over the heads of his hearers. 3. There is the man who doesn't think at all and is foolish enough to let the people know it. O for a simplifier!

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Claude Monet, whose eighty-fifth birthday anniversary will be celebrated today in the French world of art, is generally considered to be France's greatest living painter. In his earlier career he was the most aggressive of all the Impressionist painters, and his work is always vital, robust, joyous, though at times attempting the most elusive color harmonies. Monet was a Parisian, but he gladly forsook the city for the open fields and skies of the country and much of his life has been spent in the little French hamlet of Giverny. Several years ago the French government conferred a most unusual honor upon the great artist, when it granted an appropriation of 1,000,000 francs for the establishment of a museum to house his works. The building chosen for the purpose was the beautiful Orangerie of the Tuileries Gardens.

The art of knowing how to make others supply your wants is sometimes called success.

MIGRATORY SPEED, HEIGHT AND SYSTEM OF BIRDS.

Migratory flight among birds by day or by night, including their speed height, sense of direction and the effect of weather, is interestingly presented by Professor Alexander Wetmore, Ph. D., assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution.

"As a general rule, he observed, the smaller birds migrate by night and the larger ones by day, or by day or night indifferently. Geese and ducks often fly in migrating flocks by day, but also pass in numbers after dark. Loons and cranes migrate regularly by day as do pelicans, shore birds, gulls and hawks.

"It has been stated that small birds migrate by night to escape the enemies that likewise might destroy them," said the speaker. "Bluebirds, jays and blackbirds, however, fly regularly by day without fear of attack, as do kingbirds, fork-tailed flycatchers and waxwings. It is highly probable that small species, as wrens, chats, ground or thicket hunting warblers, and the small flycatchers that live in the thickets or dense woodland, habitually living in concealment, feel safer under the protecting cover of darkness, during their prolonged flights above the earth."

Professor Wetmore believes that procuring food is probably a much more weighty factor than timidity in regulating flight by night.

Airplane Helps in Records

Taking up the troublesome topic of altitudes at which migrating birds travel, he says that actual evidence is scanty and that only since the development of the airplane have definite observations become available.

"The early observers holding firmly that most normal migration took place at heights above 15,000 feet, attempted as a rule to justify their faith by a somewhat uncertain belief that flying became easier as altitude was gained, and increased in difficulty as the earth was neared," he said. "Experience of aviators, however, goes directly contrary to this statement, as it is found that with greater altitude there is increasing difficulty in maintaining height and speed. Birds are not afflicted with the engine troubles that beset humans who invade the air, but nevertheless feel keenly the lack of buoyancy of the upper reaches."

Professor Wetmore refers to the altitude observations recently by Colonel E. Meinnerhagen, whose finding are that it is exceptional in flying to meet with birds above an altitude of 500 feet, and that the bulk of migration is performed below a height of 3,000 feet. The colonel's conclusion that ordinary birds prefer to descend below cloud level was characterized by the speaker as not universally true.

"On nights of fog and rain birds pass very near the earth, and it is then that we may obtain some idea of the vast hordes of migrants that fill the air," he said.

"But aviators have recorded yellow legs or black-billed plover at 10,000 and 12,000 feet; pelicans, cranes, ducks and geese often pass at 2,000 to 3,000 feet in travelling from one feeding ground to another and when crossing mountain chains may fly at enormous heights."

Height and the Weather

"Weather conditions must affect the heights at what birds travel, as on clear, warm days, when warmed air is rising from broad areas, it would be easy to fly at high altitudes, while in periods when the atmosphere is dead and lifeless, high flights would be more difficult. Since rising air currents ordinarily prevail only during day, and slacken or disappear by night, we may see in this indication that birds do not travel at excessive altitudes after nightfall. We may conclude from the evidence that the bulk of migration passes below 3,000 feet, and that as a rule only birds of strong flight travel at greater heights unless weather conditions are in favor."

Professor Wetmore quoted Cooke that weather conditions have little to do with the migrations of birds except to permit them to travel or to hold them back, as the case may be. Parula warblers or redstarts wintering in the West Indies, or old world warblers or wagtails spending the cold season in Central Africa, notice no difference in temperature or climatic conditions between November and April, yet in the latter months they regularly move north toward the winter home. "Though we may theorize as to the actual origin of migration," he says, "the annual movements of migratory birds are now a part of the life cycle of the individual, and as such occur at the regularly appointed time, actuated by the physiological condition of the individual bird."

Wind was called as much a deterrent to migration as rain or snow. Cooke has indicated, as Professor Wetmore recalled, that migration is adjusted to mean weather conditions, so that each species moves north in spring at a time when the average weather encountered is not unsupportable. Hardy forms move early unafraid, more delicate ones come later when there is less danger of prolonged cold spells. With some species, return southward in fall comes long before there is any cold. Yellow warblers, Baltimore orioles, kingbirds, the European cuckoo and many shore birds crowd south before the close of summer.

Speed as Recently Tabulated

Referring to the speed that birds regularly make in flight, Professor Wetmore said that there had been but little definite information until recent years. In 1916 he published records secured by timing the flight of a number of birds by means of the speedometer of an automobile, and in such diverse forms as herons, hawks, horned larks, ravens and shrikes found the rate to vary from 22 to 28 miles an hour. Flight in all these cases was normal and unhurried.

Records of another observer, H. B. Wood, show speeds of only 10 to 17 miles an hour for Arkansas kingbirds and scissor-tailed flycatchers. Hugh Gladstone cites other records in which the willow warbler travelled at 23 1-2 miles an hour, the pied wagtail at 25, the European blackbird over 22, missel thrush 23 and the cuckoo 25.

For more comprehensive study recounted by Colonel Meinertz-Nagén, based on observation by means of theodolites designed to estimate the speed of airplanes at anti-aircraft stations, by stop watches along measured courses and by readings from travelling airplanes, show members of the crow family traveling from 31 to 45 miles an hour, smaller perching birds, from 20 to 27; starlings, from 38 to 49; geese from 42 to 51; ducks, from 44 to 59; falcons, from 48 to 48; sand grouse, from 43 to 47.

The greatest speed recorded definitely was that of swifts recorded from an airplane in Mesopotamia. These passed the observing plane and circled about it easily when it was flying at 68 miles an hour. This and other observations seem to give approximately 70 miles an hour as the normal rate at which some swifts feed and travel, a speed that can be accelerated to fully 100 miles an hour for pleasure or to escape from danger. E. C. Stuart-Baker in India timed two species of swifts over a two-mile course at the rate of 171.4 to 200 miles an hour.

System in Bird Journeys

"No less wonderful than the fact of migration itself is the regularity and system with which birds pursue journeys that in many cases cover thousands of miles across the earth's surface," Professor Wetmore said.

There was reference to a white-throated sparrow banded by E. P. Baldwin near Thomasville, Ga., on March 5, 1916. As this species nests in the northern portion of eastern North America, from Massachusetts, New York, Michigan, Minnesota, and northwestern Wyoming, north to Great Bear Lake and Labrador, this individual was in its winter range when captured in Georgia. Subsequently this identical bird, identified by its numbered band, was trapped on March 7 and 18, 1917, on several occasions from Feb. 25 to March 22, 1920, and on March 27, 1921, in each case within 100 yards of the spot where it was first secured.

"Since this was its winter home, we must assume," holds Prof. Wetmore, "that on each of the years from 1916 to 1921 this bird had migrated north to breed and had subsequently returned to spend the winter in one particular area of thicket, brushpile, and open glades in southern Georgia. Such precision of movement impresses one as truly remarkable." Professor Wetmore referred to the various theories that attempt to explain the regularity with which birds move, appear, and disappear during migration, and declared that the matter is yet far from definitely settled.

"If we are willing to attribute a sense of direction to some mammals, including man in certain instances, I see no reason why we should deny its development in a high sense in migratory birds. Most of us are familiar with incidents of homing in domestic cats and dogs, and may apply the same principle to birds."

Stories That Recall Others

Revenge

Donald, age two, has found a unique and legitimate method of evening up scores with his parents. Recently after the humiliation of corporal punishment had been endured, he sauntered up to his dad with a fly swatter in his hand. Suddenly dad was treated to as stinging a swat as the baby hands could administer, while, with an angelic smile, his young offspring offered the explanation, "fly." The performance was repeated until vengeance was satisfied, and the fond father had to acknowledge that there certainly was "no flies on Donald."

Safety First Originator

As an illustration of the heights to which no may rise a speaker cited the incident of a poor immigrant who came to this country as a young man and is now the president of one of the large western universities.

This man's ignorance was such that when he arrived in New York he bought some bananas. He had never seen such fruit before, and so he ate peeling and all.

At the close of the address a friend of the speaker arose and said: I have been wondering why that young man ate the bananas peeling and all. I have reached the conclusion that he must have been the originator of the "safety first" movement.

Sunday Morning Talk

CHRIST'S CALL

"If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink." John, 7.37. These are bold words, and they would be as false as they are bold if He who speaks them were no more than a man. All human desire are expressed in this one word, thirst. We will now speak of different kinds of thirst and see how coming to Jesus will quench and satisfy. First there is the thirst for happiness. This may be called the most common of all. If any man thirst for happiness, let him come to Jesus and drink. He may come with nothing but nature cravings, with nothing beyond a great longing, a dumb desire. If it is not a spiritual desire at first; coming to Christ will make it so.

Then the thirst for righteousness. A man coming to Christ begins to thirst for personal rectitude, for conformity to the will of God. God sent Jesus to save us, how? By turning every one of us from our sin, where we may walk in the way He has marked out for us when He said "follow Me."

The next is the thirst for love. This desire may fall back upon itself and does; or it may shrink back and yearn and pine in the lonely heart; but satisfied it cannot be unless it finds the fountain and the fulness and the flow of love in Him. His love sanctifies, ennobles, pupils all other.

The thirst for life. This thirst is profounder, vaster, more powerful. Back from the dark realm of eternal oblivion the living soul recoils and cries for life. On towards the realm of life it stretches wherever that realm may seem to be. Ah, but where shines the sun that never sets? Who can give us this great faith in life—future eternal happy life? Who but He who is the life—and who brings life and immortality to light by His gospel. Will you try to live on without Him? Are you so in love with misery? Is the covenant with death so dear?

The short Me often casts a long shadow.

From Small Beginnings

Champ Clark, Speaker of The House of Congress

To be a man of sufficient calibre to be made speaker of the house of congress is to be a man of recognized ability. To act in that most difficult of positions with such skill and tact that the presidency of the United States is considered as the next step, is to be recognized indeed. Champ Clark of Kentucky birth, had that experience. He became a national figure known from one end of the country to the other, and was noted with friendly interest as one of the most human of all political leaders.

Champ Clark was not born with the proverbial silver spoon in his mouth nor did he find it easy to go from the job of "hired man" on a farm to the high position of chief figure in the national assembly. He "hoed his own row" to greatness, and made himself the man whom the country respected. Very probably, the fact that he shaped his own destiny had much to do with his possession of personal power. The men who have every thing given to them are likely to become weak; prosperity in early life is frequently the greatest handicap; poverty and hard necessity shape men of destiny.

Champ Clark was born in Kentucky, a state that has mothered many of America's best men. He had to get out into the fields and work with his strong young muscles in order to gain money. He had to serve his term as clerk in country stores before he could serve his terms in congess. He had a good head and he used it, going from the store to the office of a newspaper, the best of all schools. With all this close touch with raw humanity he studied law, and made the bridge between law and the people by entering political life. He had helped to pay his own way through college and law school, and studied to such good advantage that he was made a college president at twenty-three. He might have remained in the quiet of college life, but he preferred active work in politics. From being a city attorney he became so influential that he became chairman of the national democratic convention, as well as several times a member of congress and speaker of the house. His vigor and power as speaker, his wisdom and oratory, made him a notable figure. From farm hand to national prominence he made himself by his own determined effort.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

BAYREUTH

"Seldom does a genius rise who can put an entire city in bondage to his achievements," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society on Bayreuth where the annual Wagner musical festival recently completed its second season since the interruption by the World war.

"To Bayreuth Wagner intrusted the perpetuation of his operas. For almost two months each summer the Festspielhaus, the theater designed by Wagner himself, resounds with his music and his only. For those two months Bayreuth is all bustle and stir.

"Bayreuth, each summer ceases to be a 'little German town' Wagner wrote for the year of the World, not Germany alone, so Bayreuth becomes a sounding board for the cosmopolitan discord of many tongues.

"Two golden months are over at last, and then Bayreuth does little but wait until the festival two months of next summer. Of course there is a trickle of tourists to show the great slab of marble hammered by inscription or design, that covers the master composer's grave. And from the grave they go to the Villa Wahnfried, Wagner's refuge of peace, now occupied by his aged wife, their children and children's children. It is the gift of a grateful city to Wagner.

"'Wagner City' is just off the route to anywhere. Its very isolation endeared it to Wagner. Many cities offered to do homage to the master's operas as long as there were listeners to hear, but Wagner chose Bayreuth. It lies in mountainous southwest Germany. Scale 40 miles west of the westernmost wedge of Czechoslovakia on the map and you will find it. Nuremberg is another 40 miles south of Bayreuth. An airplane journey from Nuremberg to the metropolis of Leipzig would take a sky-sightseer right over Bayreuth but the forested mountains that close around it compel the main line railroad to seek a valley farther east.

"If Wagner, remembering how Paris hoodlums howled down Tannhauser, intended that Bayreuth should be a temple giving admittance only to music lovers he succeeded. Devoted appreciation must fire travelers to search out this little hilltown. The journey once started becomes a pilgrimage. And pilgrims who will travel hundreds and sometimes thousands of miles to hear an opera make earnest listeners. So here are found audiences worthy of great work superbly done.

"Once in Bayreuth, the interest is not in the heart of town but in 'the lovely little hill' toward which a broad, tree-bordered boulevard points. The lovely little hill is a perfect setting for the Wagner theater. No other theater in the world is like this one. Wagner's aim was to knit drama, stage setting and music in closest unity. Only in this specially designed auditorium, he believed, could his operas fulfill the ideal of his conception. Viewed from without, the theater is plain but graceful. Not until one enters do the unusual details of construction become apparent. Seats rise in tiers like those of a Greek theater leaving no space for balcony or gallery. The musicians are out of sight.

"Nearby the theater is a grassy park which nightly becomes 'The Playground of the Gods.' Wagner's operas are peopled with Pagan deities, giants, witches, heroes, heroines, dwarfs and monsters. Out of the stage doors they pour and into the park during the long intermissions as if from a magic box.

Sailor Lassoes Big Eagle

Before the bird was finally captured it had flown from the crosstrees several times, but each time being forced to return to the vessel which was some miles out. The eagle had a wing spread of five feet. It was turned over to Franklin Park in Boston.

BOTH BOUND OVER TO HIGH COURT ON CHARGES IN SALE OF LAUNDRY

After an all day trial in the city court Friday, which was ended about 5 in the afternoon, Harry Davidson, of 333 Main street, and Samuel H. Cohen, of 250 Boswell avenue, who have been conducting the Norwich steam laundry on Franklin street, were bound over to the superior criminal court by Judge H. H. Pettis. They were before the court on the charge of fraud in making statements to Robert Ragin, of New London, in negotiations for the sale of the laundry. Bonds were placed at $3,000 for Mr Cohen and $1,000 for Mr. Davidson.

In giving his decision, Judge Pettis said that the charges made were such that, if proven, either fraud or false pretenses could be charged. The Judge said he was moved to his decision because there was the testimony of four witnesses that statements had been made which were false, particularly the testimony of Arthur H. Shurts, of New London, against Cohen, in stating that Cohen said the business of the laundry was over $31,000 this being before the negotiations with Ragin were taken up.

In the case of Davidson there were three witnesses against him and their testimony was only met by the testimony of the accused.

City Attorney Lee Roy Robbins was assisted in the prosecution of the case by Attorney Thomas M. Shields, attorney for the complaining witness. Robert Ragin, and Attorney Charles L. Stewart was counsel for the accused.

Denied the Red Book

A certain red covered book which was mentioned in the complaint as being the book from which Ragin charged that figures had been given him to show that the business from Sept. 1, 1924 to Sept. 1, 1925 was over $31,000 never existed according to the testimony of the two defendants, but another book was produced in court as the one in which the laundry records were kept.

At the opening of the case a recess of an hour was taken in order that Attorney Stewart might have opportunity to look this book over, as it had been in the possession of the city attorney since last Tuesday when he summoned Miss Anna M. Rakowski, the laundrymen's bookkeeper, to appear in court with her books.

Arthur H. Shurts, a New London real estate broker was first witness called for the prosecution. He testified to a statement made to him by Cohen that the business was over $31,000 and he told of visiting the laundrymen's office to secure figures on the business for a cousin of Henry Ragin who lived in New York. He told of Cohen giving him figures from a memorandum book, which they took off on an adding machine. The total was too large for the machine to record but he added the figures up later at home and the total was over $31,000.

Miss Anna M. Rakowski, bookkeeper for the firm, identified the memorandum book in court as the one in which she kept the records of the business. She said she had never known of a small red memorandum book and she testified to a time when she was asked to step outside the office when a sale of the laundry was being discussed. At one time the account book was missing from the safe and was not found for several days.

City Attorney Lee Roy Robbins presented two slips containing figures totaled by Mr. Stewart and the bookkeeper. Both attorneys agreed that the total business of the laundry for the period from Sept. 2, 1924 to Sept. 1, 1925 was $26,494.24.

Robert Ragin of New London testified that he had conducted business transactions with Davidson and Cohen during the middle part of October. He testified to signing a contract for the purchase of the laundry business from the two men and this contract was entered as state's exhibit B. Mr. Ragin stated that he had asked Mr. Davidson and Mr. Cohen as to the gross business done at the laundry from Sept. 1, 1924 to Sept. 1, 1925 and that Mr. Cohen had stated that this was between $31,[illegible] and $32,000. That he gave Mr. Cohen $200 on the date that the agreement was signed in October and that on a later date following a trip he made to New York the sum of $2,800 making a total of $3,000 paid towards the purchase price of the laundry. The witness then stated that the two laundry owners had shown him from a red memorandum book figures showing the weekly business of the concern during the period asked for. That the business had totalled from this book over $500 weekly. When he returned from New York the bookkeeper had shown to him the figures for the week ending Nov. 6 and that it had totalled only $412. He then went through the memorandum book of the bookkeeper for the year in question and that he found hardly any week totalling $500 as represented.

When put on the stand for the defense, Mr. Cohen testified that they had owned the business since March 1924 and that when Ragin first came to him, he wanted to combine business with him. Ragin offered $5,000 to buy out Davidson but this offer was not taken. Then Ragin wanted to buy the whole business, the witness said, and expected to move from the Rogers laundry to the Norwich steam laundry building. Cohen denied that he had ever shown Ragin any red covered book or that there was any such book. He denied that he ever represented that the business was in excess of $31,000 or that it had been over $500 a week since October, or that it had been over $528 for the week of Oct. 31. He said he told Ragin it was averaging $500 a week and that they weren't making any money but just getting by. He said Ragin proposed to better the business by raising the rates in some cases.

Mr. Davidson was the final witness. He said that Mr. Shurts first saw him in August. He said he never saw any red book and didn't know of any and he never heard a statement made to Ragin about the business being over $31,000, or the other statements about the weekly receipts.

The audience was delighted with the production and there was generous applause for the cast. SCHOONER IS ON ROCKY SHORE NEAR ROCKLAND, Me.

ROCKLAND, Me., Nov. 13—The two masted schooner Northern Light, left high and dry on the rocky shore near Rockland breakwater by today's storm and unusually high tide, was showing signs of breaking up late this afternoon. The crew of three men remained aboard.

Coast guard officials from White Head station were working hard to save everything movable. They regarded it as certain the craft would go to pieces when the next tide came in to batter it against the boulders. The masts still were in place but the sails were torn to shreds.

The vessel was bound light to Jonesport to haul up for the winter. She was owned by her skipper, Captain G. W. Newcombe of Boston and was valued at $3,000. He carried no insurance.

In accordance with the court's decision the rebate slips shall be given on monthly commutation, school and fifty-trip tickets.

LARGE ADVANCE IN WORLD PRICES

World prices of the requirements of daily life continue to advance. The statistical reports of the department of commerce showing prices abroad of the principal articles imported in August, indicate an advance in the foreign prices of 54 important articles as compared with those of the same months of last year, while only 28 enumerated articles show reductions in the same period.

This comparison of the import prices in the latest period with those in the corresponding months of the preceding year, says the Trade Record of the National City Bank of New York is an accurate picture of the advance or decline of the prices the world over. The import regulations of the United States require that of the stated valuation of the imported merchandise shall be "the actual market value or wholesale price at the time of exportation to the United States in the principal markets of the country from whence exported," and when we take the total quantity of India rubber, for example, imported in a given month and compare this with the stated value of all rubber imported, the average value per pound in all the markets from which it is drawn is readily determined. And this is also true regarding the foreign values of the many articles reaching us from the outside world, and a comparison of the import prices of August 1925 with those of the average in any earlier year permits a determination as to whether the "market value or wholesale price" of the respective articles in the countries from which the imports are drawn has really advanced.

Applying this method to the official records of the import value of 80 principal articles imported, it appears that 52 of the 80 actually show higher prices abroad in 1925 than in the same month of the preceding year, and a comparison of these import prices of 1924 and 1925 with those of the fiscal year 1914, all of which preceded the opening of the war makes it apparent that world prices of the principal articles of commerce are now much higher than in the prewar period and that the producers of these articles are apparently receiving much higher prices now than prior to the war.

Just a few examples will illustrate the classes of articles in which the advance has occurred and the actual increase in the prices of the articles in question. In raw silk (for instance the average import price of that entering the United States in August 1925 was $6.57 per pound against $5.84 in August 1924 and $3.42 in the fiscal year 1914. Of clothing wool, the average import price in August 1925 was 45.05c. per pound, against an average of 23c. per pound in the fiscal year 1914, while carpet wools quoted in August 1925 were valued at 27.04c. per pound, against 17c. per pound in 1914.

Coffee imported in August 1925 averaged 21.02c per pound, against 17.02c. per pound, in August 1924 and an average of 11.01c in the fiscal year 1914. Tea imports in August 1925 were at a rate of 29.07c per pound, against 18.04c in 1914. Coal imported in August 1925 was at the rate of $5.12 per ton, against $3.71 in 1914; bleached cotton cloth 14.6c per yard in August 1925, against 18.09c. in 1914. Raw cotton, coming chiefly from Egypt, India and China, averaged 32.30c. per pound in August 1925, against 12.80c in the fiscal year 1914. Manila hemp, drawn chiefly from our own Philippine Islands, averaged $290.60 per ton in August 1925, against $196.82 in 1914; tin, 52.03c. per pound, against 29.35c. in 1914, and tobacco for cigar wrappers, $2.32 per pound in 1925, against an average of $1.20 per pound in the fiscal year 1914.

STORY OF BIBLE IN SERIAL FORM READY FOR NEWSPAPERS

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 14 (AP)—The Press-Radio Bible Service is to furnish the complete story of the Bible free to more than 2,000 daily newspapers in the United States and Canada.

The first copy is ready for mailing in December. It is a quarterly edition and will cover January, February and March, with daily Bible selections and a brief prayer of about 50 to 75 words. With this service goes an appeal to the newspaper editors to use the appointed selection daily.

Four years ago when the newspapers of this section were campaigning against profiteers, Addison Y. Reid of Cincinnati, one of those who takes his Bible with his breakfast, scanned Proverbs and stumbled across this declaration of Solomon:

"He that withholdeth the corn the people shall curse him: but blessing shall be on the head of him that selleth it."

Mr. Reid, a short, chubby man of advancing years, envisioned the possibility of extracting from the scriptures an abridged selection of verse for every day in the year and for every man of the millions who have no church connection at all.

He interpreted the declaration of Solomon as a warning to profiteers and thought the whole story of the Bible could be told from day to day in an appropriately trimmed verse that would carry a message.

It will require two years and a half to tell the story of the Bible, Mr. Reid estimates. The bureau hopes to extend the Bible service to 24,000 weeklies and 7,000 trade publications and to interest more than 500 radio stations in broadcasting its sermonettes.

Incorporated under the laws of Ohio in 1923, the Press-Radio Bible service, which, during the three years previous was known as the Back-To-The-Bible bureau, has been existing upon voluntary subscriptions without support from any agency.

UNITED STATES POTATO CROP FOR 1925

On an estimated average yield of 100.3 bushels per acre (last year—124.2; 10 year average 107.5) the country's potato crop is estimated at 346,503,000 bushels. This compares with 454,781,000 last year and the 5 year average of 417,848,000.

In the great majority of states yields are a little better than expected last month. However some major late crop states report moderate or material decreases. New York last month at 30,518,000 bushels shrunk to 27,231,000 by Nov. 1; North Dakota changed from 8,670,000 to 7,920,000 bushels and Colorado from 13,192,000 to 12,610,000 bushels. New York has lost heavily from rot and different states west of New York have considerable damage from October freezes. The full amount of these losses is yet to be determined, but it scarcely seems likely to reduce the United States total extensively.

Maine had a heavy snowstorm around October 10 that prevented freezing of unharvested potatoes. Some small damage, fully allowed for in Nov. 1 estimate, has occurred to potatoes in barns. Northern New Hampshire and most parts of Vermont have lost potatoes from freezing and excessive wet weather. Vermont has considerable rot which may reduce later estimates.

The crop as a whole in quality is below that of any year since 1921 due to blight, dry rot, wet weather and freezing. Canada's potato crop is estimated as 15 per cent less than last year.

Estimated total for New England is 43,354,000 bushels compared with 56,170,000 last year and the 5 year average of 44,921,000. Maine has 30,976,000 against 41,175,000 last year and her average 31,725,000. The other 5 states approximate their average crops.

The 5 major late crop states Me., N. Y., N. J., Pa., Mich., Wisc., Minn., (N. Dak.) as a group have 90.1 per cent of the estimate last month, 69.7 per cent of their total last year and 78.5 per cent of their average. All the surplus states combined have 76.5 per cent of their total last year while the 9 late states of deficient production have 74.6 per cent of last year.

Last Chinese Emperor A Poor Outcast

This is Mr. Henry P'u Yi, of Hsuan Tung, the 19-year-old, last Emperor of China, who lives as an outcast in the Japanese concession at Tientsin. He is seeking to scrape money together to build a home for he and his wife there. He must also wait some time before coming to America as he intended to do on a study tour, for if he left China it would be misconstrued by political agitators. And Hsuan is probably the last Manchu Emperor today.

THAMESVILLE YOUTH MISSING AFTER BOAT UPSETS NEAR THERMOS CO.

Frank Sapiuicki, 18, of South street, is thought to have been drowned in the Thames river at a point opposite the plant of the American Thermos Bottle company, and five others narrowly escaped drowning when their row boat capsized in midstream about 5:30 o'clock Friday afternoon. Several of those in the boat are employes of the Thermos company and were being rowed across the river in a small boat when the rough water caused the frail craft to go over. All were thrown into the water.

In the boat besides the missing boy were Steve Sapiuicki, brother of Frank Sapiuicki, John Pisako, 11, Lizzie L. Alberti, Frances Leonard and a boy whose first name is Fred. The girls and two of the boys swam to the shore. Another boy was rescued from a watery grave by Officer Luke Riley, who went out after him in a boat. The boy was clinging to the overturned boat and was taken off by the officer.

The South street boy could not be found and is thought to have gone down in the rough waters of the river. Police headquarters was notified and Police Sergts. Myron O. Morgan, Matthew Delaney and Officer Riley went to the scene. An attempt was made to drag the river for the missing boy but it was found impossible to operate the boat and grappling irons owing to the rough water.

Knocked Down By Automobile

Warren W. Church, of 14 Ann street, sustained a scalp wound Thursday night when he was struck and knocked down by an automobile while he was crossing West Main street near Ricker's drug store corner. Involved in the accident was a motor truck of the Ulmer Leather Co., which was driven by Floyd R. Cochrane, of 39 Maple street, and which struck a Ford coupe. It was reported that neither machine was damaged to any great extent.

CITY'S SLOGAN MUST MAKE POPULAR APPEAL

A Norwich citizen who is enthusiastic over the proposal to secure a slogan for Norwich, through the slogan contest that is being conducted by the Chamber of Commerce, had the following to say Friday night of the value of a slogan:

The word "slogan" originally meant the war cry or the gathering word of a clan. In modern times the word is used to indicate some potent characteristic of a community, or an organization. The great value of a slogan is its terse statement of a fact, embodying a powerful sales argument. It must be chief, yet full of meaning. A slogan must appeal to the public mind.

The chamber of commerce is now conducting a slogan contest. Its aim is to arouse the public mind to the advantages of living in Norwich. What is it that makes Norwich the largest and greatest community in eastern Connecticut? The total value of New London county manufacturing business in 1924 was—$120,905,708. Of this amount, $53,295,480 came from Norwich. The total banking business of New London county in 1924 was $704,764,963. Of this amount Norwich bank transactions were $462,018,823.

This proves that Norwich is the banking and business center of eastern Connecticut. It should stimulate in no small degree, a civic pride and a loyalty to our home town that would make us most enthusiastic of Norwich. Norwich ranks amongst the leaders of the country, for its size, in the diversity of its industry. It enjoys one of the elements most necessary for success, and that is transportation. With two railroads and a boat line, all competing for business, we are favored beyond the lot of the average city for transportation. A glance at the present day bus line transportation map of Connecticut shows clearly that Norwich is one of the principal hub centers of Connecticut.

YALE-PRINCETON AND BROWN-HARVARD GAMES FEATURES IN EAST TODAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—(A. P.)—The east's football forces are arrayed tonight in readiness for another series of contests destined to determine several championships.

While the Dartmouth Indians, far from their home camp, fight against a Chicago eleven of admitted power in their effort to prove a claim to the national title, Yale and Princeton, oldest of gridiron foes, will be locked at New Haven in the crucial "Big Three" test. The powerful attacks of the Green and the Blue have made them favorites in these two struggles.

Army, held to a 14-14 tie in 1924, again faces at the Polo Grounds a Columbia eleven which played stirring football against Cornell; Harvard meets Brown at Providence hoping that the string of Crimson defeats will be broken while Syracuse and Colgate loomest of New York rivals and each unbeaten. Right it out at Syracuse.

Pennsylvania and Pittsburgh come to grips at Franklin field in another tussle of major character, while Penn State, which held Notre Dame to a scoreless deadlock in the mud last Saturday, aids West Virginia in dedicating the Mountaineers' stadium at Morgantown.

Williams and Amherst will settle "Little Three" honors for the year at Williamstown, Mass., with Amherst the favorite.

Princeton's hope against Yale appears to be the forward pass and the Tigers are anxious for a dry, fast field on which to execute the aerial program which baffled Harvard a week ago.

Both elevens are heavily charged with backfield material, Yale being able to produce fifteen ball carriers against a dozen Tiger threats.

Princeton has defeated Harvard and a victory will give the men of Old Nassau the title, while Yale, if victorious, must meet Harvard before the title decision is reached, Harvard, however appears to be outclassed, as in 1924.

For three years the Bears of Brown have squeezed Harvard and from the early season records should make it four straight. Harvard has lost to Holy Cross, Dartmouth and Princeton while Brown has bowed to Dartmouth, Yale and Pennsylvania. But the Bears played Dartmouth to a standstill except for two blocked kicks which the Green recovered for touchdowns.

Brown undoubtedly will present its best lineup of the year, with many of her crippled returned. Harvard may have difficulty in stopping the rushes of Keeler, Dixon and Payor, Browns stars who worried both Yale and Dartmouth.

Colgate and Syracuse will present two of the greatest running backs in the east in Eddie Tryon and Harlan Carr, and the duel should prove one of the day's best.

Pennsylvania, with Kreuz back to rip the opposing line, encounters in Pittsburgh an eleven which has just attained to power—a team of veterans.

Navy faces Bucknell, which won from the Middies a year ago, 6 to 0, and which travelled an undefeated path until it encountered Holy Cross this season. After a rather rocky preparatory season the navy is reported to be ready for greater deeds, with the army contest only two weeks away.

Leading elevens matched tomorrow and their scores of last year follow:

Yale 10, Princeton 0.
Pennsylvania 6, Harvard 0.
Army 14, Columbia 14.
Syracuse 7, Colgate 3.
Notre Dame 46, Carnegie Tech 0.
W. and J. 12, Amherst 6.
Williams 27, Amherst 6.
Bucknell 6, Navy 0.
Hobart 13, Buffalo 6.
Middlebury 15, Vermont 0.
Fordham 31, C. C. N. Y. 0.
Union 42, Hamilton 0.
New Hampshire 33, Maine 0.
Connecticut Aggies 22, Rhode Island

Lehigh 14, Villa Nova 7.
Delaware 2, Harverford 7.
Tufts 7, Bowdoin 6.
Dickinson 7, Penn Military 0.

AGGIES WILL SEND CRIPPLE TEAM AGAINST R. I.

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Nov. 13—The Connecticut Aggies will play their objective game of the year tomorrow, meeting Rhode Island State at Kingston, R. I.

Despite the fact that comparative scores apparently give Connecticut a slight edge over their opponents, tomorrow, no such advantage is felt by Coach Dole and his men. In the camp of the Aggies, it is felt that Rhode Island will furnish the stiffest kind of opposition, and only heads-up football will enable the Storrs team to win.

Connecticut's advantage, if it can be called that, has been wiped out by injuries. Oscar Nanfeldt, who at left tackle, has been the outstanding lineman of the year, will not start tomorrow. Nanfeldt sprained his ankle in the New Hampshire game, and this injury will prevent him from starting. Longo will take Nanfeldt's place at tackle.

John Daly, of Hartford, the Aggies star center, has a wrist injury, that may prevent him from playing his regular position in the center of the line. In this event, Coach Dole will probably play him at right guard, sending Lorentzsen to center. If Daly is able to play center, then either Lorentzsen or Johnson will play right guard.

Except for these changes, Connecticut's lineup will remain the same as for the last few games.

SOCCER BECOMES RECOGNIZED SPORT AT BROWN

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 13—(A. P.)—Soccer was sanctioned by Brown university as an undergraduate sport today and an eleven, chosen from a squad of 25 men who have been practicing for the past three weeks, will play its first game tomorrow with a local team. Other contests with industrial teams will be sought this fall and it is hoped that the sport will be on a firm basis next year when an intercollegiate schedule probably will be arranged. Robert C. Knox, of Ardmore, Pa., is captain of the team.

Game Called at 2:30.

THE BULLDOG AND TIGER ARE READY TO BATTLE

NEW HAVEN, CONN., Nov. 13.—(AP)—With both the Bulldog and the Tiger on the battle ground waiting for the entering whistle for the 41st meeting of Yale and Princeton on the gridiron tomorrow, thousands of football enthusiasts were crowding into New Haven tonight. Both teams wound up their preparations with short drills today and Coaches Jones and Roper reported their charges to be in fine condition for the contest.

Rain that fell last night and today and the many clouds hanging over New Haven tonight, make the condition of playing field at the Bowl tomorrow doubtful. Canvass and soft meadow grass have been spread over the field and unless a heavy rain falls during the night, the speed of the flashy Yale and Princeton backs should not be slackened tomorrow.

The Tiger team reached New Haven at noon and the Bowl was turned over to the visitors this afternoon for their final drill. Coach Roper required absolute secrecy for the final instructions he gave his charges. A signal drill lasting about half an hour followed by a short kicking practice for the backs completed the visitors' work.

Later the Yale varsity went to the Bowl for a final workout. Coach Jones was assisted this afternoon by three graduate players Bill Mallory, captain in 1923 and one of the greatest defensive fullbacks Yale ever had, aided in giving the Blue Backs their final "pepping up." Two star quarterbacks, Foster Rockwell, a Blue general in 1901, 1902, 1903, and 1904, and Lyle Richeson, Mallory's quarterback, gave his attention to the Yale offensive.

Yale's lineup was left intact and will face Princeton tomorrow exactly as it took the kickoff from Army two weeks ago. But the Blue has more reserve material than it had then. Ben Cutler, left halfback, was on the bench because of injuries then, and Bill Webster, guard, and Benn Butterworth, tackle, were not available. They are primed for action tomorrow. The Yale coaches have realized that forward passes will be the greatest menace in the game tomorrow and all of the coaching during the past week had been directed with this in mind.

It is estimated that a throng of 40,000 persons will come to New Haven tomorrow to witness the battle. Enthusiasm ran high here tonight as the followers of football poured into the city. A festive spirit prevailed and many dances, theatre parties and re-unions, were held.

The Princeton squad was spending the night at Old Lyme where the Orange and Black management took over the Ferry tavern as team headquarters. The men are not expected to return to New Haven until noon tomorrow.

While thousands will come to New Haven by automobile, the New Haven railroad will operate more than fifty extra trains. Twenty three specials will be run from New York and there will be others from Stamford, Bridgeport, Hartford and Boston. Emergency engines will be placed at intervals along the route so that in case of mishap the least possible delay will result.

A concert was given in Woolsey hall tonight by the Yale and Princeton glee clubs. This was followed by the big game dance.

SPEEDBOYS AND TIGERS IN DECIDING GAME OF SEASON

At Ashland park, Jewett City, Sunday afternoon the fans of eastern Connecticut will witness the deciding game of the series between the well known Jewett City Speedboys and the fast Greeneville Tigers. This game will have direct bearing upon the championship of eastern Connecticut and no doubt will be a hard-fought contest as both teams are deadlocked at one victory each. The Tigers won the first game 6 to 0 while the Speedboys turned the tables in the second encounter and won 13 to 0.

The Tigers will go to Jewett City with the best lineup of the season which will include practically the same men as played in the other two games. The Speedboys will also use the same lineup that defeated the Tigers in the second game. The Tiger's lineup will be: McGowan, center; Christe, Boothe, Maloney, Millett, guards; Lukowsky, Langevin, Sullivan, tackles; Gay, McIntyre, Manahan, ends; Higgins, Nelson, Swanton, halfbacks; Gorton, fullback; Tennant and Breen, quarterbacks.

In preparation for this game the Tigers have held practice every evening during the week and today will have a scrimmage drill. The Tigers have rounded into a well balanced team with a fast hard attack and on the defensive present a strong line and a fast secondary defense.

The park has been roped off and the field put into first class shape. There will be ample room for parking and every effort is being made to handle a large crowd that is expected to see the two leading teams of the eastern part of the state in action.

AGGIE FRESHMEN BEAT MASSACHUSETTS SOPHOMORES

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Nov. 13.—On a slippery field covered with mud the Connecticut Aggie Freshman eleven defeated the fast and heavy Mass. Aggies Two Year eleven here this afternoon, 8 to 0.

The freshman eleven played a waiting game, punting when ever they had the ball in their own territory. Their eyes were open though, and the scores were the result.

The first score came in the first quarter after an exchange of punts. Connecticut had punted to fifteen yard line and Loyejoy, center for the Two Year Men, passed over Truelson's head and four of the Aggies linemen tackled the latter for a safety after the ball had rolled across the goal line.

The second score came in the third quarter by a pass from Sahagian to Hewitt who ran thirty five yards for a touchdown.

The Two Year eleven outrushed the Connecticut eleven three to one, taking the ball to the thirteen yard line before the Aggies stopped them. At this point Captain Sahagian punted seventy yards. Throughout the game the defensive work of the freshman was outstanding taking the ball on downs when it was deemed necessary to keep the Two Year men from scoring.

DARTMOUTH—CHICAGO GAME FEATURE IN THE WEST

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Dartmouth's thundering eleven, undefeated and united, will invade Stagg Field tomorrow to battle Chicago in quest of the National Football Championship. The visitors are top-heavy favorites.

Three strictly western conference affairs tomorrow have to do with settling the "Big Ten" championship. Iowa State and Michigan will engage in their annual battle at Ann Arbor. The Wolverines were rated as one of the strongest teams in the country before they were upset by northwestern a week ago, and the Buckeyes tomorrow may feel the rebound of that game.

Northwestern will play its final conference game tomorrow, meeting Purdue at Lafayette. The three other conference teams will engage in non-conference affairs.

The Dartmouth eleven, after a light workout at Stagg Field today, was declared ready for the fray, but its supporters were none too confident that it would win by a lopsided score. Both teams were hoping for a dry field, but indications tonight were this wish would not be granted. Last week's rains soaked Stagg Field so heavily that, despite the draining system, it had not dried out fully when another downpour set in yesterday. The weather for tomorrow is not promising.

The heavy field will handicap Dartmouth more than it will the Maroons. If the gridiron is muddy or if rain is falling, Swede Oberlander, Dartmouth's sensational triple-threat star, will be greatly handicapped in launching his aerial attacks. The end-run formations which Dartmouth boasts will also be hard to get under way. The Maroons have had wet fields for all of their important games this season.

"Five yards" McCarty, Chicago's fullback, is so anxious to get into tomorrow's game that he has had a still guard molded over a rib from which a cartilage was kicked loose in the Illinois game a week ago.

WINDHAM PUTS IN CLAIM FOR STATE TITLE

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Undefeated for the past three seasons by Connecticut teams and with but one more game on its schedule this year, the Windham high school football holds what is said to be a record for Connecticut. The team will play Bristol high Saturday.

In three seasons of play, the team has rolled up a total of 597 points to its opponents' 47, an average of 32 points to 2. In the three years, opponents have scored but seven field goals, one field goal and one point from placement. But once in the three years has the Windham goal line been crossed, that by Wilby high.

Windham has encountered stiffer opposition this season than in 1923 and 1924 when all games were victories. This season scoreless ties have been played with Stonington, Westerly, and Hartford high school teams, and 6 to 6 tie with Chapman Tech.

Windham registers a claim to the championship of Interscholastic Connecticut based on its showing against Hartford high on October 17. The score ended nothing to nothing. But Windham claims that Hartford was on the defensive most of the game.

Coach Callaghan of the Windham team is a Colby college man. Coming to Windham high as a member of the faculty of the school, he saw possibilities of a fast football team and has been in charge of the school for the past three seasons.

ST. LOUIS BEATS WASHINGTON IN INDOOR LEAGUE

"St. Louis" defeated "Washington" by the close score of 10 to 6 last night in the opening game of the boys' indoor baseball league now being conducted in the Y. M. C. A. gym. Both teams played snappy ball and the league which is open to all boys in the city regardless of membership in the association will doubtless result in many lively contests. Five teams have thus far entered the league and any boys in the city under the ages of 16 may enter a team and play in the city league series without being obliged to join the association.

The lineup of the teams were as follows:

"St. Louis"—Erpest Stevens, capt., N. Murphy, J. Murphy, E. Shannon, B. Ruffo, L. Ruffo, M. Quarto, A. Golembieski, B. Smith, W. Riley.

"Washington"—Cecil Henschel, capt., B. Bruckner, H. Sadinski, B. Sherry, J. Tiger, W. Shannon, Bloom and Jackson. Umpire, Howard Ludlow.

RECORD CROWD EXPECTED AT DARTMOUTH-CHICAGO BATTLE

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Squeezing 100,000 football fans into Stagg field which has a seating capacity of 35,000 is the hopeless task that confronted officials for the Chicago-Dartmouth intersectional game tomorrow. Every seat has been sold for weeks and offers of $25 were made for single seats tonight. None were to be had even at this figure.

The three major contests in the western conference tomorrow will be played before capacity crowds.

The Michigan-Ohio state tilt at Ann Arbor will draw 45,000, the Iowa-Minnesota game at Minneapolis 50,000 while the Northwestern-Purdue game at Lafayette also will be played to capacity.

HARVARD HARRIERS WIN TRIANGULAR RACE

BOSTON, Nov. 13—(A. P.)—Harvard today defeated Yale and Princeton in the big three cross country race over the stadium course. The Harvard team led with 26 points; Yale had 47 and Princeton was third with 56. Willard R. Tibbets, in finishing first for Harvard, clipped 18 1-5 seconds from his own record for the course of five miles, 410 yards, by covering the distance in 28 mins. 9 4-5 seconds.

Harvard won first, second, third, sixth and eighth places. The Yale runners placed fourth, fifth, 14th and 15th, while Princeton's first five harriers came in seventh, tenth, thirteenth, seventeenth and nineteenth.

ACADEMY MEETS CHAPMAN TECH TODAY IN LEAGUE GAME AT ACADEMY CAMPUS

This afternoon for the second time during the season the local Academy gridsters will meet Chapman Technical school is what promises to be a terrific battle from start to finish. Today's game will be played on the local campus and the N. F. A. boys will try to duplicate their last game with Chapman in which the local team came out the victor by the score of 14 to 13 after scoring two touchdowns within six minutes of the opening whistle and outplaying them the remainder of the game.

Coach Whitney's charges have had stiff workouts the past week and are confident of sending the down-the-river boys home with another defeat. The entire squad, after their hard preparation for today's game, is in perfect condition. All of the players who have been on the injured list after the Bulkeley game, are back in uniform and will start in the game this afternoon. Whitney has worked the team especially hard the past five days. Monday and Tuesday were given over to light signal drills while on Wednesday and Thursday the squad had long hard scrimmages that lasted the whole of both afternoons. Friday the squad was given a rest to break up the monotony of the week's drill.

Chapman Tech badly defeated Stonington High a week ago and as a consequence hope to down the Norwich eleven today. If they defeat the N. F. A. warriors the local school will be out of the running for eastern Connecticut interscholastic football honors. The Chapman squad has had stiff drills during the past week and expect to find the local team easy victims. This fact however remains to be seen. Chapman will depend on Johnny Brown, dusky fleet-footed halfback and C. Kannenburg heavy fullback. Brown is a snappy broken field runner while Kannenburg is a line crashing man. Morris Brown does the punting and dropkicking. These are the three men that the Academy will have to watch in today's battle.

Coach Whitney on Friday had not decided on his starting lineup but said that it would be chosen from the following: Ends, Marks, Sargent and Waters; tackles, Mousley, Stefano and Kramer; guards, Polsky, Fiddle and Jimmy Connell; center, Schwarts and Murphy. The backfield Norm Courchois will be at quarterback, Clarence Brewer, Jimmy Williams and Pheno Tombari, halfbacks and "Radio Ed" Brewer at fullback.

The game is scheduled to start at 2:15 and as usual in all league games the officials will be from Connecticut Agricultural college.

NUTMEGS WILL CLASH WITH LORRAINE SUNDAY

Sunday afternoon local football fans will be given a chance to see one of the fastest football games that has ever been played in Eastern Connecticut when the Norwich Nutmegs meet the Lorraine Mills, champions of Southern Rhode Island. Both of these teams have been practicing hard for Sunday's game and are both in the pink of condition.

This game will resemble a meet between the Academy and the Westerly High School due to the fact that both teams have players that have starred in past years for these schools. Among the Lorraine's stars will be such players as "Peanut" Blake, of Providence, college at full-back; Kenyon, of the Bradford A. A., at end, and Marks from the Newport Training Station another end. The remainder of the squad are all from Westerly High and Stonington High school. These men have made an enviable reputation this season and are sure to give the Nutmegs a hard battle.

For the Nutmegs the following team will start the game: Ends, Carlin, ex-Academy star; Jim Kelly, formerly of the Hardigs, tackles, Butts, another former Hardig player and Pallocha, ex-Academy star; guards, Hazberg, another former N. F. A. star, and Grover, ex-Springfield Tech player; At center will be Bullivan. In the backfield MacLargan will direct the team from the quarterback position. Williams and Capt. McGrath will be half backs with Herberts at full.

Manager Winterbottom of the Lorraine team has given out the following as the official lineup for his team: Ends, Kenyon of the Bradford A. A., Marks, ex-Westerly High School player; tacles, Branki, Newport Training Station; F. Carr, formerly a star with Westerly High; guards, Ashworth, from the all star Watch Hill Life Saving Station eleven, and Barker, another Westerly High School player; center, Robar, still another Westerly High School star. In the backfield will be seen Thavernett, ex-Stonington star at quarterback. "Nick" Mooney and Garitt also Stonington High School players at half backs and "Peanut" Blake at full back. Stillman and Richards, both former Westerly High players will be held in reserve.

The game is scheduled to start at 2:30 sharp. The field has been put into fine shape for this contest and a large crowd is expected. Special officials have been engaged for this contest and also the field has been roped off so that the players will not be interfered with during play and also to provide better advantages for the spectators. The management of the Nutmegs hopes that the local sporting public will support the team. The Nutmegs are a local team and they deserve the support of the Norwich sporting public. Arrangements have been made for the accommodation of as many autos as will attend the game. Parking space is to be had along the following streets: Sachem, Williams, Lafayette, Oneco, Sherman, and Asylum. Spectators can reach the field from any of the following entrances: Gate A, Lafayette street, Gate B, Sherman street, Gate C, Asylum street.

HARRIERS OF EASTERN SCHOOLS IN X-COUNTRY RUN

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Harriers representing a dozen eastern colleges and universities and twenty nine high and preparatory schools will compete in cross-country program of three races tomorrow at Van Courtlandt Park.

The race will be preceded by a quadrangular meet among the runners of Dartmouth, Columbia, Cornell and Pennsylvania. Dartmouth has won the quadrangular affair for the past two years and will start as a favorite, with Columbia likely to furnish the keenest opposition.

RICKARD'S BIG PROGRAM OF CHAMPIONSHIP BOUTS

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—(AP)—Tex Rickard plans to stage championship fights this winter in every class, even Jack Dempsey's division, if he can come to terms with title holders "without deeding them the new Madison Square Garden."

But the promoter, outlining his program today, declared he would deal with champions only on a percentage basis. Rickard said he hoped to bring Benny Leonard back into the game again this winter.

The promoter will seek even Dempsey, he asserted, although admitting there was scant chance of signing the heavyweight champion.

Rickard is getting off to a good start in his campaign to have every titleholder appear in a championship fight. His first two indoor shows involve championships. Paul Berlenback, world's light-heavyweight champion, meets Jack Delaney in the opening show, December 11, while Louis (Kid) Kaplan, world's featherweight titleholder, risks his crown against Babe Herman on December 18.

McCARTHY TO WEAR STEEL GUARD IN GAME

CHICAGO, Nov. 13—(A. P.)—Determined to wage a high class brand of football tomorrow and expecting much opposition from Chicago, Dartmouth, national championship aspirant, arrived today for the intersectional contest on Stagg field tomorrow.

The easterners hurried to the South Shore Country club, four miles from Stagg field, where they will be quartered. They planned a light workout this afternoon after a stop at Flint Mich., yesterday for a workout on a muddy field.

Austin McCarthy, Chicago's fullback, is so eager to play that a special steel guard has been moulded to cover the rib from which a cartilage was kicked loose in the Illinois game last Saturday.

GOOD WEATHER PROMISED FOR TODAYS GAMES

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 13 (AP)—Fair and cold weather is the last minute weather forecast for the Yale-Princeton football game tomorrow afternoon. After looking over the atmospheric conditions tonight, L. M. Tarr, of the United States weather bureau here, commented as follows:

"The disturbance which was indicated on Thursday developed in intensity and moved rapidly northeastward during the past 24 hours, causing general rains over the northern states east of the Mississippi valley. Areas of high pressure dominate the country in the west and south except that a new disturbance is now forming over the southern Rocky mountain districts. Conditions favor unsettled weather followed by fair and colder."

Dundee Gets Decision

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—(A. P.)—Mike Dundee, of Philadlephia, won a ten-round judges' decision over Andy Tucker, of New York, here tonight, scoring a knockdown in the fourth round for a count of nine. Dundee weighed 131 1-2, two pounds less

SPORTING NOTES

Archery claims 2,000 women devotees in the United States.

From 1902 to 1923, the Iowa State College football team won sixteen consecutive contests with the Grinnell College eleven.

The Birmingham (Ala.) Athletic Club opens its magnificent new ten-story clubhouse with a housewarming and ball on November 16.

Harvard lost six successive football games with Yale up to 1908, won in that year and lost only two of the next eleven games.

For six years the girls' hockey team of the Hingham (Mass.) high school has not only never lost a game, but has never been scored on.

Representatives of British and Swiss universities are to engage in a series of international ski races in the Bernese Oberland the middle of January.

In Canada more than 50 new golf clubs have come into existence in the last two or three years, and the Dominion considers itself the fastest growing golfing ground in the world.

In 31 football games between the University of Chicago and University of Illinois the Maroons have won 15 and tied two. In 1917 a scoreless tie was played and last year the count was 21 to 21.

The game between the Harvard and Yale elevens at the Cambridge stadium on November 21 will be the 44th clash between the gridiron representatives of these two universities. The first game was played back in 1875 and there have been five breaks in the long series—in 1877, in 1885, in 1888, in 1894-5, and again in 1917-18, when the games were called off owing to the world war.

The international style of skating in vogue in the continental countries of Europe requires a smaller rink surface than the English style. The English skater makes a sweep of some 50 yards at one stroke and four skaters doing a combined figure will require an area of at least three or four thousand square meters. On the other hand, two continental skaters, together, are quite satisfied on a piece of ice of 100 square meters.

Yale holds a big lead over Harvard in the number of its football victories, but the Crimson has been coming along faster in late years. Up to 1910 Harvard had won only 5 of 30 games, losing 22 and tieing three. An idea of how few and far between were the Crimson victories may be gained from a mention of the years. Harvard won in 1875, 1890, 1893, 1901, 1908. Then came the turn of the tide and the figures now show Yale with 25 victories, and Harvard with 13, five games ending in ties.

Kearsarge Survivor Celebrates 82nd Birthday

UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD, N. Y.

John Young, of Washington, the sole survivor of the historic naval engagement between the U. S. S. "Kearsarge" and the Confederate warship Alabama, which took place off the French Coast in 1864 recently celebrated his 82nd birthday. Mr. Young was one of the three men of the crew of the Kearsarge who were wounded during the battle. Despite his years he is still hale and hearty.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Yowler Pays Bobby Back

If you're in debt there'll come a day
When you will find you have to pay
—Bobby Coon.

Yowler the Bob Cat is quite as smart as is Bobby Coon. Few tricks can be played on Yowler without his knowledge. He knew exactly what had happened when Bobby Coon had made use of him to get rid of the dog and hunters. You see, he had heard that dog chasing Bobby Coon, and when he had first heard that dog the latter's voice was coming from a part of the Green Forest where Yowler had not been that evening. So, when the dog began following his (Yowler's) trail, Yowler knew that he had been led there. On his way home at daybreak Yowler passed the hollow tree in which lived Bobby Coon.

"I'll get even with you yet, Bobby Coon," he growled in his ugliest sounding voice. But Bobby, curled up in his bed inside the hollow tree, simply grinned.

However, Yowler had his chance the very next night. He had first taken pains to find out where Bobby Coon was Bobby was fishing along the Laughing Brook. Yowler went roaming about near the edge of the Green Forest, hoping that the dog and hunters would return again that night. He wasn't disappointed. He had been watching only a short time when he saw the lanterns of the hunters and heard the sniffing of the dog. Yowler came down from the tree in which he had been waiting and crossed almost in front of that dog. His scent was so strong that it was not to be resisted. Away went Yowler, and away went the dog after him. Straight to the Laughing Brook Yowler led the way. Bobby Coon heard him coming, or rather he heard the barking of the dog. Bobby waded across the brook. He knew that the water would destroy his scent.

Finally Bobby crossed to the other side.

Now, had Bobby crossed just a little sooner he would have fooled Yowler and the dog, but it happens that he didn't cross quite soon enough and Yowler saw him. Now Yowler doesn't like the water and he had no intention of wetting his feet even to get even with Bobby Coon. There were some big stone and from one to another of these Yowler jumped. But before he started he waited until the dog was so near that he couldn't help but see him. The dog did see him and he went splashing across the brook. He didn't mind the water in the least. When he got across he made straight for the place where he had last seen Yowler. Right there Yowler's scent disappeared. You see Yowler had made a long jump to a fallen tree, and along this he had run and jumped from it to the trunk of a big hemlock tree. Now he was nicely hidden half way up this tree.

But if the scent of Yowler had mysteriously vanished there was another scent to take its place. It was the scent of Bobby Coon. That dog knew that he was supposed to be hunting Bobby Coon. He wasted no time trying to find the scent of Yowler the Bob Cat. Instead, he picked up the trail of Bobby Coon and away he went, barking as only a hunting dog can.

Poor Bobby. He had felt so sure that by crossing the brook he would be safe that this was a great surprise to him. He didn't feel like running and he didn't know where to run to. He knew that it wouldn't be safe simply to climb a tree. Then the dog would bark at the foot of the tree and the hunters would come over and perhaps kill him. Bobby didn't want to be killed. He was angry at Yowler. You see he had forgotten that he had played the same kind of a trick on Yowler the night before. That dog was a fast runner. He was getting nearer and nearer. Every minute he was getting nearer. Bobby began to pant and puff. He began to wonder if this was after all to be his last run. And then all of a sudden it popped into his head what he should do.

"Stupid! Stupid not to have thought of it before. What is the Laughing Brook for, anyway?" he exclaimed. Straight back to it he ran and then you should have seen him scamper down along the edge of the Laughing Brook just in the water. Finally he crossed to the other side. He was safe. The Laughing Brook had washed away his scent.

ONCE INTERNATIONAL OUTPOST, DUTCH HARBOR LIKE DEAD CITY

SEATTLE, Nov. 13 (AP)—Dutch Harbor, in the Aleutian Islands of Alaska once a military rendezvous of four nations, is like a dead city.

Before the fur treaty among the United States, England, Russia and Japan was consummated in 1911, Dutch Harbor was an outpost of intrigue. In 1893, when seal poaching was at its peak, America maintained five cutters and four gunboats there, while the British had three gunboats, the Japanese and Russians several war vessels.

Daring poachers roamed the seas, and raids were common. Probably the best known of the early pirates was Alec MacLean, the Wolf Larsen of Jack London's "Sea Wolf." His last trip to the Arctic was made on the schooner Comancita, a vessel masquerading under forged Mexican papers. One of his best known exploits was when he eluded a pursuing cutter and anchored two barrels of seal skins to a buoy. Later he returned and picked them up.

In 1911, all governments involved in the seal industries agreed to handle the killings themselves. Guards were stationed at the rookeries and sealing-at-sea was made unlawful. This treaty was drawn to run 15 years. The pact is expected to be renewed next year, although British Columbia sealers are opposed.

At present the entire patrol is carried on by four American coast guard cutters, whose greatest duties lie in administering relief to northern residents. Justice and food stuffs are dispensed by these guardians of the north, while poachers are of minor importance.

Meanwhile Dutch Harbor, nestled among the island mountains, slumbers, dreaming of a glamorous past.

UPLIFT NATIONAL LIFE IS AIM OF AZERBAIJAN STATE

BAKU, Nov. 13 (AP)—Azerbaijan, heretofore one of the most backward states in Europe, has embarked upon extensive irrigation, railroad, engineering and agricultural enterprises which are eventually expected to rank it with the more advanced sister state of Georgia.

One of the government's greatest problems is to reduce the illiteracy of the people. Only ten per cent of the population is able to read and write. For centuries the country has lagged behind all its neighbors in intellectual progress. In an effort to simplify education of illiterate classes, the complicated Arabic alphabet has been substituted for the more simple Roumanic characters. Education of all classes is now compulsory.

Development of Azerbaijan is enhanced by the fact that the state has no political problems, the currency has been stabilized and all minorities have been given equality of position and opportunity in the promotion of national life.

The principal industries are agriculture and fishing. The state has nearly 200,000 acres of cotton under cultivation and the soviet government is spending $20,000,000 on irrigation. The state is now producing several million pounds of caviar annually.

M. D. Orakhelashvili, president of the Trans-Caucasian republics which embrace Azerbaijan, Georgia and Armenia, said the Karata-Kaloki canal now being built will irrigate 150,000 acres. Several new railroad lines are under construction, the most important of which is the Julf-Baku line which will link western Persia with Baku and other Caspian ports.

The part the American Near East Relief organization has played in forming the foundation for Azerbaijan's development is praised on every hand. Among the most destitute and ignorant the care which the relief offered through the American people is understood and appreciated. In these people, said Mr. Orakhelashvilli, will be found the best expression of thanks and appreciation for the help given the thousands of orphans and refugees in this part of the world.

Hymn of Hate

Cranberry pie, or apricot,
We love them not; we hate them not.
Of all the victuals in pot or plate,
There's only one that we loath and hate.
We love a hundred, we hate but one—
And that we'll hate 'till our race is run—

Bread Pudding!

It's know to you all, it is known to you all.
It casts a gloom, and it casts a pall;
By whatso name they mark the mess,
You take one taste and you give on guess.
Come, let us stand in the Wailing Place,
A vow to register, face to face:
We will never forego our hate
Of that tasteless fodder we execrate—

Bread Pudding!

Cranberry pie, or apricot—
Some folks like 'em, and some folks not.
They're not so bad if they're made just right,
Though they don't enkindle our appetite;
But you we hate with a lasting hate,
And never will we that hate abate:
Hate of the tooth and hate of the jaw—
Hate of the palate, and hate of the maw.
Hate of the millions who've choked down
In country kitchen or house in town.
We love a thousand, we hate but one—
With a hate more hot than the hate of Hun—

Bread Pudding!

A Lesson in Tatting

She was just a beginner at tatting,
That dear little daughter of mine,
And auntie had brought her a pattern,
Perfect and daintily fine.
Shuttle and thread were all ready,
Workbox stood handily by,
And to copy that wonderful sample
Small hands were eager to try.

There was silence for more than a minute,
Measured by grandfather's clock,
And in its snug nook by the window
Her chair had forgotten to rock,
Puckered her brow with the puzzle,
Poised was her shuttle in air,
As my wee daughter studied her pattern
Closely, with scrupulous care.

A sigh, and the problem was ended.
"It's lovely as lovely can be;
But I think I will keep it to look at,
Until I grow up to it, see?
'Cause, you know, when upstairs I am climbing,
I take just one step at a time.
That's the way when we're learning to do things,"
Explained my wise daughter, aged nine.

And I smiled as I thought that the lesson
Is one we should all understand.
One step at a time in life's stairway,
One duty, one task, next at hand.
Lead up to the goal where perfection
Shall crown all endeavors in one.
As we stand on the heights with the victors,
And the beautiful is done.

A Consecration of Talents

Dear Lord, we bring to Thee our gifts
In humble gratitude and trust.
If we but use them for ourselves
They fall to ashes and as dust.

Our choicest talents we would bring,
Assured thou will not pass them by.
Some have a hand that's skilled to wield;
Some speak with tongues; some prophesy.

Some, working miracles in words,
Or with a pallet and a brush,
Have entered many a troubled heart
And left a benediction's hush.

And some have voices, we would lift
To sing Thy praise, and never tire,
Or instruments of pipe or string
Like David's harp or Jubal's lyre.

And thou who blessed a lad's few loaves
To make them feed a fainting throng,
Bless these our gifts to worthy use.
That they may swell Thy triumph song.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Dear Corner Sisters: I am enjoying the Corner because its spirit of thoughtfulness appeals to me very strongly I venture to contribute a few suggestions, hoping that they may benefit some of the readers.

It is foregard to Christmas, that wonderful season of gifts and giving that I wish to write.

When searching for something new or suitable for Christmas gifts we very often fail to take advantage of possibilities within our immediate reach. Most everyone has in her or his possession certain articles which lend themselves admirably for gift purposes.

For instance: I have discovered that enlargements and prints of kodak pictures, special occasions or of some one or something which bring pleasant memories, are received with much enthusiasm.

When showing to relatives or friends pictures which I have taken during the summer vacation or on a trip or some outing, I try to find out from every individual which ones he or she likes best and I do the same when they show me their snapshots. Some time later I ask them to loan me those negatives plus negatives of pictures which I personally prefer, selecting of course only those that are "clear" and have possibilities for enlarging. In this manner I obtain quite a variety of subjects to choose from.

Then, after I have them printed—some enlarged—and finished dull in "silver tone" or French gray, I color tea as I just love to dab with paintah, and have some framed, some put in harmonizing folders and others in calendar shields. If not colored they are equally charming when finished in "silver tone" buff or sepia and framed or mounted accordingly.

A very novel, changeable calendar can be made with an assortment of three or four prints, perfect in their original size—one to be inserted in the calendar shield, the others in an envelope marked with the word "extras" or "addition."

Another gift suggestion is to collect artistic covers and pictures from pediadicals. Some magazines offer fine reproductions of famous paintings. Some of these, when mounted and framed would make charming pictures—or, one of these could be inserted between the bottom and glass of a tray, in that way transforming a plain article into an "object d'Art."

A very unusual gift is an art portfolio, containing from 10 to 12 of these reproductions. The front and back covers are two pieces of thick card or bristol board of quiet tone, or covered entirely with paper of fancy design or linen; a narrow strip of heavy linen forms the back, connecting the two pieces, and on the front cover one of the reproductions is pasted. Two ends of strong ribbon, or linen tape are glued to each cover to form the tie-bows. Ten or twelve reproductions, each carefully attached (tops only) to a piece of good quality drawing paper of neutral tone form the loose leaves, with the title of the painting, name or artist, museum, etc., written or painted neatly below the reproduction.

The result is well worth the effort and time required to make this gift, a real art treasure.

My third gift suggestion asks for a small space in the garden and a few packages of "straw flower" and Globe Amaranth seeds. The most popular shades of the first are rose and white, and the latter come in purple, striped and mixed. The seeds with printed culture directions can be obtained from any seed house and require very simple care. Just let them grow and when well matured pick flowers and hang them in bunches, heads down, in cellar to dry. This is something which to my mind, appeals just as much to the little girl as to her grown sister, and who would not love to receive a bouquet of these sweet, everlasting little flowers?

They certainly make dainty gifts when tied in bunches with a bit of tinsel ribbon, tucked in folds of soft white tissue in a holly box, or when arranged in a tiny lustre bowl. An adorable gift from little girl or big girl to mother or grandmother or some invalid or shut-in.

CLUB N. 9'S BIG MEETING

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: Wish to thank our genial editor for his courteor and kind suggestions. The weather, man, favored us with a smiling face, as it was a beautiful day, Nov. 4th when members of the Social Corner and guests met at Buckingham Memorial with a good attendance of what is now Club No. 9. Truth was an ideal hostess and with her partner Plain Jane and helpers served a delicious dinner of beef loaf, escalloped potatoes, potato salad, pickles, rolls, coffee, pie and cake that would melt in your mouth. Then we had music with congregational singing. That is all that could sing, sang. Fidelity read a few pieces and I think she was "the belle of the ball," though Bridge was not far behind, as there were three cheers given for her when she presented table cloths hemmed and ready for use to the club. They also voted to pay to the commander of Sedgwick Post the equivalent of two months rent as they need the money for repairs. We had the grand march, and it was a grand march in every sense of the word. A rising vote of thanks was given Honey Dew, the young lady who so kindly played the piano for us. It was a very sociable Social Corner gathering with everyone smiling and saying, "Haven't we had a good time!" Personally I think it was one of the best meetings I have attended. Alta read the report which was satisfactory and accepted.

At our next meeting Fidelity is to be our hostess.

We closed our meeting by singing The Star Spangled Banner.

No! Cecil Brunner. Good for another side swipe.

Windham Blue Belle: Missed you. Heard several inquiring for you.

Whirlwind and Foxclove: Was disapointed in not seeing you.

Best wishes for the Social Corner.

WURDY BELLE.

GREETINGS FROM KOCHIE

Dear Social Corner Friends: Before the holidays get here, and the days get too busy, I will drop a line, to let my dear friends know that I am still among you in thought, and enjoy every letter that is written. Glad to see some of the older members appear in the weekly page.

Balsam Fir: Many thanks for those interesting clippings and nice letters to me.

Cretia: Up in Willimantic, how are you these days? This may surprise you, but not me, for you reside on Pleasant street; now guess who I am, and our friend out in Burnside, Ct., where are you, husking corn, or busy telling fireside stories?

So. Rural Auntie has turned into a radio bug. Good for her. They certainly are wonderful entertainers, a great blessing for shutins, who have to stay at home most of their time. They tell me, that Historian, has met with a great loss by losing his horse, which has been a faithful friend for the past eight years. Now, Historian, you may harness that horse up which has stood in the barn for over a year, before he forgets what a harness is.

Ma of Greene Gables: How are you, and how is the chicken business coming on? I hope better than mine for I think mine have joined the union and gone on a strike for not an egg for over a month and eggs at 80 cents a dozen make a loaf of cake taste something like money.

I guess I have chatted enough this morning, and will ring off for others perhaps might enjoy the line.

With best wishes to the Corner.

MORE INTERESTED THAN EVER

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I have not written you for some time, not that I have lost interest in the Corner for I am more interested than ever. I look forward to our meetings at the Buckingham each month with pleasure. What a jolly crowd we were. That grand march was truly a great success, proving the old saying, —practice makes perfect.

Fidelity: I bet your shoes needed tapping the next day.

Prudence: I was fearful for your vocal chords, but you responded so gracefully to the many encores.

Wurdy Belle: I surely did envy you that number two piece of pie, or was it number three? Please sit on the stairs next time.

Plain Jane: I liked your apron and when I am hostess would like to look as nice and trim. Wasn't it fine of Bridge and Prudence to donate the lovely tablecloths?

Alta: You are all right.

Windham Blue Belle: We certainly missed the mince pie, but not nearly as much as your always friendly greeting to one and all.

We will look for you Dec. 1st.

Hoping to meet with you at the Buckingham next month will say au revoir.

SNOWFLAKE.

OLD SOUTH KILLINGLY CEMETERY

Dear Social Corner Friends: Have been thinking for a long time of writing to you but didn't seem to get around to it.

First, I am going to thank the editor for my Social Corner pin. I like it very much.

The poetry in last Saturday's Bulletin sent in by Twice Twenty reminds me of a time years ago, when Cactus Blossom read those verses. It was at a neighborhood gathering at the "Garden of Eden."

There was a fire in the fire place in the north bed room, and while she was reading my sister and I would run in once in a while and stand in front of the fire and watch the sparks go up the chimney. She read other poetry at that time which seemed to please the audience very much. Do you remember it Cactus Blossom?

I was told a few days a that the first white settlement in this part of the country was at South Killingly, and that the old cemetery there has been used for that purpose three times. First for the Indians, then for the first white settlers, before it was used for the people now buried there. Do any of the Social Corner members know anything about this?

Twice Twenty: I am feeling much better just at present thank you. I had a fine time at the picnic at your home. I look every Saturday for a letter from you. I am glad you could have a vacation; I think every one ought to have one. I would like to go across lots, through the woods, from the Garden of Eden to the Tillinghast place as I used to when a girl. Did you ever go that path? Perhaps we would get lost as some other folks did in that part of the country. I shall be looking for that letter.

I will close as I know that Nelly Grey will want a lot of room for her letter.

Harry E: Why don't you write?

Good luck and best wishes to all.

TESTED AND ORIGINAL RECIPES

Dear Sisters: I am sending my recipe for cooking spinach. You will find it can be converted into tempting novelty for the table by the addition of curds and cheese. First it must be prepared in the usual manner, well washed, boiled in salted water, dried thoroughly and then chopped fine. If a half-peck of spinach has been used, four tablespoons of butter, a cup of fresh curds out of which the water has been pressed. Six teaspoons of grated cheese and the yolks of three eggs are required. Mix these together. Put the chopped spinach in a sauce pan, add the other ingredients and stir until hot. Place aside until cold. Then form the spinach into small balls, roll them in flour and drop into a sauce pan of boiling waters. As they cook they will rise to the surface. When they are to be lifted out of the strainer, place on toast sprinkle with cheese, and either melted butter or white sauce should be poured over them.

Cocoanut Taffy: 2 cups brown sugar, 1 pint molasses, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 pint freshly grated cocoanut.

Cook this all together very slowly for about an hour, until the temperature is 240 and the mixture threads when dropped from a spoon. It must be stirred almost constantly during the last half hour of cooking, for it burns very easily. Pour out into buttered tins sprinkled with cocoanut and let cool. Then knead the candy, working in as much cocoanut as you can (we found that we used up a pound package for this recipe.) Pull or knead until the taffy is a light brown in color, pull off small portions, roll into balls of twist in amusing shapes and place on waxed paper. These are more attractive if each piece is rolled in powdered sugar or cocoanut.

A light and delicious crust for cheese cake, as well as for pies of all kinds, may be made by mixing any of the flaked ready-cooked breakfast foods with half the quantity of thick cream, and lining the buttered pans with the paste thus formed. Pour in the filling as soon as the paste has spread. While the filling is cooking the breakfast food will dry out, but retain body enough to make it serve well as an under crust. It is as crisp and delicious as the lightest puff paste, and requires none of the same trouble to prepare. The wet paste may be frilled about the edges of the ordinary pie and will look like puff paste when baked.

Scotch Scones: Mix and sift 1 quart of flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 2 teaspoons salt. Sift this three times. Now chop into this 4 tablespoons of butter and moisten with 1 1-2 cups of milk. Place on a floured board, roll out about one inch thick, cut into triangular shapes or pieces, bake on a soapstone griddle and butter while hot.

Crab (a la Normand): Take 1 can of crab meat; add 1 sliced onion, 1 carrot, chopped, 2 springs parsley and 1 bay leaf. A few pepper corns, and 1 tablespoons butter. When done, beat the yolks of 2 eggs with a little cream; add salt and a pinch of cayenne; remove meat and all on a platter add 1-2 cup cream; but let get very hot and serve at once, eat with lemon.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS

Dear Social Corner Members: A use can be discovered for almost every thing. Of course the stock kettle receives the bones, the bits of meat too small for a second serving, celery stalks, odds and ends of vegetables, (dry the celery leaves and put them by until you need them) also the water most vegetables are cooked in. Save even a tablespoon of cereal and add it to a clear stock to give variety to your soups. Save cold rice, a cupful will make rice batter cakes with flour, eggs and milk added, rice croquettes, or egg rice pudding.

Even such a problematic left over as a cold boiled egg or a cold fried one can be chopped up and put into the soup kettle. Left over soft boiled eggs should be hard boiled 29 minutes, dropped in cold water to keep from turning black and made into "golden-rod," creamed or deveied egg. If there is only one left over egg, hard boil it just the same. It makes a delicious salad dressing.

When I buy lettuce I plan to use the tender inside leaves first, either alone or with sliced tomatoes, cucumbers or other salad accessories. Wash the outside leaves carefully tear off the brown spots and they will do nicely for egg salad.

The seasonings play an important part in making left overs easily into palatable and substantial dishes. A dash of Worcester sauce, a few drops of Kichen pepper, curry, powdered mace, celery salt, paprika, pepper, onion, garlic parsley. Cooking sherry lemon and tomato all enter at times into service. Practice soon determines the flavoring for which the family has preference.

It is a great help in the matter of dish-washing to have a number of little brown dishes lined with white for baking in the size to suit your family. Instead of soiling several extra dishes and saucepans putting remnants away in the refrigerator, taking them out to mince of slice or look over and finally warming them up, try them this way. When coming from the table putting them directly into the baking dish from the original platter upon which they were served, cover with a paraffin paper, and when you wish to get a meal in a hurry all you have to do is add the seasoning and sauce. Baking is a more hygenic method of warming over than frying.

GREETINGS FROM PRIMROSE

Dear Social Corner Folks: I have been very busy since I last wrote you and the time has gone rapidly. But however much there is to do, I always take time to read the Corner page on Saturday. A word to say to Rural Delivery and Okie that we have not gone far, only to another street, about ten minutes walk from where we were. We have a smaller, more cosy apartment for the long, cold winter that is prophesied ahead of us.

Ariel: Your description of Squaw rocks was very interesting and brought to mind two very enjoyable visits there with Last Rose of Summer and other friends. I was so glad that Eve arrived in New England in time to enjoy the picnic at Wildwood with us.

Roberip: Thank you. We are your neighbors still, in thought, at least.

Roseland: Your and uncle must come and see us in your old home. Had we waited awhile longer, we might have been nearer neighbors than ever before.

Curt: Have you forgotten you belong to the Corner? The sisters, especially those of Club No. 4, would like to hear about your new home.

Last Rose of Summer: What a lot we accomplished the other afternoon! If we keep on, we may set the world afire yet.

Twice Twenty: You have given us something very pleasant to think about in suggesting a picnic at your cottage for next sumer.

The closing thought in Rural Aunty's letter telling us to make the best of our surroundings reminds me of the following parable:

A violet spoke at the foot of a sturdy oak. One day the oak said, "Are you not ashamed, little thing, when you look up at me and see how big and strong I am, to think how small you are, how little space you fill?" "No," said the violet, "for we are both what God has made us—you big, I little; and we are both where God has placed us; and we have both what God has given us,—you strength, I fragrance."

With best wishes and Thanksgiving greetings to all.

HINTS WORTH REMEMBERING

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: Just a few hints, here and there, that may be helpful as they may find place.

To identify dishes or silver which you loan to a public gathering, or send to a friend, place a piece of adhesive plaster on the bottom, having marked your initials with ink. Ordinary washing will not remove the plaster, but later a warm place will melt the gum.

If your thimble is a little too large for your finger try a small piece of adhesive tape around the inside edge. When putting on children's rubbers to save time and fingers, use a shoe horn, the same as for slippers. When the tip comes off the shoe lacing, try a little melted sealing wax to make a new tip.

The tea kettle can be nicely cleaned by rubbing it with kerosene and then polished with a dry flannel.

To water plants in a hanging basket, try putting a small tin funnel in the soil and fill this with water, and there will be no splattering over and onto the floor. To keep rugs from turning up at the ends use coat weights at each corner, which will keep them in place.

A bedspread worn at the edges, but in good condition in the center, may be converted into a very pretty, table cover, by trimming off the worn portions, and then dyed some attractive color. When prepairing Hamburg steak, add equal quantity of ground raw potato. It improves the taste, and goes farther. When a pie has run out in the oven sprinkle a little salt over the juice and it will prevent filling the oven with smoke and odor.

Shredded cocoanut that has become hard and dry may be restored soft, by putting in a small sieve and steam then cool off.

To prevent icing cooking down the sides of a cake, just pin a piece of waxed paper tightly around the cake, then after putting on the icing, leave the paper, until the icing is firmly set, then remove and a smooth edge will be the result. When you want something out of the ordinary, for a dainty attraction add to your menu the following.

Candlestick Salad: On a slice of pineapple, place half a banana (upright). Top with a maraschino cherry, and serve with a French dressing.

MAKING SURE OF MEMBERSHIP

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: It has been a long time since I wrote to the Corner. I can't seem to follow the rule of writing once a month.

Am afraid I shall loose my membership if I don't get busy, although I read the letters each week and find them very interesting.

We had a very cold October with two snow storms. Hope this month will be some what milder. It surely has started in lovely.

My symphathy are with those that have lost dear ones, and all those that are on the sick list I hope will soon be well again.

O. H. O.: I think of you often and hope you are nearly well by this time. Are you still at the hospital? I will try and write you again soon.

Frozen: I don't see your name in the Corner lately.

Diana: I hope you are better and will be able to write again soon.

Balsam Fir: How are you? I always look for your letters in the Corner for we don't have many that write from our own state.

Wish I was able to attend some of your gatherings. I think of you when you meet and think what jolly good times you have.

Will ring off now, with best wishes to all the sisters and the editor.

PLANNING FOR CHRISTMAS

Dear Social Corner Sisters: At this season of the year I wonder how many mothers are beginning to dread the thoughts of their Christmas shopping and the confusion there usually is at that time, besides doing her household duties, and keeping the children clean and tidy.

Being the mother of three children and having a large circle of friends and relatives to whom we give presents, I have adopted a plan which wrks very successfully. Perhaps it will help other mothers.

After my Christmas list is completed I divide them into classes. The children's class, the boys and girls, the ladies and the gentlemen.

Then, when I take a day to shop I spend that entire day for purchasing gifts of one class. For instance, one day is spent in the toy department for the small children. The next trip to town perhaps is for books for the older girls and boys, etc. The Christmas list is soon finished and I don't purchase something that I regret afterward, as one often does when shopping in haste or too late in the season.

Yours for the Corner.

MARY JANE

Women have a peculiar knack of picking out goods that will wash, but they usually get children that won't.

SHOULD CELEBRATE ARMISTICE DAY

Dear Editor and Cornerites: Seven years ago was a day of rejoicing when the world received the glad news that peace had been declared, and it seems to me as if, each year on the eleventh of November we should wake up and do something in honor of this great day. Last year Norwich had a wonderful parade and it seems to me, it should have been the same this year. I don't think we can do enough for "Our Boys" who fought so long and hard for us, when so many thousands lost their lives fighting for Old Glory. I sincerely hope the people of Norwich will wake up and not let this great day go by another year, without celebrating.

A woman said to me a few days ago: "Norwich is dead. You better hang a black rag on the railroad station and let all trains pass by." This women does not belong in Norwich. This remark hurt me, as Norwich is the place of my birth and I certainly love every inch of it, so let us hope another year Norwich will be up and doing.

This morning I was asked over the phone about hanking our flag out the window, if the field should be to the left or right. Perhaps some one else would like to ask the same question, so I will say, as you face the flag the field should be to the left.

Maple Leaf: Your cake was simply great. Make another loaf.

Bonie: It seemed so good to hear your voice again.

Wireless: Hope you will come again and bring Mrs. D. with you; also your music.

Strawberry: Hope you are much better. Yours for patriotism.

WETONA.

USES FOR SUGAR SACKS

Dear Corner members: How many of you are thinking about Christmas this early? I am, and here are a few gifts I have decided to make out of the numerous sugar sacks (25 lbs.) that have the habit of collecting in the kitchen drawer. First, bleach as well as possible.

1. Leave double for bibs—finish with odds and ends of colored tapé.
2. Make Baby Pillow Cases—add tatted or crocheted edges.
3. One sack will make four child's handkerchiefs—etch an animal in the corner.
4. For wash clothes, leave double but cut in two and crochet around.

Large sugar and flour sacks may be bought just around the corner at the bakery for 5c per. Perhaps you all use them for dish wipers. Have you tried them for the following:

1. Ironing board covers.
2. Aprons for little daughter, or even rompers.
3. Underwaists for the children, and bloomers.
4. Even curtains for the kitchen or bath may be made by appliquaing attractive designs.
5. Use two sacks for baby's quilt—batten between; tie through the center; bind edges to match the ties.
6. They are durable for the little table doll's clothes, too.

If you don't like the original color, you may easily dye your products.

How many mothers are puzzling over little son's allowance? Here is a plan I have struck upon and find it works fine so far. As he grows older, I expect it will need to be adjusted.

Each Sunday I put 14c in his box. He is only six years old. He takes 2c to Sunday school. Each Tuesday he takes 3c to school to be added to his bank account. He has the privilege of spending the rest as he wishes. Instead of spending it all, his pennies are growing quite fast. He is saving them for a "koaster"—a definite purpose!

Fourteen cents (14c) may seem small. From experience, our neighbor children have too much money. They don't know the value of it. It comes easily, goes easier.

Let's organize mentally, and hold a steady rein on our boys and girls so that the future generation may be a little more settled and satisfied than the present one.

BRIGHT SPOTS ON OASIS OF LIFE

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I have been perusing the sisters letters and as usual am filled with a desire to write more frequently, but am unable to do so. Surely "the spirit is willing but the flesh is weak". Well, the year is waning, the beautiful summer is gone, followed by sleepy eyed September, bright, beautiful October, with blue skies and sunny days, when the sunshine filters down through bright hued foliage, simulating a stained-glass window, painted by the artistic hand of nature. Now October has merged into November with its changable scenery and dull gray days.

"The leaves are drifting, to their rest.
For frost is in the air,
As nature folds her tired hands,
And breathes an autumn prayer."

I have pleasant memories of the kindness and courtesy of many of the sisters, for their remembrance of my birthday, Oct. 7th.

I would like to write each one personally, but of course that is impossible. I sent a card to Joan, who had a birthday the 13 of October. I thank the sister from Dry Mills, Maine, for the pretty little booklet of views form "the foothills of the White Mountains." I am very fond of pictures of that kind, and the sender was so thoughtful to send a few pressed flowers. Many thanks. A little thing like that reaches the heart of a shut-in and leaves a bright spot on the oasis of life. November holds many possibilities for pleasure and happiness if we try to make the best of things as they come. Surely we can look forward to our sacred Thanksgiving day. We all have so much to be thankful for. May the same spirit that awoke the Pilgrims to thankfulness, make our hearts glad on Thanksgiving day.

"May every day Thanksgiving be
For blessings given unto thee."

With love and best wises to all.

CARING FOR CHILDREN

Dear Cornerites: It seems to me that I would be "lost" without this section of the paper. I am very busy mother and the benefits that I have derived from the corner are innumerable.

I don't believe that the subject that I am to speak of has ever been mentioned and that is, taking care of children for your neighbors. I wonder if you realize how anxious mothers with several little children are to get their shopping done. The shopping, which is quite a task for some people, is just the first step towards the tremendous amount of work which the holidays bring to mother.

There are several women without children, who grow selfish and do not care to bother with these little darlings but you would be surprised to see how cheerful they would make your home for a day. If they do upset your house, what of it? Think of their mother who has to pick up after them three hundred and sixty-five days a year.

I think if people were a little more thoughtful toward tired, worn-out mothers the whole world would be benifited in everyone depends upon mother.

DEPARTED MEMBERS

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: I was very much pleased to see so many of the sisters present at the Buckingham, Nov. 4th and they all seemed to be so happy. The menu was par excellence, with plenty of good food to supply the inner man. A happy greeting and a bright smile brings gladness to the soul.

Dear sisters, the year 1925 is nearly gone, there has been taken from our midst several dear Corner sisters whose thoughts we cherish and whose presence we miss, but they have answered the call to a higher life, there to dwell with Him in a mansion not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

Dear Cornerites let us so live that we may inherit the Kingdom prepared for those who live in Him and He in them.

PRUDENCE, (Club 5.)

SUGGEST BIRTHDAY OBSERVANCES

Dear Social Corner: It is sometime since I have written. I want to thank Aries for the pretty birthday card she sent me. I do not seem to know who she is, but hope to know her soon. I am disappointed to think that I cannot attend the best meeting but do not see how I can. I wonder what the Social Corner sisters will think about celebrating birthdays each month at the regular meetings in some way. I do not know just how. As I have suggested it, some others can express their opinons about how it could be carried out. I might help out on the entertainment part of our meetings there probably would be several birthdays in each month. If this meets with approval why not get it started the first meeting in the new year. It would be starting the meetings a little different for next year. It seems as if it may be quite interesting to think it over and see how it can be carried out.

Best wishes to all.

MEXICAN RAILWAY OIL OUTPUT MORE THAN IS USED FOR FUEL

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 13—(AP)—Lands of the Mexican National Railways are producing more oil than the railways use for fuel in an oil company, a subsidiary to the railways, has been organized to develop the railways' oil properties.

New wells are being sunk. Government officials hope that when the railways are returned by the government to their former private ownership the developed oil properties will be sufficiently valuable to offset some of the losses and depreciations in the railways.

Properties owned by the National Railways include both coal and oil fields.

Watercress Major Crop

Watercress is one of the major crops of England and London and Liverpool consume large quantities of the plant daily. Londoners consume between 20,000 and 30,000 bunches a day, the supply coming chiefly from Essex, Kent, Hertfordshire and Bedfordshire. The French eat about five times as much per capita as do the English.

A cheap coat doesn't necessarily make a cheap man, but it makes him feel that way at times.

WESTERLY

FINED FOR FAILURE TO BECOME LICENSED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 13.—Judge Michael J. Turano took up the trial calendar in the regular Friday morning session in Third district court in Westerly and three complaints were heard before trial was taken up on the criminal charge against Joseph Sylvestre. The latter case was not completed until 5:45 o'clock in the afternoon when the respondent was found not probably guilty by Judge Turano. At the opening of this criminal complaint trial, Attorney John Ferguson, Jr., town solicitor, announced that old complaints, brought several weeks ago were discontinued without costs. In court a new warrant was brought charging Joseph Sylvestre of Pawcatuck, on or about the 21st of September with feloniously and wantonly abusing and assaulting Hattie Handy, 16, of Westerly. Previous to placing the case on trial everybody was excluded from the court room with the exception of witnesses.

George Pyzyr, 39, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was called to the stand, being one of a trio arrested by Westerly Police Patrolman George H. Champlin on Friday morning on Pierce street, charged with peddling without a license. He entered a plea of "guilty" and asked for an explanation. Town Solicitor John Ferguson, Jr., told the court that the trio sold linoleum and that the Westerly police department was bothered with men coming to Westerly. He said that these men should secure licenses, not only for the people of the town and as well for the merchants. The respondent claimed that he did not know that licenses were required as they had an ex service man in the party. Judge Turano, in finding him guilty, sentenced him to pay a fine of $20 and costs $2.80 added.

Charles Goldberg, 25, entered a plea to "guilty," saying that he was only the chauffeur for the party. He was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $20.

Harry Silver, 29, pleaded "guilty" and said that he was the ex-service man of the group who were in the automobile peddling together, in finding him guilty Judge Turano said that he should have taken out a license first as the law required, but in his case no fee was required. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $20 and costs.

Third district court in Westerly was held in sections Friday, the court being in session a few minutes then adjourning to wait for a witness and then proceeding again with a noon recess from 12:15 to 1:45 o'clock with a final adjournment for the day at 3:45 o'clock.

"the ultimate engine"!

Since the day the first one-cylinder car ran under its own power, the best engineering brains on earth have been striving to improve the engine . . .

The one-cylinder car ran, and that was all. The two-cylinder car was noisy as a stone-crusher. Next came the "four-in-line." But, its ailments were many—Valve-grinding was a monthly rite. Carbon, a scourge. And every automotive engineer worthy of the name was determined to get rid of them . . .

FOLLOWED rapidly a myriad of improvements. Heretofore, all engines had been of the "T-head" variety. They ate gasoline and oil like a high-powered yacht and they wasted half of it . . .

THEN ALONG CAME one who moved both intake and exhaust valves to the same side of the cylinder. He cut off the overhanging cave—and presto!—the "L-head" motor. A tremendous gain in power. But owners still had to have their valves ground and their carbon periodically scraped away even as all, save "the elect," do nowadays . . .

ANOTHER TOOK the valves off the side, put them on the cylinder-top, and cut off the other overhanging gas-chambers. Hence "valve-in-head." But still valve-grinding. And carbon troubles. It crept under the valves. The faces became pitted. To maintain efficiency—carbon must be scraped as of old, and frequently . . .

FINALLY—the new school of thought in motor-design. Came an engine-idea which absolutely and completely revolutionized the automobile engine! . . . Charles Y. Knight produced and patented the sleeve-valve engine . . . "I'll go them all one better," said he. "At one fell swoop I'll scrap all those cams and push-rods, all those springs and rocker-arms—and by making a cylinder-head with but a single opening for the spark-plugs, I'll increase compression" . . .

RESULT:

. . . Multiplicity of valve-parts completely disappeared. Exit valve-grinding . . . No more pounding cams—noise cut to nothing . . . Absence of all spring pressure—added horsepower . . . And carbon troubles, the disease and eventual death of all other motors, were cured, once and for all. Carbon cannot harm the engine of a Willys-Knight. It is actually a helpful agent. It serves to seal compression. Its only effect is to better this engine's functioning!

IT IS NOT EFFICIENCY to constantly tear down so fine a mechanism as a high-powered motor for the removal of a foreign substance and the grinding-away of its metal . . .

IT IS NOT EFFICIENCY to have from 65 to 118 more engine parts when 65 to 118 parts less can be made to serve the same purpose better . . .

IT IS NOT EFFICIENCY to have from 40 to 50 pieces of metal coming together in violent contact many times a second, causing distasteful noise, damaging vibration . . .

IT IS NOT EFFICIENCY to depend on coiled springs to open and close a valve-mechanism 1100 times a minute. Those coils must weaken. That is inevitable, with every coil or recoil . . .

IT IS NOT EFFICIENCY to carry valves requiring periodic and costly adjustment to the fraction of a hair—nor to depend upon small inadequate poppet-ports for intake and exhaust service . . .

IT IS NOT EFFICIENCY to be obliged to lose the use of your car for hours and days, at the same time contributing easily one-half of the repairman's total yearly income as he grinds your valves and corrects your carbon complications . . .

In the patented sleeve-valve engine of the Willys-Knight are two metal sleeves operating with a gliding motion. . . Nothing to adjust. Nothing to replace on repair. . . Simply two single sleeves working smoothly, silently, up and down, one within the other, in a protective film of oil. For fine automobiles, the ultimate engine is the simplest engine. And the Knight sleeve-valve engine—the power-plant of your Willys-Knight—is the simplest of them all!

PLAINFIELD

HELD CHARGED WITH ROBBING ROBERT JAMES

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, Nov. 13—John Jollcoer, "Silver" Jolly, and Harry Beckett, of this place, are in jail as the result of the smart detective work of Officer Urghardt of the state police, in regard to the recent holdup and robbery of Robert James. The three met James, who is a saw mill owner and resident of Windsor avenue, Monday night, in a local lunch-wagon and induced him to go to the rear of Mercier's drug store to drink Jamaica ginger and moonshine and when James was sufficiently intoxicated wanted him to go for a ride but instead James went to the home of his brother-in-law, Mr. Reynolds, of Windsor avenue.

At 10 o'clock James decided to take a walk and started for the state road with the trio behind at a safe distance. When in front of the former Tillinghast store, Beckett jumped on James and with the aid of Jollcoer held him down while Jolly went through his clothing for his money.

After getting the wallet Jolly ran toward Academy hill and later the others followed. When the trio assembled Jolly notified them that there was only $15 in the wallet, which was evenly divided among them. Tearing up papers and throwing them away with the wallet, which Officer Urghardt has since recovered, Jolly kept the rest of the $178 which was in the wallet.

The case comes up at Central village court at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, but being out of the jurisdiction of the court they will probably be held in a large bond for appearance before the superior court of Windham county.

The penalty for this offense, as stated by Officer Urghardt, is seven years in the state penitentiary. It is alleged that both Jollcoer and Jolly have prison records.

The men were placed in jail at 4 o'clock this afternoon, less than seven hours after Officer Urghardt started on the case and after Mr. James had sworn out a warrant for the men alleged to have assaulted and robbed him.

The High school seniors have selected the characters for the play "Penrod," and a schedule of rehearsals have been arranged. Kineeling, Raymond Dawley.

George Babcock, station agent, and Thomas Cooper, crossing tender, were in New Haven, Thursday, being summoned to testify at the hearing in regards to the accident in which Mr. and Mrs. Henry Derrance, of Plainfield, lost their lives last year.

The Plainfield Community house bowling team won their first match of the season by defeating the Meeany bowling team with a total score of 1,445 to 1,358. The Plainfield team was Allard, A. Beausoliel, R. Beausoliel, Moffit and Walsh. A. Beausoliel rolled high three, and Fred Walsh high single.

The Ladies' Whist club met at the home of Mrs. Edna A. Barstow, on Gallup street, Thursday evening, and enjoyed a whist and social party. First prize, a set of embroidered towels, was won by Mrs. William Southworth, of Plainfield street, and Mrs. Eva Pike was awarded consolation. After the whist the hostess served a lunch of fruit salad, cake and coffee. A committee was appointed to arrange for the next party, consisting of Mrs. Ida Pratt, Mrs. Mary Gardner, Mrs. Thomas Cooper, Mrs. Lillian Roode and Mrs. Susie Dodge.

The resignation of Phillip G. Kempel, clerk of Lawton Inn, has been tendered to take effect November 22. Mr. Kempel resigns to make it possible for him to accept a position as auditor with the American Audit company, operating at Miami and Coral Gables, Florida. Before coming to Plainfield Mr. Kempel was chief cashier at the Hotel Majestic in New York city. Ill health caused him to resign to come to the country.

George Weeks, of Canterbury, recently caught a coon weighing 26 1-2 pounds, which has been non exhibition in a local store window.

Jerry Peltier, who was at his home in Plainfield, with a fractured jaw for many weeks, has returned to Englewood, N. J., to resume his position as tree surgeon. The fracture was the result of an automobile accident.

OVER 70 YEARS OF SUCCESS

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago this week in Norwich was a quiet one. Little out of the ordinary happened to disturb the peace and quiet of the town. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Bulletin of November, 1875, are as follows:

Monday, Nov. 8, 1875—It is not generally known here that the south is manufacturing cotton goods. Large quantities of cotton cloth from Georgia and other states are being shipped through the city for sale in the Boston markets.

Both lines of the horse railroad are being thoroughly repaired. The road is being paved near the car shops and a force of men are at work on the Bean Hill route. Wheel and sleigh coaches have been ordered for the winter when the cars cannot be run.

There are eight clocks in the different rooms in the city hall all connected with the clock in th etower and run by electricity. Since the heavy thunderstorm a few nights ago they have been out of order and are now all stopped.

Tuesday, Nov. 9, 1875—A Preston man lost sevesal young chickens within a week in a way for which he could not account. Sunday as he went into the yard he saw a large hen-hawk with a chicken in its claws. He pulled out his revolver and fired and wounded the hawk so that it dropped the poultry and finally got away.

Work is to begun yesterday on the east abutment of the Preston bridge. New stone will be put in and the work will be generally strengthened. There is much need for it, for yesterday afternoon the sidewalk, just east of the bridge caved in showing that the foundation is very weak there. The trouble is supposed to have originated from a leaking water pipe.

A horse owned by William A. Lee of Sprague, took fright on Church street yesterday afternoon and ran away. The wagon collided with a hydrant and broke it, and was finally separated from the horse near Sanderson's barn in a badly wrecked condition. No one was in it at the time.

Wednesday, Nov. 10, 1875—Norwich people who have been in Paris will be pained to learn that the Marquis de Conti fell dead recently while kissing the hand of a French lady. This we trust will be a solemn warning to all good young men never to kiss a girl's hand when they are tall enough to reach her lips.

Yesterday morning a man very much intoxicated walked off the edge of Chappell's wharf, falling between the piles and a schooner lying nearby. He was too drunk to cry out and would undoubtedly have drowned had he not been observed by a couple of men who pulled him out with considerable difficulty and a rope.

The semi-annual meeting of the New London county branch of the Woman's board of missions will be held this morning at 10 o'clock in the lecture room of the Broadway church. Mrs. Wheeler, a missionary from Harpoot, Turkey, will make an address. At 4:30 there will be a meeting especially for young ladies and school girls, when Mrs. Wheeler is expected to give an account of her life in Turkey. All interested are invited to attend the meetings.

Thursday, Nov. 11, 1875—The New London branch of the Woman's Board of Missions held an interesting meeting in the vestry of the Broadway church, yesterday, which was largely attended. Mrs. J. N. Harris, of New London presided and a very interesting address was given by Mrs. Wheeler, of Harpoot, Turkey, followed by remarks by others. Letters from Mrs. Walker, who has a home for missionary children, excited no little interest. The meeting was exceedingly encouraging.

Wednesday a prayer meeting was held in the chapel of the Park church at 3:30 a. m., for one hour, led by the Rev. G. B. Wilcox, of Stanford. The meeting was one of deep and tender interest and there were sixteen addresses, seven prayers and six portions of hymns sung. At 5:30 the conference resumed business in the church. Tonight's union meeting will prove a happy ending to the conference.

The rain which commenced yesterday morning about 11 o'clock continued all day and evening. An immense amount of water fell, and the roads in the town are reported badly washed. The rain was one of the most violent of the season.

Friday, Nov. 12, 1875—The organ concert at Park church takes place this evening and will be an attraction to every lover of good music. The vocal part of the programme will be given by the choir, assisted by the choir club and Mr. K aseindTHTHT choir club and Mr. Kies and Mr. Beale will play the new organ which is a magnificent instrument. People will do well to secure tickets before going to the church.

The Greeneville Baptist church and society are making arrangements for an entertainment consisting of tableaux, recitations, select readings, quartettes, solos, etc., etc. The music is to be furnished by the Park church choir, under the direction of Major Learned. The entertainment will take place on Tuesday or Wednesday evening, November 16th or 17th.

The post office department has decided that a postal card cannot be sent twice through the mails to the same address by affixing an unused one cent stamp with the second sending. If it is to be sent it must be charged with letter postage.

Saturday, Nov. 13, 1875—One of the pleasant evenings of the week in Bozrah was the marriage on Wednesday of E. Judson Miner and Miss Hattie S. Johnson, daughter of Isaac Johnson, a well known citizen. Notwithstanding the storm there was a large gathering at the residence of the bride's parents. The presents were numerous and valuable.

The new barn built by Russell Rathbone, on the corner of High and Main streets, was "warmed" last evening by a dancing party, given to the owner's friends.

The docket for the superior court for the November term is published and is neatly arranged. It contains 277 cases of which 88 are new.

MAJOR O'KEEFE ON MARKETING METHODS

WORCESTER, November 13—"The greatest need of New England is the application of modern marketing methods to the distribution of her industrial products," said Major P. F. O'Keefe, president of the P. F. O'Keefe Advertising Agency, in his address on Advertising at the New England Conference in Worcester, today. He cited the Gillette Safety Razor as a striking example of success based on advertising and scientific marketing, and said that the growth of the Gillette from small beginnings was in every way as remarkable as that of the Ford Automobile. He urged that we "Gillette" every New England product that shows merit and possibilities by applying similar methods to their distribution.

"Advertising," he said, "is one of the principal factors in establishing market control, that is so essential to successful distribution. It offers a method that is quick, effective, economical, and result producing. Last year, the Ford Motor Co., Victor Talking Machine, Sun Maid Raisin Growers Asso., California Fruit Growers Asso., Wrigley's Gum, and the Coca Cola Co., spent, between them more than $6,000,000 for newspaper advertising alone." He pointed out that that large sum represented but a part of their distribution and marketing programs.

"The New England manufacturer" he said, "might eliminate printed salesmanship but he cannot eliminate its cost; because to accomplish the same results in the same time, he would have to multiply his sales force many times. Products have been placed on the market in every state in the union in 90 days by the use of printed salesmanship, and at a nominal cost compared with the cost of accomplishing the same result through solicitation.

He urged manufacturers to study scientific marketing, as in no other way can they insure the economical and effective distribution of their products. He said, "Surveys of the trade field enable the producer to estimate with accuracy the demand that exists for his product, and he can base his selling plans on definite knowledge of the consuming power of every market and for almost every commodity."

He referred to the small beginnings of some of the greatest industrial organizations in the country, the New Idea paper pattern, Stetson hats, Studebaker automobiles, Wrigley's gum, and the latest wonder, radio.

"There was no economic reason," he said, "why any one of those successes should not have originated in New England."

He called attention to the contribution made by New England brains to the industrial development of the country, and mentioned the part played by New England men in the rubber, chemical, and other industries that have since become localized in other sections of the country. He referred to the water power merger recently effected in Maine, and said we waited for a live westerner to come back here and show us what we had, although he had been criticised in the past for sending New England capital to the west in the development of similar projects.

NEW LONDON FIREMEN IN ARGUMENT OVER ASSIGNMENT OF AERIAL TRUCK

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 13.—A meeting of officers of the New London fire department was held this evening in the central fire station, the session being called because of dissension among the drivers of some of the fire companies because drivers of the Konomoc Hose company were operating the big aerial truck but recently delivered to the city and which is about ready to be put into commission. The drivers of several of the fire apparatus declare that favoritism is being shown the Konomoc drivers by giving the members of that company a preference in the matter of driving the city's latest and most modern piece of fire equipment. The matter was not settled this evening and it is probable that another meeting will occur within a short time. The Konomoc drivers now operating the aerial truck were assigned to the position by Chief Charles H. Rose.

A fellow and a stranger in this city appeared at the police station early this evening seeking lodgings for the night. He got them, but not where he anticipated he would, for the stranger was drunk and instead of getting a bunk in the tramp room he was locked in a cell to await the convening of the police court tomorrow morning when he will be arraigned on charges of vagrancy and intoxication.

Not in many months have there been as many streets in darkness as existed tonight because of the innumerable street lights failing to function. Throughout the night the police were besieged with residents complaining of the failure of the lights to illuminate.

John W. Dykes, Springfield, Mass., and Miss Ethel Pimer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Pimer, Pequot avenue, this city, were married in Providence last evening, the nuptial ceremony being performed by Rev. Theodore Bachelor in the chapel of the Union Congregational church. Upon the termination of their wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Dykes will make their future home in Providence.

Cornelius C. Costello has returned to his home, Groton Long Point, after spending several days in Boston where he attended the annual jewelry exhibition.

George, the year and nine months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Urbano Cangan, 20 Allen street, Groton, died at Lawrence Memorial Associated hospital last night after being under treatment at the institution but a short time.

John McDonough, 80, died today at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. James Thompson, Mystic. Mr. McDonough was a laborer, and had resided in Mystic his entire life. He is survived by his wife, his daughter, Mrs. Thompson; a son, Edward T. McDonough, Bloomington, and a brother, Edward E. Mellonough, New York.

Louise A. Armstrong has transferred title to a dwelling house on Warren street to Benjamin A. Armstrong.

Mrs. Donald Smith and infant daughter, Groton; Mrs. Ada Richardson, Waterford; Miss Jessie Mitchell, Niantic, and William Adams, Montville, patients at Home General hospital were discharged today.

Alfred Sullivan, Auburn, Mass., was arraigned before Judge Frederick Comstock in the Waterford town court this evening charged with breaking and entering. Probable cause was found and the accused was bound over to the next term of the superior court in bail of $1500. He was unable to procure a surety on his bond and was remanded to the county jail to await trial.

Sullivan had been seen in the vicinity of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad station yesterday afternoon and before nightfall he was observed to climb through a window of the coal office of Battin & Lemunyon, after having first broken a window. Constable Herbert Graham was notified and going to the coal office, which is located on property of the railroad, found Sullivan in the building. Captain Richard Kelly and Sergeant Edward McGrath of the railroad's force of special agents, went to Waterford and took Sullivan in charge, bringing him to the special agent's office here, where he finally confessed to breaking into the coal office. When searched credentials showing Sullivan to be a licensed stationary engineer in the state of Massachusetts was found on his person. Sullivan was made a prisoner at the New London police station and held there until the convening of the town court this evening.

Farmer Clark with a large property at Oilead, in the town of Waterford, sustained a severe loss by the burning of Thursday night. He has a large barn on his premises and in it was ten tons of grain. In the storm the building was unroofed and the rain saturated the grain so that it will be almost a total loss.

Ruby Parker, Flanders progeryman and farmer, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace George Waitrous at East Lyme this evening charged with violation of the liquor law. Because of the inability of Parker's counsel to be present tonight, the case was continued until next Tuesday and Parker held in bail of $1500 for his appearance at that time. Constable Charles R. Tubbs, who qualified as surety on Parker's bond when he was arrested refused to again become surety and another surety was obtained in a Hebrew acquaintance of Parker's. Parker has before been convicted of violation of the liquor law and has a suspended jail sentence hanging over him.

Parker was arrested by State Police Officers Fred Caron and Bernard Kenegson last Wednesday following Constable Siderman, East Lyme, alleging to have purchased a bottle of liquor at the Parker place and with Parker the salesman. A marked bill which it is claimed Siderman tendered Parker for the liquor, it is claimed, was found on the accused.

There is some talk that the recent resurfacing of Bank street may lead to an extension of that work all along Bank street if the new work proves to have wearing qualities that will warrant the expense of more work of the same sort. The work already accomplished has improved the surface of the street, which was very uneven, and has taken much of the jolt out of life for the users of automobiles.

An automobile, a commercial car, owned by Joseph Soltz, Main street merchant, and operated by Clayton Beatrice, 21 Fitch avenue, struck Virginia Picken, 4, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Picken, 464 Bank street, this afternoon, the child sustaining severe contusions of the right leg and body bruises. The girl is now a patient at Lawrence hospital. The child was crossing Bank street, near her home when the automobile ran her down, the wheels passing over her leg. The child was rushed by Beatrice to the hospital where, it was at first believed that the leg had been fractured.

The police of Chelsea, Mass., this forenoon notified the New London authorities that they had in their possession a Ford automobile, bearing registration, N-9442, Connecticut issue, which had been abandoned on one of the streets of the former city. The local police learned that the machine is registered in the name of R. E. Murphy, 42 Tilley street. Inquiry at the Tilley street house, which is a lodging house conducted by Mrs. Margaret McGarry, disclosed that Murphy, formerly resided there, but he had not been a lodger at the place since last July.

Mrs. Wlaertis Wiecszorek, came into the police court this morning with a child of a few months in her arms and one about a year older tugging at her skirts when she answered a complaint that she was cruel to her daughter Julia, a girl under 16. Mrs. Wiecszorek is the mother of nine children, so it may be assumed that she has no easy in supporting them. The daughters declare that the mother is addicted to liquor and that when she is intoxicated she is a terror. Mrs. Wiecszorek denied that she had partaken of liquor and represented that Julia attended school, did not come home at the close of the session but frequently remained about the streets till late in the evening. Be that as it may, Policewoman Jane Cassidy last evening was called to the Wiecszorek house and when she came away she had Julia with her and provided food and shelter for her till the case could be brought into the police court. The woman was fined $25 but judgment was not enforced. Instead she was told that if, during the next year she was complained against and was found to be guilty, her children would be taken from her and placed where the state would be certain they were properly treated.

Last night's rainstorm was one of the severest of the season, from early evening till about 4 o'clock this morning the downpour was incessant while the wind attained the velocity of half a gale, driving the rain before it with great force. The tide today, as a result of a southwest wind was unusually high—indeed it was higher than during the summer or fall. The volume of rain that fell increased the supply of water and Lake Konomoc, whence the city gets its drinking and household water, was raised by an inch and a-quarter. In volume this means that the lake was increased to the extent of 25,000,000 gallons. The total rainfall was 1.9 inches.

Simon Gandalex, of 899 Bank street and Mrs. Joseph Kennedy and infant son, 53 Sharaf street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial associated hospital, were dismissed today.

The funeral of Hiram H. Crocker, formerly employed as elevator operator at the Crocker House, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at 48 Shapley street. The services were conducted by Rev. Phillip M. Kerridge, rector of St. James' Episcopal church. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

The funeral of James M. Lewis, aged recluse, who was found dead in bed at his former home, 23 Rosemary street by the police who forced entrance to the place several days ago, was held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at 48 Shapley street, the services being conducted by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today caused the operator's license of Reuben Lubchansky, 217 Main street, to be returned to the owner. The license was suspended a fortnight ago following Lubchansky's automobile being in collision with another machine.

A commercial automobile, owned and driven by O. E. Neff, 16 Lincoln court and an automobile truck owned and operated by Gus Nunes, 217 Bayonet street, were in collision this morning on Williams street, near Mohegan avenue. Both machines were damaged.

Thieves gained entrance to the garage of Michael J. Doyle, contractor, Grand street, last night and stole a Yale hoist and a quantity of pipe. Entrance to the building was gained by forcing the door. Doyle discovered the burglary this morning and reported it to the police. The place was burglarized about a month ago.

SUPPOSED F. O. BURGLARS MERELY A BALKY CAR

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 13—The police early this morning received information which caused them to believe that robbers and post office clerks were engaged in a pistol battle, but such was not the case as was determined after a squad of officers had been rushed to the building.

About 3 o'clock Edgar C. Stoddard, night clerk at the Crocker house, heard what he believed was the firing of a series of shots. Telephoning the information to the police station, Stoddard declared that the firing was pistol shots and not an automobile and not the back-firing of an automobile. Post office thieves having operated in New England states recently and because of the post office officials having requested the local police to maintain a close watch of the building, Lieut. James Sullivan and every officer on duty in the central part of the city hastened to the post office, corner of State and Union streets. Arriving there, the bluecoats found no evidence of thieves, and going to Union street the police found just what they anticipated, a fellow who had engine trouble when he attempted to start his car, which caused the engine to backfire several times.

MASONS NOT DECIDED ABOUT NEW TEMPLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 13—Since the matter of securing a new temple for the Masonic bodies of this city was brought before Brainard lodge a few evenings ago, the cost of the project has been considered in detail. The cost of the building would be very large, but the maintenance charges would be of such amount that it is doubtful whether the income of the lodges would support it, at the present rate of dues. It is pointed out that there would be no source of income from stores in the structure and no money would be received other than that which the members of the various branches of Masonry would contribute. The building is out of the store area of the city so rentals from that source are beyond anticipation. Union lodge has yet to pass upon the project and the decision of that body is anticipated at an early date.

ROBT. DAUGHERTY PARALYZED DUE TO FRACTURED SPINE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 13—There is little change today in the condition of Robert Daugherty, laborer in the employ of the Clark Construction company, which concern is erecting a theatre on the Mercer tract, State street. Daugherty suffered a fractured spine yesterday afternoon when a derrick boom fell upon him. At Lawrence hospital this afternoon it was stated that since Daugherty's admission to the hospital both legs have become paralyzed as a result of the spinal injury.

Broadway Theater

It is not the intention of this review to give away the plot of the picture. But you may be certain that when the smoke clears and the truth comes out, the secret service triumphs and the girl's staunch defense is vindicated.

The followers of William Russell will not be disappointed in his work here. Always superior in mystery roles, he is better than ever in the picturesque setting which this story gives him. The scenes are placed on the Pacific Coast and amid the splendor of Los Angeles.

Aside from the mystery element which the picture maintains through to the climax, there is the added value of constant action, with logical events coming in believable sequence. Where some mystery stories depend on hokum, "Before Midnight" carries along on the strength of action, with nothing of the improbable.

It is a picture the whole family will enjoy. This is the first feature. "Reckless Courage" which will bring back to the Broadway theater on Sunday night that popular young hero of action-stunt pictures, Buddy Roosevelt, will set a new pnark of high quality in this type of entertainment. Into this one picture, it is said, Buddy has packed enough hair-raising stunts for three stories of its kind.

A comedy, new Kinograms and augmented orchestra are the three remaining subjects all to be shown for only 25 cents admission.

Princess Bonnie

When Princess Bonnie is staged at the Broadway theatre on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of next week, November 17 and 18, lovers of comic operas will have an opportunity for a delightful evenings entertainment. For Princess Bonnie is loaded with bits of fine singing and dancing, clean humor and good acting.

The part of Princess Bonnie is in the hands of Mrs. Mabel C. Buckingham, who is sure to handle the part in a most clever manner. J. Warren Kane as Roy Sterling, with whom the Princess is finally re-united, is also known to Eastern Connecticut audiences and needs no introduction.

Miss Eunice Taft as Kitty Clover has a part admirable fitted to her and which she is handling in a manner worthy of mention. Frank Crowell, playing the important role of Carl Tarpaulin, is not new to the Norwich stage and his character impersonations are destined to win applause.

Other popular young players who appear in the principal roles are Miss Mary Prodell, a new find of Fletcher Post, American Legion, who appears in the role of Donna Romposa, Mrs. Myra Frink Ward, Harry Bowers, William Mitchell, Herbert McNeely, Walter LaFontaine and George E. Madden.

George needs no introduction to the people of Norwich who have followed up amateur productions. Appearing in the first American Legion play, Kathleen, and since then in a number of other local productions, he has always handled his part in a way which won for him the applause of the audience. In Princess Bonnie, George has a part of similar nature and may be trusted to handle it in his usual creditable manner.

You cannot afford to miss seeing Princess Bonnie and getting back of the Legion in its work for the disabled veterans in this section of the state. Tickets are on sale by the cast and all Legion members, also local stores, and may be exchanged for theatre seats beginning today (Saturday) at Englers Drug store.

Great Picture at Y. M. C. A. Sunday

The remarkable production in moving pictures, "The Fall of Jerusalem" will be shown in six reels in the large gymnasium of the local Y. M. C. A. tomorrow (Sunday) at 4 o'clock. The public is cordially invited and of course no admission will be charged. Boys and girls under eleven not admitted, and those over that age must be accompanied by their parents or guardians.

This most interesting and impressive picture is taken from the Biblical record, and follows the Old Testament story closely.

Nebuchadnezzar is shown in his colorful surroundings and dignity. Jeremiah is really the great hero of the picture, and through all the story his faith in Jehovah, his dignity and power as a genuine man of God is in itself a most remarkable study of one of the superb characters of history. The cast surrounding Jeremiah is all that could be expected and he never for a moment forgets his sacred mission. Zedekiah, the very weak king, is shown as he is dominated by his unscrupulous heathen wife, and the presentation is all that could be required to show the spirit of the period, and the reason for the fall of Jerusalem. The love story of Amoss and Rachel lends a touch of romance to the picture. The Fall of Jerusalem is indeed a masterpiece. The historic value of the picture cannot overestimated. A large audience is expected. The doors will be opened at 3:30 p. m.

Breed Theatre

In the presentation of The Iron Horse, William Fox gives to the screen of the Breed a masterful production of a virile subject, mammoth in its compelling interest, and handled in such a manner that it soars to the highest pinnacle of cinema art.

Not a soul within reasonable distance of this theater or any theater so fortunate as to play this wonder film should fail to see it, for it will leave an unforgettable impression.

From the very first instant it appears on the screen and you see that great character of a great nation, Abe Lincoln, loved by the entire world in memory, giving encouragement to the ambition of David Brandon, senior, the surveyor who had the heroism to pioneer a pathway through the wilderness of our great frontiers, giving his life in the attempt. That great thought later becoming action when General Dodge put these thoughts into a vibrant pulsating reality by President Lincoln signing that immortal industrial document, the authority for the Union Pacific to wend its way westward and the Central Pacific to forge to the east, where they finally welded together, completing the greatest commercial highway known to humanity.

Words fail away when one attempts to do justice to these redbloaded pages of history being unfolded before your very eyes as you sit watching these warriors of peace time, engaging in this pretentious battle to lay a pathway of steel across our continent, menaced by the hostile Indians, constantly engaged in death battles to pursue of continued work, living on the product of this barren wilderness for bodily nourishment.

The natural attractiveness of this picture is so inspiring one hardly realizes the love romance spending its way, it seems so much a part of it all.

Still the compelling manner displayed by that young player, George O'Brien, as Dave Brandon, the hero from the softer moments of his lovemaking to the big physical encounters with the dishonesty of those attempting to frustrate and divert the route of the great iron horse, one sees, that this likable lad with his infectious Celtic smile can go into action quite as easily as he smiles.

The character of Corporal Casey, played by J. Farrell MacDonald, provides about the best alibi to break forth in hilarious mirth one might meet with for many a day. In fact, there is not a weak spot in the entire cast and the subtle artistry of John Ford, director of this production, easily places another name alongside the greatest of the great.

Lest we forget, the innumerable outdoor views given by the camera's telling accuracy are such, one immediately recalls those are creations of the great Fred Remington, who alone knew how to preserve the scenes of America's west and it is a pity the camera was compelled to withhold the wonderful colors this great part of the country is natural heir to.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Delco Light in Vermont

The room in which President Calvin Coolidge was born, at Plymouth, Vermont, a little more than 50 years ago, is now lighted with electricity, according to word which Carl W. Brown, the local Delco-Light dealer has just received from the factory at Dayton, Ohio.

Mr. Brown exhibited a copy of a letter which had been written to a member of the Delco-Light organization by Miss Florence Y. Cilley, who has the general store at Plymouth, and the residence in the same building which forms the Coolidge birth place. Her letter states that her Delco-Light plant, recently installed, lights the store and residence, "including the room back of the store, where President Calvin Coolidge was born."

This room, and the village of Plymouth, as Mr. Brown remarked, have attracted a great deal of attention since the president's rise to fame. The birth place of a president is always a place of great interest to the American people. Some of the homes where our presidents were born have been very poor and primitive. Some have been splendid, even pretentious. Calvin Coolidge's was neither of these, but just a plain, unpretentious, yet substantial place, quite in keeping with the surroundings in the little Vermont village where it seems rightly to belong. It will not lose any of its attractiveness, either in the opinion of Mr. Brown, but will gain much in the way of comfort and convenience because Florence Y. Pilley has yielded to the modern tendency of the times and has put electricity to work for her there where kerosene lamps and candles held sway so long.

All Features in Grotto Circus

Just three short weeks from next Tuesday the Grotto Circus and Freak City, will open at the armory on McKinley avenue. The entire city is one bee-hive of excitement. What is this big show that the Grotto is putting on? This is the question heard on every one's lips about town. One little dime paid at the box office on the opening night will solve the question to every one's satisfaction.

Let us say right here that this Circus and Freak City is a real one, there are no fakes, all the freaks are genuine oddities of nature. There are 18 to be placed on exhibition, a show in itself. There will be three high class vaudeville acts direct from New York, there is a trick bicycle act, an acrobatic act also a dancing act. A clown band will give concerts every evening, also play for dancing from 8 to 12.

It is a real live circus and all patrons are assured an evening of real entertainment. No circus is complete without a grand parading its presence, as Nemrod's circus is a real one, there will be a gigantic street parade the opening night, and the Grotto's boys will show you what they can do with their drums also. A clown band will be in line, and the pieces they will play, will make you want to follow them to the Armory where the circus is to exhibit.

In addition to the lengthy list of bona fide freaks previously mentioned is the Wild Man of Borneo, a freak who has traveled the world over and which has been viewed by hundreds of thousands of circus patrons. It is none other than Zip. Zip is the exhibit that started P. T. Barnum in the show business.

Don't forget this wonderful circus will be at the Armory on McKinley avenue on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, December 8-9-10. This is a good clean show and highly educational. Be sure and take the children. Only one dime will admit you to this big circus and freak city.

RAILS FEATURED MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 14—(A. P.)—Chief speculative interest shifted from the motors to the rails on the resumption of the broad upward movement in today's stock market. Trading was again on an enormous scale, total sales of 2,984,300 being exceeded this year only by Tuesday's record-breaking session of 3,340,600 shares.

Speculators for the advance had plenty of ammunition in their campaign for higher prices. Of paramount importance was the retention of the 3 1-2 per cent., rediscount rate by the New York Federal Reserve bank. The weekly mercantile reviews continued optimistic in tone. Dun's stated that "no perceptible lessening of business confidence resulted from the collapse of stock prices early this week." Bradstreet's reported that "trade and industrial reports are more uniformly favorable than at any preceding period this year, a distinct increase in good trade reports being noted this week, and business is still heavily ahead of what it was one and two years ago at this date."

General Motors encountered the traditional "selling on the good news" following the announcement of the $5 extra cash dividend, the stock closing over two points lower at 137 5-8. Hudson also fell back over two points to 116 1-4 and Pierce Arrow, Packard, White and Studebaker yielded fractionally. Mack trucks showed independent strength by gaining five points to 127 3-4, closing just below the top.

Rails were under heavy accumulation throughout the session. Pittsburgh and West Virginia advanced 12 1-2 points to a new record high at 107 and Atlantic Coast Line recorded a similar gain at 228 1-4, also a new top. New York Central moved up 3 points to 130, the highest price since 1903 and Baltimore and Ohio climbed over 3 points to 93 1-2, the highest level since 1910. Other new highs for a year or longer in that group were attained by Northern Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Norfolk and Western and Lehigh Valley, the gains running from fractions to nearly 6 points.

Heavy buying of the oils was based on reports of improved trade conditions and rumors of an early increase in Pennsylvania crude prices. BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—A. P.)—With confidence restored by maintenance of the 3 1-2 per cent. local rediscount rate and the buoyancy of the stock market, bond prices continued their upward movement with renewed vigor today. Trading expanded rapidly as active bidding developed for all classes of investment and speculative securities. Revival of interest in the railroad shares brought about a corresponding display of buying activity in the bonds of the carriers. Obligations with convertible and other speculative features attracted the largest following. Norfolk and Western convertibles 6s and Florida, Western and Northern 7s sold 4 points higher while gains of one to 2 1-2 points were scored by Chesapeake and Ohio convertible 5s, Chicago Great Western 4s, Denver and Rio Grande 5s, Western Pacific 5s, and the Seaboard, International and Great Northern and Frisco income and adjustment issues.

Another flurry in St. Paul Railway Junior liens was started by the circulation of reports, which were later denied, that a basis had been reached for a compromise between banking factions fighting for control of the road's reorganization policies. The refunding 4-3s and 4s of 1925 each advanced a point.

Oil company bonds closely followed the rails in finding favor with the public. The brighter outlook indicated for the industry by a series of favorable dividend and earning announcements directed speculative attention to this group and buying orders came in at a rapid rate. Skelly Oil convertible 6 1-2s kept pace with a rise in the stock by clamping 5 1-2 points to a new high level and Sinclair 6s were run up two points. The turnover in each issue approximated $500,000.

Trading was less active in the foreign division, but prices held firm in response to the welcome reception to the Italian debt settlement. At the same time Liberty bonds were strengthened by the elimination of fears over a change in the rediscount rate.

CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—(A. P.)—Revival of activity and strength in the oil shares, based on reports of an early stiffening of crude prices, featured the resumption of the upward movement in today's curb market. Magnolia Petrolium jumped 10 1-2 points to a new high record at 186, Standard Oil of Ohio moved up 7 points to 366; Humble climbed 5 1-2 to 75, and Standard Oils of Indiana and New York, Vacuum, Prairie Oil and Gas, Chesebrough Manufacturing and Gulf closed two to 5 points higher. Lion touched a new high at 25 1-2.

With the exception of Ford of Canada, which jumped 21 points to 645 on a few odd lot sales, the motors moved within narrow and irregular limits. Electrical refrigeration issues were strong, Kelvinator and Nizer B each closing about 1 3-4 points higher. Price fluctuations in the baking issues narrowed down considerably, Continental Baking B recording a net gain of 1 1-4 points and the others showing only fractional changes.

"Nickel Plate" issues duplicated the year's best prices, the common closing 2 1-4 points higher at 105. Other strong spots in the industrial group were Borden's Milk, Gillette Safety Razor, Gotham Hosiery, New Jersey Zinc and Wilson & Company preferred. A three point gain in WAH was the feature of the radio group.

Lehigh Power securities led another advance in the public utilities by climbing nine points to a new high record at 195.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Nov. 13—(A. P.)—Big buying of Canadian wheat for shipment to Europe brought about a lively advance in wheat values today. Profittaking on a large scale, however, wiped out much of the gain. The wheat market closed nervous, 1-8 to 1 3-4 c. net higher, new style, December 1.55 to 1.55 1-4 and May 1.48 1-8 to 1.47 1-2, with corn 1-4 to 1-2c., up, oats up 1-8 to 1-4 3-8c., and provisions varying from unchanged figures to a rise of 62 cents.

It was estimated that as much as 3,500,000 bushels of Canadian wheat had been purchased overnight to be moved as soon as practicable across the Atlantic. In addition, there was brisk buying of wheat for December delivery in Chicago and the greater part of this future delivery buying also ascribed to foreigners.

Back of the sudden expansion of European demand were disquietening reports concerning the crop outlook in Argentina. One estimate current today was that the Argentina exportable surplus would be 35,000,000 bushels under a recent unofficial forecast of 160,000,000 bushels.

Corn and oats were swayed mainly by the action of wheat.

Provisions reflected the strength both of grain values and of hogs.

SIX CHURCH CONFERENCE HEARS FINE ADDRESSES

The conference of six churches was held Thursday at Plainfield with 130 in attendance. Rev. William Prentiss presided. Mrs. Henry Leach opened the morning service with an organ voluntary, followed by the call to worship by the pastor and the doxology. After the invocation and Lord's Prayer and responsive reading, the Scripture was read by Rev. T. Hawthorne Jones of Mansfield Center. James Royle sang as a solo My Task. Rev. Truman D. Childs of Ekonk led in prayer.

The sermon was by Rev. Dwight C. Stone of Hanover. His text was Matthew 5-20. For I say unto you except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the scribes and pharisees, ye cannot enter the Kingdom. He vividly described the customs he had seen in foreign countries of the natives which are their religious belief and mean righteousness to them. And also the forms of religious expression in this country. Jesus did not discourage these ways but built on their faith to better beliefs. He showed them a better way. He said he believed there was a difference in the meaning of the kingdom of heaven and the kingdom of God. The first means membership in a church all the thought for God. The latter the fellow feeling, ministering to others, seeing and helping the needs of the suffering one. When evil has been turned into good, recognize it, and show your appreciation. There should be something more than formal religion in this world. There are many modern ways of helping people. And he spoke of the thirty-six suggestions for social ideals made at the recent national council. The whole matter is summed up in making ourselves good neighbors.

Dinner was served in the dining room, Rev. Mr. Stone asking the blessing. There were after dinner speeches by Rev. William Muttart of Hampton and Rev. Mr. Clark of Preston City. The afternoon devotional service was led by Rev. Mr. Muttart, opening with prayer by Rev. Mr. Jones. The Scripture was read by Rev. Mr. Childs. During the business session, Mr. Muttart offered a resolution thanking the women for the excellent dinner, the moderator for the attention and interest he had given the carrying out of the programme, the organist, soloists, and the secretary for her painstaking reports.

A motion was passed approving the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment and endorsing President Coolidge's placing much of the responsibility upon the churches, and that this six church conference accept that responsibility. A motion was passed approving the appropriation of money by the state to better the highway between Scotland and Westminster, for the reason that good roads mean greater aid to good fellowship and work in neighboring churches. There were remarks by several persons on these motions. The former motion was made by Rev. Mr. Childs and the latter by Rev. Mr. Stone.

The roll was called by Mrs. E. H. Hiscox the scribe of Jewett City. There were 11 from Pachaug, 8 from Hanover, 34 from Preston City, 10 from Jewett City, 12 from Lisbon, 32 from Plainfield and 32 visitors. From outside the conference churches, they came from Mansfield Center, Spring Hill, Ekonk, Wauregan, Central Village, Sterling Hill, Franklin, Norwich; Canterbury, Hampton, Voluntown, Packer, Jewett City Baptist and Methodist churches, a total of 20 churches.

A solo was sung by Miss Helen Palmer Gallup and Rev. Mrs. T. Hawthorne Jones gave an address on Personal Evangelism. She told how she came to be an evangelist and enter the ministry and of her work in England, all based on seeing the light and then making people see Christ through each one's personal service.

Rev. William Fryling of Wauregan spoke of some aspects of the national council. First of the splendid impression president Coolidge and his wife made upon everyone. His sincerity and honesty were very convincing. If any one wants to relegate religion to the discard read the president's message to the council. He spoke of three addresses, one by Prof. Holloway of Atlanta, Ga., another by a colored speaker, and the one by the woman assistant attorney general. He also mentioned those by Dr. Cadman and Dean Brown. The music was another feature, given by the choirs in Washington, Welsh singers, and particularly that by the colored singers. The pastor spoke of how much the organ given by Mrs. Lawton was appreciated at this conference and would send her a letter telling her so. The conference closed with sending greetings to the Windham county conference of churches to be held in Westminster, next Tuesday.

Each costume represented a period in the history of our country forw th elast 125 years, beginning with the Washington administration and ending with the present one. At the entry of each costume a short historical sketch of the period represented was read.

Following this all the teachers adjourned to the adjoining room where games of all kinds were played at tables arranged for the purpose. Jack straws, cross word puzzles, modeling in clay and Old Maid were some of the games which kept up a fund of merriment throughout the evening.

BUILT 113 MILES OF NEW ROAD IN STATE

A total of 113 miles of new highways was constructed in Connecticut in the last fiscal year, a statement issued Friday by the State Highway department shows. A tabulation also shows that an aggregate of $3,041,016.54 remained unexpended on contracts in various stages of completion at the close of the period, June 30th. It is estimated that approximately thirty miles of additional roads have been accepted as completed since the close of the fiscal year, but could not be included in the annual summary, as final payments had not been made. The statement is being prepared as a part of the annual report of the highway commissioner which is being made ready for the governor.

Construction of new roadways, reconstruction of others and discontinuance of several stretches of highway has resulted in a total of 1,871 miles of trunk line and state aid roads now completed in Connecticut.

Concrete construction was the principal type used on the roads completed during the year. It is shown that more than half of the work done being of this type. Bituminous macadam and macadam surfacing were also used extensively. The following table shows the mileage completed and the types of surfacing used:

	Trunk line	State Aid
Graded	.00	2.10
Gravel	.19	7.00
Macadam	19.92	11.42
Bituminous macadam	14.68	2.25
Bituminous concrete	5.15	.90
Concrete	46.75	10.76
Totals	86.04	87.53

Of the trunk line total 24.27 miles were newly-constructed and 51.77 miles represent roads reconstructed. On the state aid roads, 17.83 miles were newly constructed and 9.70 were rebuilt.

MOTOR VEHICLE HEARINGS MORE THAN SIX A DAY

The state motor vehicle department gave 837 hearings in cases involving suspension of operators' licenses during the first six months of this year, 336 of which were on petitions for reversal of suspension. The number of hearings was 136 greater than in the previous six months and 204 greater than for the corresponding period of last year, being at the rate of more than six hearings a day, and the department found it necessary to enlarge its hearings staff.

This division of department activity has now reached a point where the entire time of two men hearing officials and a large clerical force is required. Melvin E. Snow of Norfolk and Philip E. Devney of Granby hold the hearings, the latter having been assigned to this work comparatively recently to relieve Mr. Snow, who has been engaged in it several years. Witnesses who testify are put under oath and complete stenographic reports are taken of the entire proceedings in each case. Witnesses who testify falsely are liable to prosecution for perjury, under the law. Not infrequently, an operator whose license is involved in those proceedings, appears with counsel and the case requires considerable time. The loss of license often imposes unusual hardship upon an operator, particularly one who gains his livelihood by driving motor vehicles and the department, rather than do injustice, goes into the case carefully.

SEDGWICK RELIEF CORPS ENTERTAINS DEPT. PRESIDENT

Sedgwick Woman's Relief Corps No. 16, entertained the department president Mrs. Maud Deming and her staff at the Buckingham Memorial on Friday afternoon. At a reception preceding the dinner each member was introduced to the department officers, then the color bearers led the way to the dining hall where a gracious hostess presided at each of the seven tables and about 70 partook of the delicious repast.

Later in the afternoon the regular meeting was held with the president, Mrs. D. Louisa Atterbury in the chair. After the routine business one name was presented and one member initiated. General orders from the national president was read and stated that the organization has given $500 for child welfare and that the Golden Rule dinner yielded a little over $303 for the Near East; that a bronze tablet is to be erected at Arlington in memory of the "Unknown Soldier." A movement is underway to have the Star Spangled Banner made the national anthem. Mrs. Florence L. P. Hayden, for many years department treasurer, has resigned, owing to ill health and Mrs. Lura Dutton has been elected to fill the office. The sewing society will meet Thursday Nov. 19 at the Buckingham Memorial and members are expected to attend and help prepare for the sale. There will be a supper next week. The meeting closed with the salute to the flag and the singing of America.

The dinner served at the meeting was in charge of Mrs. M. Florence Dean, and the menu was grapefruit, salad, roast pork, mashed potatoes and turnips, applesauce, rolls, squash pie and coffee.

CONVICT EXCHANGED SHOTS WITH PURSUING OFFICERS

Three Hundred Armed Men Surround Patch of Woods Near Meredith, N. H., in Which George Fellows is Hiding—They Are Awaiting Daylight to Drive the Jail Breaker Out—A Battery of National Guardsmen Has Been Ordered Out to Assist in the Search.

ASHLAND, N. H., Nov. 15.—(AP)—A man believed to be George Fellows, wanted outlaw, who shot Constable Dow here last week, exchanged shots with officers at Meredith Center, N. H., late today, it was reported here tonight. Five automobiles loaded with armed men started for Meredith after a fire alarm here had called the party together.

FIRED AT A FORMER SPECIAL POLICEMAN

MEREDITH, N. H., Nov. 15.—(AP)—Three hundred armed men surrounded a patch of woods on the outskirts of this village tonight, waiting for dawn to break when they expect to drive out Frank George Fellows, jail breaker who shot Constable George E. Dow in Ashland last Monday.

Fellows, or a man believed to be the hunted outlaw, fired at Frank Pellotte, a former special policeman of Ashland, late this afternoon when Pellotte saw him in the woods. Pellotte said he fired at the man first when he refused to halt and that his fire was returned, bullets shattering the leaves of trees about him.

GUARDSMEN CALLED OUT TO SEARCH FOR FELLOWS

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 15—(A. P.)—A battery of national guardsmen from Laconia was ordered out tonight by Governor Winant, to assist in the search for Frank George Fellows, escaped outlaw, who was believed to have been seen in the woods near Meredith, N. H., late today.

STATISTICS OF TAX BURDEN FOR YEAR 1924

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—(AP)—America's total tax burden last year, estimated at approximately $7,907,000,000, was virtually as high as it was at the peak of the war expenses, according to a report made public today by a sub-committee which gathered data for consideration at a conference of industrial, agricultural and transportation representatives to be held in this city beginning Wednesday.

The total cost of government for 1924, including money borrowed for state and municipal purposes, was approximately ten billion dollars, the report showed.

Steadily rising state and local taxes were given by the sub-committee as the reasons for the increased tax burden. Plans to halt increases in such taxation will be considered at the conference, which will be held under the auspices of the National Founders' association.

The report shows that state and municipal bonds issued in 1924 totalled $1,398,953,100, ten times more than in 1901, when bonds for only $131,548,300 were issued. Figures for the first nine months of this year indicate that the total issuance of state and municipal bonds for 1925 will not fall far below the 1924 record, according to the report. For the first nine months of this year, these bonds totalled $983,840,421, compared with $1,138,425,601 in the first nine months of 1923. A larger proportion of the new securities issued so far this year have been for refunding purposes.

Local taxes form the heaviest burden of the tax-payers and are increasing so fast that they more than offset the decrease in federal taxes the sub-committee found. Local taxes of $3,601,000,000 in 1922 had increased $3,748,000,000 in 1924. State taxes of $892,000,000 in 1922 had increased to $1,064,000,000 in 1924. During the same period, federal taxes were reduced from $3,223,000,000 in 1922 to $3,095,000,000 in 1924.

Members of the sub-committee signing the report included R. S. Binkerd, vice chairman of the committee on public relations of the eastern railroads; O. E. Bradfute, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation; John E. Edgerton, president of the National Association of Manufacturers; Alba B. Johnson, president of the railway Business association; A. M. Loomis, secretary of the National Dairy Union; W. W. Nichols, president of the American Manufacturers' Export association and L. J. Taber, master of the National Grange.

PINCHOT ASKS SOME ACTION AGAINST BREWERIES

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 15—(A. P.)—Governor Pinchot in a letter to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, made public at his office here today, asked that action be taken to end "gross" violation of the law by holders of federal alcohol permits. He referred especially to the "disgraceful abuse of denatured alcohol) permits in Philadelphia" declaring he repeatedly had called attention to conditions there and to the "obvious and obvious" steps necessary to end them.

The governor thanked the secretary for his assurances of co-operation in the matter of issuing federal permits for the operation of Pennsylvania breweries which were given in a letter of November 4 and then suggested a personal conference "to make requests for further co-operation." The governor said "the whole matter of law enforcement is of such immense importance to the people of Pennsylvania, so much damage has already been done and so much damage threatens that I desire to place myself, my information and certain constructive suggestions at your disposal."

In his letter to Governor Pinchot who asked co-operation in reducing the number of Pennsylvania breweries operating under federal permit, Secretary Mellon asked that he be supplied the names of breweries charged to be operating unlawfully, told the governor under new permits the state police could inspect breweries operating under federal permits and assured him thorough investigations are to be made of the record and fitness of all applicants for such permits.

LITCHFIELD, Nov. 15—(A. P.)—The retrial of Olympia Macri, charged with the murder of John Bagnano, alleged father of her child, in New Haven last February, will enter its third week tomorrow, and will encounter a delay at the very outset.

SEARCHING FOR BODY IN THE CONN. RIVER

MIDDLETOWN, Nov. 15.—(AP)—The police searched all day here today for the body of Charles R. Irwin, of Springfield, Mass., who was drowned in the Connecticut river here early this morning. The search was directed by Irwin's brother, Dr. Vincent J. Irwin, also of Springfield, who was rescued by the police early today after hanging for an hour to an overturned boat. Dr. Irwin was discharged from the Middlesex hospital early today where he was taken suffering from exposure. A small dog, also a passenger in the row boat when it overturned in the river, swam ashore safely, it was learned this morning.

Dr. Irwin, in describing the accident today, said that he and his brother had come down from Springfield to the Meriden Yacht club in Portland, opposite this city, to pull their power boat from the river for the winter. The steward of the club could not be found and the men, unable to find oars for their boat, used two brooms as paddles. When they reached the power boat in the middle of the stream, Charles Irwin reached for it. The swift current suddenly swung the row boat around and both of the men were thrown into the water.

The boat remained right side up but was filled with water. The men drifted about for some time. Their cries for help were heard ashore and two boats of police were sent out to them. In the meantime, the men decided to turn the boat over. They got at the ends and at a given signal, lifted the boat up and swung it over.

That, Dr. Irwin said, was the last he saw of his brother. The doctor soon after was taken from the boat by the police.

No report of Sarah Cohen's disappearance was given to police, who have been unable to locate her, and Miss Bennett's mother fears that her daughter may have been spirited away as she was returning home alone from the movies.

Isabel finished her course at Drew Seminary, Camel, N. Y., last year since that time has remained at home, devoting part of her time to studying dancing. BEAUTY CONTEST WINNER FELL FOUR STORIES TO DEATH

BOSTON, Nov. 15—(A. P.)—Annie Emilene Hopkins, twenty two year old beauty contest winner and one time member of a musical comedy company, fell four stories to her death in an apartment house in the Allston district early today as a merry party at which she had been a guest was breaking up.

Miss Hopkins was found on the marble floor of the vestibule after she had toppled over a low banister along a dimly lighted stairway from the apartment of Joseph L. Sullivan, who had been her host. She was picked up by William A. Cain of Brighton and John Kenney of Boston, a taxi cab driver, who took her to the St. Elizabeth's hospital in Brighton. She was dead on arrival.

Cain and Arthur Garity of Fall River another guest, were held pending the outcome of an investigation which Medical Examiner McGrath has instituted. McGrath, who viewed the body, pronounced death due to a fractured skull.

Police have questioned other guests at the party who included Miss Pearl Wedge of Somerville and Raymond Lee of Worcester. All had been drinking, police said.

Miss Hopkins had started to leave for home and Kenney, the taxi driver, was waiting. The others guests said Miss Hopkins failed to see the balistrade and stumbled over it, falling through a clear area, four stories to the vestibule floor below.

The death of the girl was the culmination of a series of tragedies which had shadowed her life. At the age of 16 both her parents and two sisters died within a year at their home in Nashua, N. H. She was adopted by a Mrs. Emeline White of that city only to run away to Boston where she at first made her home with an aunt, Mrs. Isabelle Green.

RUMORED THAT COAL STRIKE IS TO BE SETTLED

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 15—(A. P.)—Persistent rumors and reports that an adjustment of the differences between the anthracite miners and operators was in sight led to the belief tonight that there might be a development in the situation this week. What this development would be no one was prepared to say.

Leaders of the two forces remained silent. Neither John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, nor Major W. W. Inglis, president of the anthracite operators negotiating committee, both of whom conferred last week with Gov. Pinchot, would discuss the situation. Both said they knew nothing of reports originating in the hard coal region that there might be a meeting of representatives of the operators and miners this week when an offer of a five per cent. increase in wages or a modified checkoff would be considered.

One of the most optimistic expressions tonight came from the Rev. J. J. Curran, of St. Mary's R. C., church, Wilkes-Barre, who told a mass meeting of idle miners that the end of the long suspension was in sight. The Rev. Father Curran conferred yesterday with Gov. Pinchot at the latter's home in Milford and is expected in Philadelphia tomorrow to discuss the situation with Mr. Lewis. He refused to disclose what ground his talk with the governor had covered, but said a full report would be given to Mr. Lewis. He did say, however, that progress toward peace negotiations had been made by the state's executive and that after they had been transmitted to the miners' leader, there would be an avenue open to reach the operators.

PERMANENT WAVE GIVES WAY TO PERMANENT SWIRL

PARIS, Nov. 15—(A. P.)—Permanent swirls are now in the fore. The permanent wave has been discarded, and all fashionable hairdressers are advertising the swirl.

This new style in curliness is especially in demand among women with square heads and phrenological bumps which do not lend themselves to the lines of beauty which artists and modistes are always striving for.

Skillful hairdressers can place the hair permanently in upward curves and conceal neck and headlines which do not harmonize with prevailing fashions. But the swirl requires longer hair than the prevailing modes and is regarded by many fashion experts as the first step back to long hair.

FRENCH FINANCIAL PLAN INCLUDES NAT'L LOTTERY

Finance Committee Has Concluded Its Consideration of Premier Painleve's Program—The Measure Will Be Placed Before the Chamber of Deputies Tuesday—The Lottery Proposal Has Gained Adherents in Both Houses.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—(AP)—The finance committee of the chamber of deputies has finally concluded its consideration of Premier Painleve's financial program, and the measure will go before the deputies Tuesday. It stands virtually as it was in the premier's final draft, with only a few changes, most of them of a minor nature.

One of the most notable amendments is the introduction of a paragraph embracing the principle of a national lottery to swell the proposed amortization fund. Another grants exemption from taxation to national defense bonds, which were previously placed in the same category as other securities subject to a capital levy.

M. Painleve again expressed a desire that his elaborated plan receive the quickest possible consideration, and it appears likely that it will get through the chamber before the end of the week and be taken up by the senator early next week.

The national lottery proposal recently more adherents in both houses, and the opinion was expressed in political circles that the introduction of such a principle in the present measure will prove a valuable asset in the senate, where heretofore hte government had counted on only a slim majority in the bill's favor, if it could be passed at all.

STEPHENSON CONVICTED OF SECOND DEGREE MURDER

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Nov. 15—Although facing a sentence of life imprisonment following conviction of second degree murder Saturday in connection with the death of Madge Oberholtzer, D. C. Stephenson received several callers today.

Sheriff Charles A. Gooding, who has been Stephenson's custodian since the murder charges against the former grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan in Indiana were venued to the local court from Marion county (Indianapolis) would not give the names of Stephenson's visitors.

Earl Klench, Earl Gentry, who were acquitted of the same charge, were in Noblesville to see Stephenson, whose conviction they decried Saturday. What transpired at their conversation, however, was not announced. Others who called are understood to have included a few former political associates and his attorney.

Saturday night was the first spent alone by Stephenson since the first indictments were returned against him last April. Klench and Gentry, though facing other charges, including indictments of arson and conspiracy to commit a felony in connection with the burning of Stephenson's suburban home just prior to their arrest on the murder charge, left Noblesville shortly after the jury's verdict was announced.

RHINELANDER TO BE ON WITNESS STAND TODAY

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 15—(A. P.)—With the direct examination of Leonard Kip Rhinelander still uncompleted, the second week of his suit to annul his marriage to Alice Beatrice Jones Rhinelander, daughter of a negro coal driver, on the contention that she deceived him as to her blood, will begin tomorrow.

His attorney, Issac N. Mills, is expected to continue the examination of the young son of the wealthy and socially prominent New York family and the reading of Alice's love letters during the period before their marriage when she wrote to Rhinelander of the attentions of other men, and her acquaintance with stage celebrities. It is the contention of Rhinelander's counsel that Alice's romances were imagined in order to arouse the young man's jealousy and induce him to marry her.

Robert L. Rose, a publisher's clerk, mentioned in one of Alice's letters as her first sweetheart, is expected to be called as a witness by the plaintiff tomorrow. Edward Holland New Rochelle fireman, said by Mr. Mills to be "Eddie" mentioned in her letters as desirous of marrying her, testified Friday that he had not been friendly with her or given her presents as she stated.

Mr. Mills has indicated that he still has a large number of Alice's letters to read to the jury in Supreme Court Justice Morschauser's court to show the premarital relationship of the couple, and will continue with them at tomorrow's session breaking in on the direct examination of Rhinelander.

SEARCHING FOR MISSING SMITH COLLEGE JUNIOR

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Nov. 15.—(AP)—Search for Alice M. Corbett, Smith College junior who has not been seen since she left her dormitory Friday morning in a confused state of mind was divided today between the Smith College campus and the town of Easthampton, four miles away. Both hunts were fruitless.

In the belief that Miss Corbett, whose home is in Utica, N. Y., might have hidden in one of the college buildings and now be in a weakened condition, the cellars and closets of the recitation halls were searched under the direction of Franklin King, superintendent of buildings and grounds. In Easthampton S. L. C. McGowan, a druggist, was shown a photograph of Miss Corbett, by her father, James H Corbett, who is here helping in the search and who has offered a $500 reward for word concerning his daughter and by State Detective Joseph Daly of this city. Mr. McGowan declared the photograph resembled a girl in a yellow slicker who stopped at his store Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock, bought some refreshments and inquired when the next trolley left for Springfield.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—(A. P.)—Whether the Shenandoah court of inquiry, will proceed tomorrow with an investigation of the charges brought against Captain Paul Foley by Mrs. Margaret Ross Lansdowne, widow of Commander Zachary Lansdowne, captain of the Shenandoah, had not been decided tonight by Major Henry Leonard, newly appointed judge-advocate of the court.

Major Leonard, who was named judge advocate yesterday by Secretary Wilbur after Captain Foley had asked to be relieved of that office, was busy today studying the testimony taken during the three weeks of hearings at Lakehurst, N. J., and Washington. He was unable to say tonight whether he could complete that task before the court reassembles tomorrow after a recess of a month.

TO ASK FOR STAY OF EXECUTION OF CHAPMAN

HARTFORD, Nov. 15—(A. P.)—After a conference Saturday with Gerald Chapman, at the state prison, Frederick J. Groehl, his senior counsel, announced today that a delay would have to be asked in the proceedings in the United States district court, in which proceedings to have Chapman returned to Atlanta to complete his 25-year federal term were instituted Friday night.

Judge Edwin S. Thomas had announced Friday night that a habeas corpus writ requiring Chapman to be brought to the federal court in this city November 24 for a hearing would be issued to defer this action until a later date pending the accumulation of certain data by Chapman's counsel.

"Since it is Chapman's life which is at stake, I deemed it essential to defer to his wishes in certain respects with regard to instituting the federal court action," said Groehl today. "He is keenly alive to the situation and has made a good suggestion which we do not want to overlook, but which may delay proceedings somewhat. There is no need to rush. The man is entitled to his rights under the constitution and a case, like this, which may go to the supreme court of the United States and establish a precedent, must be carefully prepared. No stones will be left unturned."

Governor Trumbull will be asked to give Chapman a further stay of execution pending the completion of the federal court action.

COMMITTEE HAS REACHED LIMIT IN TAX REDUCTION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—(A. P.)—The limit in tax reduction for next year has been reached by the house ways and means committee in revisions already approved for the new revenue bill, Chairman Green declared today in announcing that the door was closed against further proposals for tax relief.

The $304,000,000 cut in revenue next year estimated to result from revisions ordered by the committee in tax rates, he said, is all the treasury can stand.

The chairman's statement, issued today, is believed not only to mean there will be no further alterations in the tax rate schedules by the committee but that the threatened fight in the house for greater reductions in the automobile tax than have been voted by the committee will be vigorously opposed. Repeal of the automobile passenger car levy would cut another $50,000,000 from the annual revenue.

Chairman Green said he expected the committee, which will meet again Tuesday to complete the drafting of the tax reduction bill this week, thus assuring early consideration by the house soon after congress convenes December 7.

DEMOCRATS NOMINATE CUNNINGHAM FOR MAYOR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 15—T. Frank Cunningham received the nomination for Mayor without a dissenting vote at the Democratic caucus, held Saturday evening, to select candidates for the city elections in December. A few days ago Mr. Cunningham, who had been considered as the logical candidate, announced to the public that he would decline the offer. This announcement, however, did not daunt leaders of the party and his friends who spared no effort and finally induced him to reconsider. The standard bearer did not resume himself until the eleventh hour when he replied that if he received the nomination he would enter the field with a determination to sustain the election. While the committee was in a quandary Robert O. Snow, member of the city board of relief and of the town school committee and former city sheriff, stated that he would do his best to clarify the mayoralty candidate situation in his offer to stand as candidate but he conceded to Mr. Cunningham when the latter accepted.

The caucus was called to order by John E. Pickett, chairman of the city democratic committee. James F. Twomey was chosen moderator and City Clerk J. Schley Donahue, clerk. Mr. Cunningham's name was presented by Attorney Arthur T. Kelley. Other nominations made were: Aldermen-at-large, William A. Buck, present incumbent, and Aime J. Martineau; city clerk and treasurer, J. Schley Donahue, incumbent; assessors, Thomas J. O'Brien and William P. Sweet; city auditor, John M. Bransfield, incumbent; ward aldermen, first ward, Albert J. Piche; second, Bert F. More, third, Arthur J. Dubreuil; fourth, Robert O. Snow. In the nominations for aldermen a clash came in the third ward where the name of James M. Smith, former selectman, who was defeated for re-election to that position at the last town elections, was placed against that of A. J. Dubreuil.

T. Frank Cunningham, the nominee for mayoralty, has been a life-long resident of this city. He is connected with the Church-Reed company, being manager of the local store of that firm. His affiliations with fraternal and business organizations have been wide. He was president of the local Business Men's association last year.

CHICKEN WIRE LANDS AUTO AGAINST POLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 15—A Ford roadster driven by Leroye N. Gerry of Norwich, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Gerry of this city was badly damaged in a peculiar accident on the Stafford-Willimantic road, just west of Perkins' Corners, about 10:30 o'clock Saturday when the front wheels of the car entangled in a long strip of chicken fence wire and toppled against a telegraph pole. Mr. Gerry was driving toward this city and before he realized what had happened his car had run into the strip of wire about one hundred feet long, which lay across the road where it had apparently been blown by the wind. The wire caught into the wheels and wound around until both wheels and the axle were encased in a firm wire-network. Some of the wire caught in the rear wheels and before the driver realized what it was all about the car veered to the left of the road and leaned heavily in an oblique position against a telegraph pole. Gerry's elbow was shoved through the windshield but he escaped without injury. State Policeman Walter Hardesty of Stafford Springs was called to the scene and an effort is being made to determine where the wire came from and how it happened to be covering the entire roadway. Harold Mastin towed the machine to this city. It took two men nearly half an hour to cut the rear wheels loose. The machine was hauled away with the wire still on the front part.

POMFRET SCHOOL LOSES ITS SUIT AGAINST TOWN

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 13—Judge Edwin C. Dickenson has handed down a decision in favor of the town in the case of the Pomfret School vs. Town of Pomfret, appeal from board of relief, which was heard during the present week of the Windham county superior court and has attracted considerable attention. In announcing his decision late Friday, Judge Dickenson held that the property of the school is taxable, on the grounds that an institution teaching elementary grade sodies, although it also fitted students for college, was not "exclusively" an academy as the law demands in roder to get exemption from taxes. The case affects private academies in Connecticut. Among those who had testified that the Pomfret school although teaching academic studies, also taught the subjects that are pursued in the seventh and eighth grades of the common schools were, Egbert A. Case, principal of Windham High school, Regional Supervisor Levi T. Garrison and Supervisor A. Wilson Greer.

A disturbance which got its start Armistice day and was resumed with bloodshed Friday night, led to the arrest of Koomer Dubina and Nicholas Bashura of 58 Chapman street each charged with assault. Chief of Police McArthur and Officer Bombria were called to the scene of the fight. Dubina was bleeding from wounds on the left side of the face. He said that Bashura had struck him with a hammer. In police court Saturday morning Dubina pleaded guilty to assault, although in telling his story he laid all the blame on his neighbor. He said that Bashura at first swung an axe but was halted by another man. He then picked up the hammer, Bashura pleaded not guilty. He said that Dubina staged a drunken party at his home which is underneath the Bashura tenement. Someone kept striking at a water pipe which runs beneath the floors. His wife could not sleep and then the trouble started, and evolved into a general row. The court recalled to both men that this was not their first appearance in police court. Judge Foss found both guilty and imposed fines of $5 each and costs, amounting to $12.15.

Reports of a slight earthquake which filtered rapidly in from surrounding towns confirmed those expressed widely in this city that this section of the state had been somewhat rocked at 5:03 o'clock Saturday morning. The fact that Hartford claims that the quake was caused by the dynamiting of a dam on the Farmington river at Poquonock in Windsor town and that Professor William North Rice had predicted a slight quake in his statement on "the Mpodus noises," does not throw much light on the subject for local residents. Locally it is not known that caused the shake-up of houses. In Andover the shock was severe enough to cause residents to rush pell-mell from their homes. In Willimantic, Windham Center, Hebron and other places dishes were rattled on the shelves as the buildings jarred. In all of these localities the belief that a severe explosion had occurred was later discredited.

Ford cars respectively owned and operated by William W. Guilford of 1152 Main street, this city and John Adamcsik of Mansfield were damaged in a collision at the intersection of Valley and Walnut streets about 6:30 o'clock Saturday evening. Guilford was traveling in a northerly direction on Walnut and the Adamcsik car came from the right, going west on Valley when the machines met and jammed. The Mansfield man swung his car over onto the sidewalk. Officer Arthur M. Hurley investigated the accident but made no arrests as the drivers agreed to settle the matter between themselves

CLOUD DIGGER PREDICTS HOT SUMMER IN 1926

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 15—Here it is—all scientists to the contrary notwithstanding! The Cloud Digger says, in effect, that science, as regards the weather, is bunk. So has said Henry Ford about history, but there are those who still believe that King Tut once lived—and died. As the Cloud Digger and Henry are both living and presumably having more or less of a good time, it may be well to let the general public public in on a little party out of which one may get a laugh, some valuable information, satisfaction, peeved, or what will you have?

The Cloud Digger has broken a rule binding him to only semi-annual forecasts. He has prepared a special prophecy dealing with the weather next summer, which is, of course beyond the next vernal equinox. Scientists have been filling columns of space the past fortnight with dire predictions about a 1926 without any summer and 1927 even more so. There should be consolation in that for the miners who are on strike in the hard coal districts. The picture might conjure up visions of people in frost areas chilled and freezing and, for the miners, reception of pleas to "Please save us from the cold." The Cloud Digger throws a monkey wrench into all that hoah. He says "You had better buy fans, instead of heavy underwear, as all signs, as I read them, point to a very hot summer next year."

But this is digressing. Let's cut in on the Cloud Diger's own broadcasting station and listen to him as he tells the story. Here he is:

PACKERVILLE, Conn., Nov. 14—The many predictions of a cold summer in 1926 are predictions only and have no foundation whatever in scientific facts.

The great number of sun spots of late, while darkening the sun somewhat are nothing new, nothing unusual. I have carefully looked up the matter and find that for 200 years past, that exceedingly cold summers have never followed a maximum of sun spots, but on the contrary 1876, one of our very hottest summers ever known, followed directly after many sun spots appearing and also the late fall and winter of 1875. there was an unusual display of northern lights, night after night as my records show are usual when the great sun spots are with us.

There has been five times in my life that the size of sun spots and number were as great or greater than at present, and in every instance a hot summer followed.

The story of a cold summer to follow this winter is, according to rules of weather I have found very accurate in the past 40 years, without any foundation whatever; but on the contrary at this time I see nothing but planetary conditions that point to an unusually hot and dry summer next year.

My semi-annual prediction cannot be made until the equinoxal period but my advice, backed by scientific historical facts is to forget all startling predictions of a cold summer, there is nothing of the kind coming, at least not in 1926.

You had better buy fans instead of heavy underwear as all signs as I read them point to a very hot summer next year.

The Cloud Digger.

Judge Theodore D. Pond, 83, resident in Brooklyn for many years, one of the best known citizens of that community and known to thousands for many years as treasurer of the Windham County Agricultural society, died Saturday at the home of his son in Providence. The body is to be brought to Brooklyn for burial.

He had been in failing health for the past three years but had been able to get about until a week ago, when he suffered a slight shock.

He was a descendant of Daniel Pond, who settled in 1652 in that part of the town of Dedham, Mass., long known as Pondville. The son of Enoch and Sarah Utley Pond, he was born at Brooklyn Conn., March 21, 1842. He received his education in the schools of his native place and in early life entered his father's business and learned his trade as a cabinetmaker.

At the outbreak of the Civil War he enlisted in Company K, Twenty-first Connecticut Volunteers, and took part in the battle of Reed's Ferry, Fredericksburg, Suffolk, Drury's Bluff and Cold Harbor, and later was detailed as clerk to Gen. Guy V. Henry. At the close of the war he returned to Brooklyn, where he entered into partnership with his father as cabinet makers and undertakers, which he continued until advanced age forced him to retire from the business, which was the oldest in its line in that state.

Judge Pond was always a strong partisan and devoted to the republican party. He represented the town of Brooklyn in the Connecticut General Assembly in 1881 and served as trial justice in Brooklyn for 18 years; was town clerk for 12 years; collector of taxes, nine years, and judge of probate court for 10 years, automatically retiring from public duties upon attaining the age of 70.

He was the organizer of Sedgwick Post, G. A. R., at Wauregan, Conn., and was its first commander, but in late years he was a member of McGregor Post of Danielson. Throughout his life he was identified with church activities, being a member of the Brooklyn Baptist church, which he served for many years as superintendent of Sunday school church clerk and deacon. He recently became a member of the Central Baptist church of this city.

On April 28, 1869, he married Ardelia Mason Brown, who survives him, with three sons, Theodore H. and Wallace L. Pond of this city, and William A. Pond of New Britain, Conn., and one daughter, Mrs. Ralph P. Bennett of Providence. He is also survived by two brothers, Rear Admiral Charles F. Pond, retired of Berkeley, Cal., and John C. Pond of Kansas City, Mo.

Rt. Rev. James J. Nilan, bishop of Hartford, administered the sacrament of confirmation to a class numbering nearly 400 at St. James' church Saturday forenoon. The class was representative not only of Danielson, but the missions of the parish, including Brooklyn, Hampton, Elmville, Killingly Center and other parts of the town of Killingly.

Rev. Joseph Deschaux, M. S. pastor of St. James', was celebrant of the low mass attended by th e confirmation class and a sufficient number of other parishioners to fill the church to capacity. The administration of confirmation immediately followed the mass, Bishop Nilan, following the administration of the sacrament delivered address in English and in French, explaining the significance of the solemn ceremony and admonishing those who had been confirmed to be staunch and faithful as Christians and labor for God. The service closed with benediction.

Rev. J. C. Mathieu of Wauregan, Rev. Ignatius Kost of Dayville, Rev. Joseph E. McCarthy of Moosup, Rev. George J. Donahue of Pomfret were among the priests at the church for the service. The music of the mass was sung by the choir that usually sings at the 9 o'clock mass on Sundays.

For the occasion certain renovations had been made at the church, including the laying of a new carpet within the sanctuary and fronting the altar rail.

Announcement was made at the week end that a further contribution of $5 has increased the Civic federation's Tag day fund to $579.19.

It is of interest to note that many contractors are interested in having the assignment to build the authorized additions to Killingly High school, a work that likely will be undertaken during the spring of 1926.

In churches of Danielson on Sunday announcements were made relative to the Red Cross chapter's annual roll call which is now being undertaken and will continue until Thanksgiving.

Rev. Robert Watson of Boston is to speak before the members of the Killingly Woman's club at the auditorium of Killingly High school Wednesday. His subject will be "What is a 100 Per Cent American?" Rev. Mr. Watson is a noted and highly interesting speaker.

Danielson has its mourners over lost money bet on Yale to beat Princeton at football last Saturday. They seemed to be in on a sure thing, but seem to have invested in Florida real estate, or something like that. Anyway, there is a deficit, where they were figuring profits.

Supreme recklessness in operating automobiles was noted east of here on the Providence road not so late Saturday evening. One driver charged his car at a machine approaching him like a tackler going after a runner in a football game. The other machine's driver avoided disaster by driving off the road and "ducking" out. Drivers here say that if the drunken drivers—and that seems to be the answer—were fined $1,000 each, the average operator would cheer in satisfaction.

Witter Brothers concluded, at Put-nam, on Saturday, one of the most important auction sales held in this section of Eastern Connecticut in some time. It was a two-day sale that attracted attention and attendance from three states.

This week concrete will be poured for the new bridge over the Assawaga river at Main street. Building of the forms, a major part of the operation, has commanded the attention of the workers since the job was first undertaken.

PUTNAM

MRS. MARY C. BYRNE DIES AT PUTNAM HOME

(Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 15—Mrs. Mary Carrigan Byrne died at 8:30 Saturday morning at her home on Seward street, aged 78 years. She had been in impaired health for more than three years but her illness did not take a critical phase until about three weeks ago. Then one of her daughters, Miss Isabelle Byrne, who is superintendent of Sloan hospital, New York city, came to Putnam to minister to her mother in what was realized would be her last illness. Mrs. Byrne bore the sufferings that went with it with fortitude and patience that were characteristic of her.

Her children were all with her at the time of her death; John B. Byrne, who is state bank commissioner; Katherine Byrne, head of the Byrne Department store of Putnam and vice chairman of the republican state central committee; Daniel J. Byrne, treasurer and executive officer of the Putnam Savings bank; Isabelle Byrne, superintendent of Sloan hospital of New York; Elizabeth Byrne, talented musician and for a score of years organist at St. Mary's church. All have achieved personal success.

Mrs. Byrne was Mary Cardigan, born in Ireland in 1847. She married John Byrne and they came to Putnam, or Mechanicsville, rather, about 30 years ago. Mr. Byrne was employed in the textile mills there and later at the Putnam Woolen company. He died about 20 years ago.

Mrs. Byrne retained her mental faculties, which were of a high order, almost to the last. Although her life was devoted to her home she was intensely interested in affairs and was wise and philosophic, and far-seeing in her judgment of men and things. She was held in very high esteem and expressions of regret over her death have come to the family from all sides.

Besides the children mentioned above a son, James Byrne, died about five years ago at his home in Providence.

PRACTICALLY NO CHANGE IN PUTNAM'S OFFICIALS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 15—The personnel of the city officials for the next two years dating from January 1, 1926, will be practically the same as it has been for the past two years. With one exception all of the ward councilmen will be the same in Ward One. Charles Ryan defeated Eugene Berthaime, democratic representative from that ward by a vote of 19 to 18. The seven others have been renominated and will be re-elected at the election in December.

There was no opposition to the renomination of Warren W. Ames from Ward Two, to Leo Belisle from Ward Three and to Jerry Labby from Ward Four.

At the general city republican caucus to be held Monday evening it is expected that Victor Chapdelaine will be renominated as mayor and Charles A. Richard as alderman-at-large.

WESTERLY

FORMER BROWN STABLES SCENE OF NIGHT FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 16—A fire breaking out in the paint and wall paper shop of William Thomas, in the building owned by Fred S. Opie, on Coggswell street, threatened that section of Pawcatuck on Saturday night about 10 o'clock. The wind at the time carried thick clouds of grayish smoke across the Pawcatuck river to High street and into Dixon square, causing late Saturday evening shoppers to crowd over into the narrow confines of Coggswell street to such an extent that fire lines had to be put up to give the firemen room to work.

John Palamplo, coming from the bowling alley in the building next door, saw the smoke and quickly turned in fire alarm from Box 44, West Broad street, near Pawcatuck river bridge. The U. S. Barber Fire company quickly responded and lines of hose were laid and two of them directed into the second-story windows on the north side of the building, into the paint shop, from which the clouds of smoke were coming. The doors of the User Car Exchange, in the center of the block, were quickly opened and the cars rue out. Just as the last car was taken out a burst of flame leaped out of the north window and quantities of smoke and water settled into the Exchange. Two more streams of water were directed through the second-story window on the south side and this water reached up under the roof and checked the flame from further spread.

Arriving on the scene early, William Thomas entered the second-story where Charles Wright had sleeping quarters, in a sort of hall bedroom, and was relieved to find that he was not occupying his cot. The front part of the second floor is an unoccupied tenement but a window washer has an office in a front room. Foreman Donahue in making his rounds though the thick smoke entered each room to be sure there were no occupants.

About 10:15 the Westerly fire alarm bell was sounded and the Fox Ahrens pumper took position on the Pawcatuck river bridge where an attempt was made to drop their suction pipe through a manhole and into the river, but the current floated the intake down stream and air was sucked in. No better success attended a trial over the bridge railing and as a result no stream was thrown from the pumper. On Main street a hydrant connection was blown and the Ford car of James Jessup was filled with water. Thus the Westerly firemen, although their hose was laid to the rear of the building, could not give assistance, for by the time they were ready, the fire was out.

The scene of the Thomas Paint shop fire in the Opie building on Coggswell street was the attraction for many visitors all day Sunday, but due to the hard work of the firemen on Saturday night there was very little to be seen from the outside.

The fire originated in the second-story near the rear of the Thomas Paint shop, where there paint was stored, but the greater part of the stock there consisted of wall paper, which was badly burned and soaked with water.

This building was formerly the Brown stables and occupied by Amos E. Burdick, it being the scene of the double murder about two years ago in which the young men Maine and Wilkinson of Clark's Falls were killed as they slept on the office floor. Shortly after this Fred S. Opie had a stucco front placed on the building and the side walls extended. Mr. Opie is in the south with his wife and his attorney, F. M. Robertson stated that the building damage was covered by insurance. William Thomas, proprietor of the paint shop, stated that he had a large stock on hand and could not estimate his loss.

Sunday morning the Westerly pumper took up a position on the Pawcatuck river bridge and dropping the suction over the bridge railing sent two streams of water way up the river to a point in the rear of the Victor Laundry, while a large Sunday morning crowd gathered to watch the work out under Engineer Columbus Passetti.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bowe entertained on Saturday evening 45 guests from Hartford, Carolina and other places, at their home, 124 High street, in honor of their second wedding anniversary. Dainty refreshments were served. The entertainment included Boston talent, solos and musical numbers.

At the conclusion of the third day of the enrollment drive of the Red Cross the team members and captains had secured 741 members and collected $1,055.15. This amount is slightly lower than that collected during the first three days of the drive last year, but it is expected that the deficiency will be made up during the coming week as Westerly has always gone across strong for this charitable organization.

The first day of the drive netted 230 members and contributions of $311.90. On Friday, the second day, the contributions amounted to $465.25. Saturday fell below the first two days and the membership number was 183, while the amount collected was only $258.

This week the workers are planning to make a thorough canvass of the town and it is hoped that the public response will be generous, so that the organization may raise sufficient funds to carry on local charity work during the coming year, as it has done in the past.

SOCIETY PLANS FOR SHOW OF BLUEBLOODS OF HORSE FLESH

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP)—Many leaders of American society will gather to view the bluebloods of horseflesh when the premier of equine exhibitions —the National Horse Show—is held here the latter part of the month.

Massive, sleek-coated, heavy-honed draught horses, high-stepping hackneys, harness and polo ponies, fearless chargers of Army officers, thoroughbred hunters and saddle gaiters, all will compete for the red and yellow rosette, which proclaims the championship.

The show this year will be held in the armory of Squadron A, New York's most fashionable cavalry unit. While Irish lads and grooms dance a jig to the rollicking tunes of an accordion in tack room and stable on the floor beneath the arena, beautifully gowned women and men in evening dress will sip tea and dance to the syncopated harmonies of popular music in the Mount Vernon Tea Room.

This room is being sponsored by a committee headed by Mrs. E. Roland Harriman. Many other social features have been planned.

Approximately $35,000 in cash and prizes will be awarded the winners. Chief among these is the Bowman Challenge Cup, valued at $1,500, for which officer teams from the Belgian, French, Canadian and American armies will compete.

The Central Park bridle path will be the scene of one of the most colorful features. The contest for Squadron A cup, which will be open to officers of the armies of all nations, will be held here.

FARM BUREAU TO COMBAT LOSS BY FIRE IN RURAL DISTRICTS

CHICAGO—Nov. 15 (AP)—Because farm property destroyed by fire each year in the United States, if in one group, would make a city as large as Kansas City, the American Farm Bureau Federation is out to smother the torch of carelessness that is responsible for most of this waste.

A campaign of education among rural communities will be one of the many subjects to be taken up at the annual meeting here December 7, 8, 9.

President Coolidge will make an address Monday morning. His address will be broadcast. The president is expected to arrive here Monday morning and leave for Washington Monday afternoon in time to deliver his annual message to congress, December 8.

The matter of grazing on public domains, of vital importance to western stockmen, probably will be injected into the meeting. Muscle Shoals, Truth-in-Fabric and other legislative and governmental problems also will come up for discussion.

Secretary of Arriculture Jardine will speak at the annual banquet, Tuesday night, December 8.

PLAINFIELD

PLAINFIELD PEOPLE INJURED IN AUTO SMASH

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, Nov. 16—Rev. Edward St. John of Canterbury, Mrs. Charles Woodmansee, Mrs. Humes and Mrs. Emily Bushnell, of Plainfield, were injured, and Charles Aldrich, of Canterbury, is a patient at the W. W. Backus hospital, in Norwich, suffering from shock, as the result of an automobile accident, in front of Arthur Eyer's house, near French's crossing, on the Plainfield pike, about 7 o'clock Sunday evening.

Rev. Mr. St. John and party, riding in his Ford touring car were enroute to Danielson to attend the service at the Nazarene church, when it was sideswiped by a Jewett sedan owned and driven by Anthony Jakuboski, of Versailles.

The Ford car was turned completely over by the force of the blow tharowing the occupants to the highway, bruising and otherwise injuring them. Word was immediately sent to the Backus hospital at Norwich and Charles Aldrich, who seemed the worst injured, was rushed to that institution where his injuries were determined. The occupants of the Jewett car were badly shaken up but escaped without serious injuries.

The Ford car was completely wrecked and the Jewett sedan had a badly damaged front end from going off to the side of the highway and running into a tree, following hitting the St John car.

BANNING THE SUBMARINE

Without knowing the cause of the loss of the British submarine M-1, but encouraged by it, Viscountess Astor has announced her determination to work for the abolition of submarines not only by Great Britain but throughout the world. It is a sizeable undertaking, but one which will nevertheless get much support just for the asking. There are many already who believe, because of such disasters if not in the interest of peace, the underwater boats should be abandoned or placed under restrictions similar to the battleships.

No one knows what happened on the M-1. The situation is much different than the S-51 which was sent to the bottom off Block Island, because in that case it was the result of a collision. With the M-1 something apparently went wrong internally and it lies at such a depth that it seems improbable that anything will ever be known about just what that was.

That it furnishes a capital text for waging a fight in opposition to the submarine can be readily appreciated. It will be remembered that as the result of the Washington conference on disarmament there was a desire to have the submarine included, but it was impossible to get others to enter any such agreement. It was maintained that it was a branch of the national defense which could not be abandoned or curtailed. It could not be considered along the same line as battleships.

Thus it is evident that Lady Astor has reason to concentrate her efforts at home, or to join forces with those who have always stood for which she is now seeking. In this country the S-51 provides much the same sort of talking point which is not likely to be lost sight of by those who believe in further curtailment of the navy. With those in this country who are working in that direction it ought not to be difficult to elicit support in Italy where a submarine and crew were lost only a few months ago and never recovered.

Placing the submarine and poison gas together as things which should be outlawed by nations the efforts to accomplish such an end need not be expected to be reached without an uphill effort, though it cannot be said that they both stand on the same ground.

STREET AND ROAD SIGNS

As a letter contributed to its columns the following appeared in the Indianapolis News:

"Coming from a city where all the streets are marked with street signs giving the names of such streets, I was very much surprised upon arriving in your city to find that many of your streets, especially in the downtown districts, bear no signs at all, thus making it extremely difficult for a stranger to find his way. I am sure if this omission were taken up by the new incoming administration and corrected by putting street signs where needed, it will gain the lasting gratitude not only of a stranger, who comes to Indianapolis but the local residents as well."

This matter of street signs is one which has a common appeal. There are hundreds who find themselves unnecessarily impressed and handicapped in quite the same manner as the writer of the above. Trying to get about in these days of congested streets, when streets are not clearly marked by signs is a hard problem for the stranger and the newcomer.

There are many cities in which the same complaint can be made as that which was registered in Indianapolis. That city by no means holds a monopoly of unmarked streets. But while there is a great and crying need for the proper marking of city streets it should not be overlooked that the stranger is likewise in need of properly marked country roads showing where they lead to.

In both instances it is a matter of great convenience to the uninformed who is endeavoring to find his way. He has the great American privilege of asking where he is and how to get where he wants to go, but he naturally feels that he ought to be provided with the necessary information for the common good and in these days of increased traffic the desire to inform the stranger or the newcomer both as to city streets and country roads ought to be general. They should not be made to guess at their destination or to complain of the lack of such an evidence of backwardness.

CHRISTMAS TREES

Much has been said in regard to the desirability of preventing such a waste as takes place every year by the cutting of spruce and other similar trees for Christmas trees only to have them thrown away in a few days. It is to be realized that a great many of such trees are raised solely for that purpose and some such as the saving would contribute very slightly to the timber supply of the country if not cut.

But there are many of the trees which would grow to sizes for commercial purposes and contribute to the forest lands of the country. However, it is not to be expected that the Christmas tree will ever be abandoned. It has been too long in use and is so generally approved for any radical change to be made suddenly.

It is nevertheless an interesting effort which is being made by the New York branch of the National Plant, Flower and Fruit guild which proposes to distribute small living Christmas trees in pots to the number of 5,000 which would not only serve to bring cheer at the Christmas season but would be nurtured through the winter and be planted in the spring with the idea of being kept for decorative or other purposes as they grew to maturity. Thus instead of taking trees from the woodlands for Christmas trees in pots to the number of from the nurseries and later utilized in the necessary work of reforestation. Instead of continuing to reduce the future forests the aim is to increase them.

The great waste that accompanies the long established practice of cutting Christmas trees has received widespread recognition. Such trees are now used for a few days and then discarded. They represent much money but they also represent inroads into what might in a few more years contribute to the nation's timber supply, particularly if pine, spruce or hemlock are utilized for such a purpose. It will undoubtedly make its appeal to many but there is no reason to expect that the old time Christmas tree will disappear.

EDUCATION WEEK

In the list of special weeks arranged for observation throughout the country we have again reached American Education week, a period during which it is hoped that the efforts put forth will result in greater educational enthusiasm.

It is an interesting programme which has been arranged for the week with each day devoted to a special subject such as Constitution day, Patriotism day, School and Teacher day, Conservation and Thrift day, Know Your School day, Community and Health day and For God and Country day. That is a comprehensive list and should there be a general participation in respect to programmes which have been outlined for such days it can be expected that there will be a stimulation of public interest in educational efforts as well as a quickened and deeper concern on the part of school children in these various phases of education.

The desirability of such an undertaking whereby more attention can be concentrated upon these designated subjects cannot go unrecognized if there is an appreciation of educational efforts, and if there isn't there is all the more reason why they should be accentuated for the benefit of those who are lukewarm or ignorant and those who are influenced by such attitudes.

It has been wisely said by Benjamin Franklin that "The good education of youth has been esteemed by wise men in all ages as the surest foundation of the happiness both of private families and of commonwealths." We haven't as yet reached the time when that cannot be endorsed and it is to be hoped that we never shall. Education week will do much to promote good education.

VISITORS OR IMMIGRANTS

Making a hard and fast rule by which all must be judged without providing for exceptions invariably results in injustice being done. Likewise allowing exceptions to the rule is apt to be a troublesome job for it is not the easiest thing in the world to convince the one who is held to the rule that he is getting the same fair treatment as the one to whom leniency is extended.

Handling of the crowds at Ellis Island is no easy task. The immigration laws indicate what must be done to gain admission and such requirements should be carefully looked after before sailing, and yet it is to be realized that those who are coming here for a visit should not be subjected to the same scrutinizing treatment, those coming to remain and possibly become citizens. Those who come in the third class or the steerage are no less worthy as visitors because they are poor than they would be if they came in the cabin and were rich. There seems to be no necessity for sending them to Ellis Island with the immigrants because of the amount of passage money that was paid. And yet that is what has been done under the rules which have prevailed. By an announced change that delay and examination by immigration doctors is to be avoided in the future. Provisions against it may well be taken through the passports, but in cases of error in that respect when it can be shown that errors have been made, there is to be a flexibility to the interpretation of the laws in the future which should prevent in the future many cases which have furnished cause for criticism in the past. There is room for reason in all things.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: Slogan, slogan, who's got the slogan.

If the weatherman needs the reminder, the substitution of a mild for a harsh November would not be objectionable.

If Mr. Lewis wants to put a check on the profits he claims the operators are getting he might issue the order that would end the strike.

It has gotten so in these days that news of the marriage of an actress is considered the preliminaries to the announcement of her divorce.

Jersey justice is no more swift or positive than the decision of the electorate in that state when it comes to the question of the wet or the dry.

It is well to remember that this is the week to get in your slogan and essay in the chamber of commerce contests. They should have your participation.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Cream taken after meals is excellent to increase flesh.

One lighted gas jet is said to consume as much air as four adults.

A quart of milk a day for each child, to be used solely as a beverage is not too much.

Egg stain on a silk frock can usually be removed by rubbing them with common table salt.

A sliced onion placed in a basin of cold water will absorb the odor of new paint in a room.

Try adding a little whole mixed spice to the water in which you cook your beets. It will improve their flavor.

If you wish to make baking powder biscuits more feathery add one level teaspoon of sugar to each cup of flour.

Put your kitchen table on castors, you can then roll it wherever you want it and save yourself many steps.

To prevent cream from turning to butter when whipping always add a little sugar before starting to whip.

When making hot starch add a level teaspoon of dry washing powder to a quart and the irons will not stick.

Never put bananas into the ice chest. They will not only flavor every uncovered eatable but will turn black themselves.

Canned fruit should be opened an hour or two before it is used. It becomes richer after it has been allowed to absorb more oxygen.

Instead of regular carpet, wadding, layers of newspapers are very good padding under a carpet, or, better yet, sheets of thick paper will answer very well.

Save bits of soap until you have a pint, then melt them. To one part add glycerine or oatmeal for toilet use; to the rest add borax or naptha for laundry use, or finest sea sand for scouring purposes.

To restore velvet, let one person hold the velvet tightly, while another passes a warm flatiron over the wrong side. Then brush. Also when any portion of a velvet crown is crushed from pressure hold the part over a basin of hot water, lining side next to the water. The pile will soon be restored.

WASHING GLASSWARE

To make glassware glisten, wash the piece in hot water and then plunge it into cold water in which a handful of starch has been dissolved. Drain the glassware on towels until perfectly dry, after which polish with a dry cloth.

SOFTENING AN EGG

When an egg has been boiled too long it can be softened again by instantly lifting the pan off the fire and quickly placing it under the tap, allowing a good stream of cold water to pour into it. The sudden shock from hot to cold has the curious effect of softening the egg.

CONSIDER THOSE NEXT TO YOU

If your next-door neighbor is entertaining her bridge club, don't select that day to beat rugs, hang out all your draperies or housecleaning the porch. You will find such small attentions will be appreciated by your neighbors.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Canned pineapple is known to be good for sore throat. It also contains pepsin, a digestive element.

Warm appliances to the outside of the ear will ease the pain in case of earache. Slow irrigation with warm sterile water may help. But ear trouble that seems especially severe usually requires a doctor's advice.

When a child is nervously and physically exhausted he is more susceptible to illness. He is under an intense mental strain all the time—receiving new impressions, learning to speak and to put his thoughts into words. So, like grown-ups, he must relax. He must be taught to relax.

When a woman decides that her double chin is not a beauty asset she will find many ways to reduce it. One of the speediest ways is to combine exercise with the use of rubber reducing strap for the chin. The strap makes the exercise more effective by inducing free perspiration.

HOW TO KNOW A GOOD COMB

Look carefully at the base of the teeth when buying a comb. A sawed tooth comb, which, by the way, is the best kind to buy, has square openings and the teeth are about the same distance apart at the base and at the point. A cut tooth of molded comb has wedge-shaped openings. It takes just twice as long to make a comb of the sawed tooth variety as it does a cut tooth or molded comb, consequently the difference in price. The satisfaction in using one justifies the difference in cost, however. The hair pulls easily and smoothly through a sawed tooth comb, while it snarls and catches while sliding through the wedge-shaped openings of the cut type.

Chemcombs usually have the tooth at one end spreading out a little from the rest. This happens in the process of manufacture, and is bent into shape when the comb is finished, but a slight bulge can always be noticed. This helps to detect a medium quality comb.

NURSERY RUGS

A square of sand-colored felt with appliqued motifs in bright colors sewed or embroidered on it makes an inexpensive and attractive rug for the nursery. A conventional design representing animals and birds, with the initial letter of each to correspond placed beside each, appeals to the small child. Another rug could be made with a design of flowers and fruit, with their corresponding initial letters.

CARELESS HABITS

Don't drift into careless table manners. Every now and then listen and see if you are eating silently, chewing with your lips shut and not by any chance smacking those same lips. Beware of large mouthfuls. They make nice eating very difficult.

USE PAPER PLATES

When donating a cake to a bazaar, place it on a picnic plate that has been covered with a fancy paper doilie. Then you need not bother about the plate being returned.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Shoes, like costumes and accessories, are falling under the sway of metal trimmings.

Figures large above the waist are always better dressed when surplice lines are chosen.

A smart little dress of black velvet has a waistcoat and pipings of red crepe de chine.

For fall and winter nothing could be nicer than an evening wrap of geranium velvet with a collar of white fox.

Scarfs of tie-dyed silks from China show remarkable color effects and are quite unlike anything seen before.

The evening gown with long sleeves is being featured by several French houses, the sleeves being very ornate, graceful and transparent.

The majority of winter coats have fur collars and fur bands on them. Often the fur is applied in small bands or patches instead of in the regulation manner.

Some of the newest satin slippers are embroidered on the heel and across the back but quite plain in the front.

The new gypsy girdle is a new arrival in the fashionable world. It is very wide and placed low over the hips, and on the slender figure it is extremely effective.

The smart pouch bags, which to a certain extent have replaced the envelope type, are of suede in shades that carry out the color scheme of the ensemble.

The silk ensemble is prominent in fall fashions, the most popular silks being the bengalines and heavy-ribbed weaves, combined with crepe de chine or a lighter weight silk.

SHAWL AND SHAWL COLLAR

The shawl collar and the shawl are equally popular at the moment. Nearly all the fur trimmed coats have shawl collars and the cuffs frequently reach to the elbow. The scarfs of llama wool or of Scotch spinning are loosely woven of the brightest and most attractive of colorings and are so ample as to deserve fully the designations of shawls. The large embroidered silk shawls are still adaptable for evening wear.

FIT AROUND THE EAR

Nude ears have produced new jewelry. One of the latest pairs of earrings designed by a world famous jeweler does not dangle from the ear lobe at all. It is clasped about the entire edge of the ear and outlines that organ in gleaming diamonds and platinum. For large ears, naturally, these are very expensive.

CARACUL IN VOGUE

The Chihuahua hairless dog is about the only animal whose hide is valueless for fur purposes this winter. But furriers expect that caracul will be a leader. They point out that the pelts have excellent wearing qualities, that the hair falls in soft waves and has a gloss. They are therefore preparing to shear it, trim it, brush it, dye it and give it lustre in expectation of a big demand.

FOR THE INCLOSED SUN PORCH

A smoking table that would be excellent for the sun porch is made of iron and painted a deep soft green with attractive flower motifs at intervals.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Dry clothes slowly and they will be a better color than rapidly dried ones.

Use soapy water when making starch and the cloths will have a glossy appearance and the irons will be less likely to stick.

White materials that are yellow with age may be restored by soaking them in buttermilk. If only slightly yellowed a few days are sufficient to render the material perfectly white, but in severe cases more time is required. Change the milk occasionally.

When sprinkling fine blouses or baby clothes it is difficult to distribute the dampness evenly. Dip a towel in water, wring it out, place the blouse in it and roll it up tightly. Leave for 10 minutes, and the article will be evenly dampened all over and ready for immediate ironing.

OLD SILK FOR DUSTCLOTHES

A good dust cloth is of soft material and does not shed line or ravelings. Better results are gained by dampening or oiling the cloth. For highly polished surfaces, nothing is better than silk or chamois—old pieces of worn out silk garments can be utilized in this way. There are numerous ways of moistening the dust cloth, as passing it through steam, wringing together one dry cloth and one that has been wrung out of water, or dampening one corner of the cloth, rolling it up and letting stand for a short time. In lieu of commercial lubricating oil, a few drops of kerosene can be sprinkled on the cloth and then used after the oil has spread evenly.

Paper and cotton waste are excellent substitutes for dust cloths for use on dirty, greasy surfaces.

Dust cloths should be laundered frequently, not only for sanitary reasons but also because the soiled ones may scratch the highly polished furniture.

The oil in "dustless" clothe may be renewed by using kerosene as directed above, or adding about one tablespoon to the rinsing water.

WASHING RUGS

There is an increasing vogue for rugs of the washable type. These include the old-fashioned rag rugs, woven or braided, other sorts of fabric rugs and even hooked yarn rugs, which have to be cleaned if they are used constantly.

Washing with soap and water is really the only satisfactory method of cleaning these rugs. And they can be washed satisfactorily without a washing machine.

For hand washing, the equipment consists of a wide table or bench, a stiff scrubbing brush and a bar of laundry soap or box of chipped soap.

Spread the rug over the table. Soak with water and sprinkle well with soap chips or rub the surface with white soap. This will cleanse thoroughly without fading even blues or pinks.

With the brush scrub the surface vigorously, adding more soap and water if necessary. Move the rug along until it is all scrubbed. Then rinse thoroughly—the quickest way is to hang the rug on the line and turn the hose on it. If this is not feasible, scrub it with clear water until all traces of soap are removed. Hang straight on the line to dry in a shady airy place.

RECIPES

Best Molasses Pie: Mix to a smooth consistency one egg, the yolks of three, one cupful of sugar, one-fourth cup of butter, one cup of molasses, two tablespoons of flour, one cup of sweet milk, a tiny pinch of soda and one teaspoon of vanilla. This is enough for two pies. Bake a golden brown. Beat the three egg whites, add one-half a cup of sugar, spread on the pies and return to the oven to brown.

Flaky Pie Crust: This is a new method of making pie crust, which is very easily and quickly done. In a bowl put one cup of shortening. Over this pour one-half cup of boiling water and beat until creamy. Now add the sifted flour mixture, namely, three cups of flour, one teaspoon salt if butter is used, and add one teaspoon of baking powder. Stir all together and roll thin. This makes four crusts, which are very flaky, and but little time is required.

From Small Beginnings

Andrew Carnegie, the Great Philanthropist

In a very noisy and busy cotton factory, a little bobbin boy jumped about at his task, in his ears the roar of the machinery, and on his mind the constant demand of the whirling, twisting, moving mass of mechanism to which he was a slave. At the end of every week he walked up proudly for his pay—$1.20 for six days' hard work. He had been to no school, for his father, a Scotch immigrant, needed every cent that he and the family could earn.

The boy, in his movements around the factory, became a good friend of the engineers, who taught him how to manage the steam giants. What boy would not be proud to run a steam engine? Little by little the youngster picked up information about engines, and when he was just over 12 he was permitted to run an engine himself, and now he was indeed rich, for he earned the whole of 30 cents a day!

That boy, strange as it may seem, was Andrew Carnegie, who later in life tried to give away his millions of dollars so that he might have the honor of dying poor. All over the land are scattered the libraries that he gave so that other poor boys such as he was in his youth might have the opportunity to learn from books. All over the land are great charities that he created so that the condition of the poor might be better. There are vast fields of many millions that he gave so that colleges might do better work, so that men might be stimulated to deeds of heroism, and so that humanity might become better. In the libraries are books that he wrote, full of stimulus to good. What a wonderful career that little bobbin boy, busy among his whirling wheels, had before him! The rise from that humble position to untold wealth and power is stranger than any fairy story in the old books.

Young Andrew, the Scotch boy, had an inquiring mind. He borrowed books and studied hard. He kept learning something new. When he became a telegraph messenger boy he at once studied telegraphy. He became an operator, then a private secretary, then a telegraph superintendent and a great worker in the civil war. Since he had to travel to inspect telegraph lines he became interested in sleeping cars, and thereby made money. Then he saw the profit to be made in oil wells, and made more money. From that he turned to making iron bridges for railroads, and soon he entered into the steel work or which he is so noted. Because he continued effort and study, millions upon millions poured in upon him. He bought a castle in old Scotland, erected the Hague Temple of Peace, and began giving away of so many millions that he staggered the people. He made himself a great and beneficent man, largely because he took advantage of every opportunity to learn and to do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Golden Rule Sunday.

Mr. Editor: May I beg a few lines of your space for a message to your women readers regarding Golden Rule Sunday?

I have just returned from a visit to Greece. Under the brilliant October sky I drank in the loveliness of the ancient ruins, memorials of the world's greatest age of culture.

But what interested me most, and what would interest any American woman, were neither ruins no very old. They were the thousands of boys and girls, Armenian and Greek war orphans, who are working and studying and playing under the supervision of American women.

We women of America, through our support of this great work, are molding history over there. We saved the lives of these youngsters when they were wandering about, starving and naked. Now we are training them in trades and crafts so that they will be self-supporting when they are old enough to go out into the world on their own.

They are learning American ways and using American machinery. The farmers and carpenters and electricians, the cooks and needlewomen and nurses of the growing generation will be these young people trained in modern methods. There is no question that they will be leaders.

The support of these children has been accomplished mainly by American women who have felt the call of the Golden Rule. The overseas boys and girls understand this, and call themselves the Golden Rule children.

Because we must stand by for a few years more until our wards are launched, I invite the women of the country again this year to observe Dec. 6th as Golden Rule Sunday on behalf of the orphans of the near east relief.

Yours truly,
MRS. PERCY V. PENNYBACKER.
Past President General
Federation of Women's Clubs.

CHILD TRAINING

THE LONGED FOR PET

Mary S. Stover

Under the title Daydreams, our local paper has been running a series of small boy cartoons. In one of them the lad is represented as having brought home a very scrawny, unkempt dog. Both the boy's mother and a crisp, gingham-ed little sister beam their welcome while mother declares that of course he may keep the stray!

Who can say how many children have dreamed a similar dream about some real dog, only to meet with pathetic disillusionment? Indeed that picture suggests one of the major tragedies of childhood, though it is a sorrow that might always be lightened, if not averted, by thoughtfulness and sympathy.

Few homes can extend hospitality to every animal the children would like to adopt, yet it is exasperatingly difficult to convince a boy or girl of the reasonableness of our objections. They do not even understand what problems arise from the meager limits of a city apartment or the exactions of landlord, janitor and fellow tenants. What, to them, is our prudent care to avoid dirt, vermin and disease?

The very fact that children view the matter so differently should be a challenge to our sympathy and tact. How careful we are, how lavish of cost and effort to meet fittingly some situation that will leave little impress on these childish hearts, while we fail even to recognize the significance of moments that are destined to hold a large place in their memories.

That is because we have forgotten too much. We look at things through dull, grown up spectacles and it is the fresh vision of youth that is needed. Children cannot shift at will to the viewpoint of maturity.

We know by observation, if not by personal experience, how much a pet can mean to a child. The stray dog or cat appeals also to innate childish chivalry, so that the discussion of the creature's fate becomes a great occasion. Let us recognize it as such and curb any temptation to impatience or seeming heartlessness.

When other people ask our agreement to something that we feel is out of the question we take to us words of courteous explanation and regret. Why should it not be so when the petitioner is a child we love desiring what seems to him or her a perfectly natural privilege?

The very effort to see the child's side of the question has led many a parent to welcome an animal that would otherwise have been driven sharply away; and it was usually a fortunate relenting, for most boys and girls, if not their elders, need the spiritual influences that come from caring for something that is alive and enjoying its companionship. Many a selfish only child has been made into a social being through tending dependent pets.

A Sharp Reminder

A sharp reminder now and then
Keeps with at work in coons and men.
—Bobby Coon.

Wouldn't you think that Bobby Coon would have been satisfied to stay at home after he had had a couple of narrow escapes from the hunters who visited the Green Forest night after night to look for him? But no, nothing of the kind. Each night Bobby was out and about, thinking of that stomach of his. Perhaps this isn't quite fair to Bobby. It wasn't just greediness. It was a kind of thrift. Bobby was doing his best to lay up plenty of fat under that fur coat of his so that when he should awake in the spring when food was scarce he would be able to get along in some degree of comfort.

Then, too, perhaps Bobby thought each night that those hunters, having been fooled so often would give up. Anyway, Bobby didn't worry enough about them to stay at home. The very night after Yowler the Bob Cat had managed to get even with him, Bobby was out again. This time, however, he kept his ears open for warning that that dog was after him, and as he munched beechnuts he planned just what he would do if that dog should come barking along his trail that night. He didn't doubt that he would hear that dog a long time before he could get near enough to be at all dangerous. He knew that that dog would bark the very instant that his nose was tickled by the scent left by Bobby in his tracks. Usually that was far behind Bobby, and so he had plenty of time to decide what to do and where to go. It didn't pop into Bobby's head that anything different might happen. It had happened that way so often that Bobby had the feeling that it always would happen that way.

But that is where Bobby Coon made a mistake. That things happen just so over and over again is no proof that they always will happen just so. It is all right to expect them to happen just so, but he who is wise will be prepared in case they do not happen just so. Bobby had been out ever since the Black Shadows had reached the Green Forest and now it was so late that he didn't think there was any longer so much as a chance that those hunters and that dog would be looking for him.

"They must have given up," said Bobby to himself. "Probably they have decided that I am too smart for them, so it is useless to try to get me. I have fooled them so often that they should know by this time that trying to get me is a waste of time. Well, it certainly is good to be let alone for one night. I can't get fat if I have to run every night. I'll run the fat off faster than I can put it on. I don't see, what they hunt me for anyway. I mind my own business and never have done them any harm, so I don't see why they cannot leave me alone. Mm-m-m-m, these beech nuts are sweet! Nothing nicer in the Green Forest than ripe beechnuts. Hello, what is that?"

Bobby stopped eating beechnuts and listened. There it was again, the snapping of a stick. And then Bobby saw a light bobbing along between the trees. Those hunters were looking for him after all! But why hadn't he heard that dog? Bobby no sooner asked himself that question than he did hear that dog. That dog began to bark, and he was so near that his voice seemed to be in Bobby's very ears. Bobby didn't stop to do any more wondering. He took to his heels, and how he did run! Bobby is stout and he looks clumsy, but like his big cousin Buster Bear, he can run surprisingly fast for a short distance. He didn't dare climb a tree because those hunters were so near.

Now the reason that Bobby had not heard that dog before was that that dog and those hunters had not entered the Green Forest until late that night and then they had come in from a direction which did not lead them across Bobby's trail until they were close to him. This time they were between Bobby and the Laughing Brook, so he had no chance to seek the friendly water to wash away his scent. Neither was there handy the track of Yowler the Bob Cat or any one else wherewith to get that dog mixed. Bobby was scared. Yes, sir, Bobby Coon was badly scared this time. He was so badly scared this time. He was so scared that he couldn't think. He had quite lost his wits, as the saying is.

And at last when he was puffing and blowing and quite in despair he stepped on something sharp. It hurt, but he didn't mind that. Right that instant he recovered his wits. That was a sharp reminder of something he had quite forgotten.

COLLEGE MUSIC AND SPEAKER AT SUNDAY NIGHT CHURCH SERVICE

We believe that the educated leader among women is as vital to society as among men, that sons and daughters need leaders of thought among the mothers as well as the fathers, said Dr. David D. Leib, professor of mathematics and registrar at Connecticut College in an address at the Central Baptist church Sunday evening before a congregation of about 600. Prof. Benjamin T. Marshall, president of the Connecticut College, who was to have been the principal speaker, was, through illness, unable to be present. Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., pastor of the church, in making the announcement that President Marshall was detained at home by illness, expressed regret that the college head was unable to be present. He said that President Marshall fully intended to come to Norwich up to 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, but that on the advice of his physician, had abandoned his plans.

With Dr. Leib, who has been connected with the college for seven or eight years, came Dr. T. Lawrence Erb, college organist, and the college choir numbering 35 voices. The choir members wore gowns and caps. Dr. Erb and the choir rendered a splendid programme during the service.

The musical programme was as follows:

Postlude, Triumphal March in D Flat
Erb

Rev. Dr. Pitt led the service and a fervent prayer was offered by Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, pastor of the Greeneville Congregational church. Dr. Leib was introduced by Dr. Pitt. In his address Dr. Leib said:

If a text were necessary on an occasion such as this, there would be no scarcity of them in Holy writ. The wise Solomon says "Get wisdom and with all thy getting get understanding" and this might be defended as the original charter of the teacher. When the psalmist says "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom" he lays down an aphorism which ties up righteousness and education, however much we might wish to modify the meaning of the word fear. But it would be an entirely superfluous formality were I to select any such verse and pretend that what I have to say was an exegisis of it.

The church and education, the church and the college are historically united in many ways, the college has trained the leaders for the church and to a large extent the church has fostered and furnished leaders for the colleges. In actual origin they are united for the colleges are children of the church. Some of these children have grown up and intermarried, and while no longer directly controlled by the parent, they admit the parenthood and honor the parent.

In the spirit of service they have much in common,—each aims to raise men to higher levels that they may be more worthy of being called children of God.

In the interpretation of God and God's work they are again engaged in a common task. The revelation of God to his servants as told in the Bible is no whit more marvelous than the revelations of His mysterious and wonderful works to the prophets of today—be they preachers, poets or scientists. It is not a lack of faith, nor an evidence of impertinence if we ask God, our father how he created this world, how it has developed or even ask him about the secret of life itself. Nor is it any evidence that God doesn't want us to know these mysteries, when he says to us—The great story of creation is written in the hills and valleys. Every erosion be it in the grand canyon of the Colorado or the cutting of a simple Connecticut brooklet tells a part of the same story. The story of vegetable life is written in and told by every plant as it develops from the dead looking seed to the flourishing plant, and the story of ages of development in the animal kingdom is revealed to the intelligent eye of every observer who watches the development of the living embryo. The ability to appreciate and understand these wonderful works of God put us on more intimate speaking terms with the father. I never hear much objection when men like Burbank and others because of their knowledge of science and to an extent the secrets of life, cause bigger apples, sweeter oranges, more productive wheat than God ever created in the first instance—yet creating a new fruit perhaps. They can understand this—it adds to creatures comforts and material prosperity. But to show that certain scientific ideas of a nomadic oriental people of early times is inaccurate is sacrilege, and to put a new interpretation upon God's ways of dealing with men is to challenge the powers and wisdom of the Almighty.

In brief my point is that as long as this daughter of the church seeks the truth, as all real colleges do seek it, created in the first instance—yes alarmed if the daughter does change her habits of food and dress to conform to modern hygienics, sanitary and medical standards.

In a peculiar sense the education of women is a product of Christianity. The present status of women and children is essentially the result of Christian teaching.

Education has developed in many directions. The great public school system cares for the laying of the foundations of general training and the mother church should not be deserves our deepest interest and careful study.

But of even earlier origin than the public school on this continent, and their logical heir, the great state and municipal colleges and universities, are the small private colleges, at first for men, then co-educational and finally for women also.

Much is said these days about vocational education. As long as the education is not eliminated I have no criticism. The original colleges in colonial days, running back to Howard in 1638, were in one sense highly vocational. They specifically aimed to train men in preparation for the learned professions, i. e., professions which could be practiced properly and for the highest welfare of society, only by educated and trained men. But the college laid the stress on the education and not on the technique of the profession. This was secured by serving an apprenticeship under the active physician or lawyer. Truly is college they had law or the ministry in mind, but they desired first of all to be educated. This I regard as a valid aim and purpose of the small college today. It must turn out primarily educated men and women. They may have definite ideas as to the fields they will enter after graduation, or in what professions they will serve. A wise theory of education says however, it is true, that chemistry or physics or English is just as cultural when studied by the prospective chemist or engineer or secretary as when studied by one who has no vocation in view—provided the study is in both cases made with a view of learning the truth, and of how these truths have contributed to the advance and social wellbeing of the race, and not with an eye on the dollar mark or the salary check. The aim of a college like Connecticut college—I think I may presume to speak for the college—is not to prepare girls to fit into a job. Rather it aims first to turn out educated women of character with a properly orientated vision of their duty to society as women and homemakers, women who have acquired confidence in their power to do, by their continued work in some one field of major endeavor, but whose confidence is not limited to one narrow vocational field or line, but rather with that confidence that they can carry on in any kind of endeavor requiring an educated woman. Connecticut college recognized of course that an educated woman ought to be able to earn a living—most uneducated women do that—but they must recognize most keenly that whether earning a living or not, they should live a life worthy of an educated woman. If they have not this ideal and this will their education has been a failure. If they have it the community in which they live must be a gainer because of their education.

I should like to venture the thesis that education like religion is not life insurance but accummulated capital. In the earlier stages of education, the object quite clearly was largely or entirely concerned with teaching men how to die or to avoid death. The purpose o freligion seemed to be to teach men how to escape hell; of medicine how to heal a man who was injured or sick. No great attention was paid to the prevention of sickness of the body, or mind or soul of men. Education was at best a sort of life insurance. But the social and moral significance of education has changed. We now recognize it not as a brake to keep up from going to perdition, but as a great constructive social force. The truly constructive agents of the past decades have been the product of our college class rooms and laboratories. They have blazed the new trails, given life new comforts, have replaced the very fears of hell by a broader and nobler appeal for the present value and joy of right living. They have brought the joys of heaven, yes perhaps heaven itself, down to the present.

Before I go further I should like to set myself straight as to the relation of individuals be they parents, students or simple citizens to the college. I would not be misunderstood. I have no special propaganda. Valuable as colleges are to the community, to the state and to the nation, and valuable as a college education is to the individual capable of absorbing and using it, I can not on theone hand say to you older hearers that it is your undivided duty to establish, endow and support colleges, nor that it is the natural right of your children to have a college education. The question is a social one—if you believe the college is a valuable social institution, a source of power and good, then it should be a privilege to support it and defend its interests. And your child and mine have no natural rights to the advantages of a college education in such an endowed college (or any college) unless he or she recognizes the social obligation implied. However brilliant the intellect as evidenced by school record or at the evidence it is not a final criterion which justifies admission, for admission to college is a special privilege and is justified only by the promise of rendering service to society. I have not the keenest commendation for those who gives a college or is interested what graduates owe the college. The debt is to society, for the college is at best the custodian for society of certain privileges by virtue of being custodian—and the student or graduate who fails to render an adequate service in the home, in the community and to society has not failed in his or her obligation to her college, but in her obligation to her fellows—to society. So the man or woman who supports a college, supports one of the best agencies of society, if the college administers its trust wisely and its graduates are truly educated. The person who gives to acoll ege or is interested in a college, solely for what he or she or their family may derive from it is on a par with a man who believes in supporting the church and gives to it that it may contribute to the salvation of his own soul in return for his contribution. Both the church and the college and the supporters of each need a broader vision.

I am not sure how much I should or could with propriety say about Connecticut college specifically. Needless to say that if you do not believe that your daughters are entitled to an education equal in quality to that which your sons expect and which you expect for your sons, Connecticut college has no appeal to you. We believe that the educated leader among women is as vital to society as among men,—that sons and daughters need leaders of thought among the mothers as well as among the fathers. The educational standards which I have tried to imply in my remarks and show to be valid, are those of our college. Fundamentally Christian it is undenominational, standing four square for the truth and gladly accepting the obligations which truth imposes. May I trespass on dangerous ground by saying that any differences between the proponents of science and those of religion, arise solely from an unwillingness, usually on both sides to accept the obligations which truth and common honesty impose. No real scientist who faces the truth, the recorded facts, in other fields as he does in his own, can or does deny the great achievements; the great contributions, or the great power past and present of revealed religion; nor do the leaders of religion who know science and its achievements, deny the validity of its methods, nor the value of its conquests and its contribution to higher and better living, and the fact that it has given us a keener revelation of God and His power. Science does not presume to claim that it has eliminated the Creator. It has simply inserted a great window in this house of ordinary human limitations through which we may more broadly view the wonders of God's creation. It is wonderful to look at the side of some towering cliff or the side of a coal mine or a quarry where the successive layers of various clays or rocks, lying at various inclinations are exposed and we might well say "how wonderful are Thy works." But if those varied strata in turn tell us the story of past ages with a history which there was no human hand to record, if the faults and folds reveal to us cataclysms which occurred when there was no human ear to hear, if the whole appears to us as a gigantic page from God's eternal history, not only have we seen the wonders of God and realized his power, but we have held personal conversation with the most high.

As an institution for the higher education of women, it stands alone in this wealthy state, a state which stands second to none among those who have produced leaders of men,—save for the few who can be cared for at the state college at Storrs. While the results of its labors, and the fruit of its efforts will be limited only by the civilized social endeavor, it is and will be peculiarly the glory of New London county and the state of Connecticut.

There are those who see that with the expansion of public schools on the one hand, and the great universities on the other, the small private college is obsolescent. The small or large denominational college will persist to teach a definite creed as a part of its program or to recruit its ministry. But I am one, and I think I voice the teachings of the college when I say I am one who believes in the mission of the relatively small college with carefully selected faculty which, while fundamentally reverent, religious, Christian, sets itself to the test to interpret to the coming youths the teachings of the past, whether revealed by religion, literature, art history, science,—to interpret them unhampered by creed or tradition, so that all together they may set themselves to the solution of the world's pressing problems. The great universities and technical schools will train men and women the form of engineering and medicine, the ways of turning natural resources into gold, but the broader training will come through the college and turn lives into service. The women's colleges have adhered quite closely to the college ideal—some it is true have been very slow to grasp the significance of changing ideals but still with a cultural outlook. Connecticut college stands for sound ideas as to the obligations of the individual who accepts its training.

Connecticut college recognizes its weakness in the same breath that it accepts congratulations for its striking achievement in a single decade. It believes that a woman's college faces the task of sound education for women, and frankly proclaims that while it admits no inferiority of standards in the female of the species there are some problems which it is peculiarly woman's function to solve, and that a woman's college should send out women educated to think on these lines and face these problems peculiarly their own.

It believes that the small college has a great mission which it will continue to carry on. The relation between teacher and student is close and intimate.

516 Girls at College

Dr. Leib said that Connecticut college has grown just as rapidly as facilities permit. It opened with 100 girls, now there are 516 girls at the college. Geographically the student increase has been remarkable. When the college opened the girls came from the New England states, largely, from Connecticut. Today girls come to the college from Maine to California. The significance of this, I hope, is not lost, he said. Connecticut girls are still in the majority but of course they are mingling with girls from all over the country.

Dr. Leib said he wished it understood that Connecticut College is not a "catchall" for girls who cannot get into colleges elsewhere.

Following the postlude by the college choir, the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Dr. Pitt.

The college choir made the trip to and from Norwich in one of the Connecticut company busses.

FIRST MEMORIA LLECTURE TO DR. JOSEPH H. SELDEN

The first annual lecture in remembrance of the late Rev. Dr. Joseph Henry Selden of this city was given at Connecticut college on Friday evening by Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, pastor of the Central Congregational church, Brooklyn, N. Y., who spoke upon Imagination.

The college gymnasium was crowded to capacity when Dr. Cadman was introduced by Rev. Dr. Chapman of New London, who paid an eloquent tribute to the memory of Dr. Selden. In his opening remarks Dr. Cadman also spoke in high praise of Dr. Selden.

In his lecture Dr. Cadman said in part:

"The power of the real is seen through the imagination, that dynamic force which, to man, is the flame within the clay. Through this great power we can assemble our experiences, and knowledge, project them along moral lines, and visualize the future.

"The child first perceives the power of imagination at about the ages of six and seven years. Through later childhood and adolescence, he sheds the surplus imagination of the growing child and gradually dwells upon those things that do not exist but which may eventually be brought to pass. But imagination, not followed by energetic action is useless."

At the close of his address Dr. Cadman offered a prayer in dedication of the Selden Memorial.

EDUCATION WEEK OPENS WITH EXERCISES ON CONSTITUTION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16 (AP)—National Education Week, backed by the United States government, the American Legion and the National Education association will begin throughout the country tomorrow with the first exercises designed to increase the public's knowledge of the American Constitution.

Proclaimed by President Coolidge as a "special season of mutual encouragement in promoting the enlightenment upon which the welfare of the nation depends," the week will be opened with additional pleas for educational support by many state governors.

Tomorrow's observation will be marked by the reading at public gatherings and in the schools, of essays on the Constitution, and by the presentation in the schools, and before civic organizations, of tableaux of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, the Birth of the Flag, and other settings of similar nature.

Wednesday will be given over to a special effort to have parents and business men visit schools to learn more of actual teaching conditions.

CHRISTIAN GENERAL OF CHINA SHEARS HIS WIFE'S TRESSES

SHANGHAI Nov. 16, (AP)—The "Christian general," Feng Yu-hsiang, who baptises his men before leading them into battle, is reported to have played the part of barber and cut off his wife's long tresses.

Apparently it was done with the same quick stroke that the general made in overturning the Peking government last year, because he had been stubborn to his wife's wishes for bobbed hair.

Mrs. Feng was formerly Miss Lo Teh-chuan, a Y. W. C. A. worker in Peking. Reports said she finally convinced the general that short hair was most practical and useful.

COURBOIS' TOUCHDOWN AND FIELD GOAL BEATS CHAPMAN TECH, 10 TO 0

Norm Courbois' beautiful broken field running and his educated toe downed Chapman Tech Saturday afternoon at the Academy Campus, 10 to 0, for the second time this season. Sharing the gridiron honors of the day was Schwartz, who played a beautiful game at center. Schwartz was a constant menace to the Chapman team and also made several sensational recoveries of Chapman fumbles. Courbois scored all ten of the Academy's points, the first score being a touchdown that he made after a beautiful run of thirty yards through a field that from the sidelines seemed literally covered in Chapman players. He booted the ball between the bars for the point after touchdown. The second score came in the last ten seconds of play when with the ball on his own twenty yard line he drop-kicked a pretty field goal. Pheno Tombari and the Brewer brothers also did some fine work.

One of the outstanding upsets of the game was the inability of Johnny Brown, Chapman's much touted negro half back, to make any substantial gains. Johnny seemed to find an Academy man everywhere he went and when he took the ball there were usually several of the local players artistically draped around him before he had a chance to get started.

The local team showed up fine in Saturday's game and are now playing a far different game than what they played in the first few games of the season. The Academy had the ball in Chapman's territory throughout the entire game. The local boys got away several beautiful forwards that netted them considerable ground.

Chapman Tech at no time were in a position to score on the local team and seemed to lack any punch when it was most needed. Miller and Kannenburg were the outstanding Chapman players, both making considerable gains.

Schwartz's defensive play was noteworthy, and time after time he broke through and smeared the fleet-footed Brown for a loss. On the punts the burley center broke through the Chapman line and downed the catcher of the ball in his tracks. Schwartz tackled clean and hard and his playing Saturday showed marked improvement over the other games.

The play by quarters follows:

First Quarter.

Pongetta kicked off to Marks who ran the ball forward five yards before being downed. Tombari on a run around right tackle made three yards. Eddie Brewer on the next two plays went through the line for four yards and on the next play carried the ball over for the first down. Tombari took the ball off right tackle for twenty yards and another first for downs. Courbois went around for eleven yards. C. Brewer plunged through the same place. On the next two plays Tombari and E. Brewer gained four yards but were unable to make first down. Chapman's ball. Kannenburg went through center for two yards and Brown made four more on the next play on a run around right tackle. Brown punted to Courbois. On three plays the Academy was unable to make first down and on their last play they tried a forward that was broken up. In three tries against the Academy line Chapman failed to gain and on last down they tried a punt that was broken up and a Norwich man fell on it. Norwich gained three yards on a run around right tackle by C. Brewer, Academy penalised fifteen yards for holding. Courbois on the next play made a beautiful thirty yard run that resulted in the scoring of the first Academy score. Courbois kicked the goal for the point after touchdown. The remainder of the period the ball zigzagged up and down the middle of the field.

Score: N. F. A. 7, C. T. 0.

Second Quarter.

Brown on two tries around end that resulted in all punted to Courbois, who carried the ball forward seventeen yards before being downed. The Academy failed to gain ground on their first three plays and on last down Tombari punted to Everetts, who was downed in his tracks. Chapman on their first three downs gained half a yard and on last down Brown punted to Courbois who slipped and fumbled but recovered the ball and gained fifteen yards before being tackled. The Academy on their first two plays made seven yards but were penalized fifteen yards on their third down for holding. Tombari got off a beautiful punt to Everetts, who was downed in his tracks. Brown and Miller on the next three plays made twelve yards and first down. These same players again took the ball for another first down. Kannenburg went through center for two yards. Brown made another first down on a nine yard run around end. On the next play Brown was thrown for a one yard loss, and on the following play he fumbled and was thrown for a loss of twenty-two yards. The quarter ended as Chapman tried a place kick that the Academy blocked.

Score: N. F. A. 7, C. T. 0.

Third Quarter.

Brown of Chapman kicked off and the ball rolled over the N. F. A. goal line. Following this it was brought out and put in play on the twenty yard line. On three plays the Brewer brothers and Tombari advanced the ball seven yards but were unable to make first down and the N. F. A. were forced to kick. Tombari to Kannenburg who was downed in his tracks. Brown on the first play fumbled and Schwartz, Academy center, made a fine recovery as the ball bounced around the field. The Academy on their first play lost eight yards and on the second Courbois fumbled and Satchetello recovered for Chapman. Brown went around end for seven yards and on the following play Kannenburg made first down. On the next two plays Miller and Kannenburg failed to gain through the line and on the next play Brown lost one yard. The Brewer brothers and Courbois on the next three plays made seven yards and on last down Tombari punted to Everetts, who was downed in his tracks by Schwartz. Kannenburg made seven yards on a run around left tackle. On the next play Brown fumbled and Schwartz again made a beautiful recovery. The Academy on their first two plays made four yards and on third down Tombari threw a pretty forward to Radio Ed Brewer that netted seven yards. The N. F. A. on the following three plays made two yards and on last down Tombari threw another forward, this time to Marks for a twelve yard gain.

Score: N. F. A. 7, C. T. 0.

Fourth Quarter.

C. Brewer on the next two plays made five yards through the center of the line. E. Brewer on the next two plays fumbled and Satchtello recovered for Chapman. Kannenburg and Brown made eleven yards and first down on the next two plays. Brown lost two yards on the following two plays and was forced to kick on his third down. The Academy failed to make any gain on their first play and on the second they fumbled and Kannenburg recovered. Brown on the first play lost one yard and on the second Everetts made four yards through center. Brown again took the ball, this time he lost six yards and on last down Chapman punted. On their first down the Academy failed to gain and on the second Tombari fumbled and a Chapman man fell on the ball. Brown lost four yards on the first play and on the second Courbois intercepted Brown's pass and was downed in his tracks. With the ball again in their position the N. F. A. marched steadily down the field from their forty yard line and with the ball on the twenty yard line, at a slight angle, Norm Courbois booted a pretty field goal as the whistle blew ending the game.

GREENEVILLE TIGERS BLANK SPEEDBOYS IN ROUGH GAME

Before over five hundred enthused spectators the Greeneville Tigers battled their way through the hard fighting Jewett City Speedboys for a 6-0 win Sunday afternoon at Ashland Park.

Entering the first quarter Jewett City advanced the ball to Greeneville's 1 yard line where a stonewall defense held them for three downs and on the next play the ball was fumbled and was recovered by Nurmi Nelson, Greeneville's star end.

Greeneville in the second quarter on consecutive line plunges brought the ball to Jewett City's 25 yard line where Captain McGowan called for a drop kick which was touched by Prevost and Higgins recovered for Greeneville behind Jewett City's goal line for the one and only touchdown of the game.

The second half was one of the hardest fought periods ever seen in eastern Connecticut gridiron history and the ball was in the center of the field throughout, neither side having any advantage.

Next Sunday the Tigers play the Nutmegs in Norwich for the championship of eastern Connecticut.

THREE UNDEFEATED TEAMS IN N. E. CONFERENCE

STORRS, Nov. 15.—(A. P.)—Indications point to a triple tie for first honors in the New England conference as the season nears the finish, with New Hampshire, Massachusetts Aggies and Maine on top.

Yesterday's games, played on muddy fields that were swept by high winds, furnished two surprises. Maine held the supposedly stronger undefeated New Hampshire machine to a scoreless tie at Orono, Me., and Rhode Island State, doped to lose its annual game with Connecticut Aggies, played the Nutmeggers to another no-score game.

Massachusetts Aggies, the remaining member of the conference, had things comparatively easy, splashing its way to a 41-6 victory over Lowell Textile on a wet and sloppy field.

Yesterday marked the close of the season for both Maine and Rhode Island. New Hampshire and Connecticut play their last games next Saturday, and Massachusetts will wind up the conference schedule Thanksgiving day.

The team standing based on conference games only, and including points in all games, conference and no-conference:

Mass. Aggies	4	0	0	146	52

Maine	4	0	1	117	30

MINNESOTA AND MICHIGAN LEAD WEST CONFERENCE

CHICAGO, Nov. 15—(A. P.)—The western conference football championship prospects have been narrowed to three, with the deciding game between two of them—Michigan and Minnesota—next Saturday.

Northwestern, its big ten season ended, may share the title with Michigan if Michigan wins from Minnesota, but a victory for Minnesota, or only a tie, would give it a status of the only undefeated team in the conference, and therefore the championship. If Michigan wins, it would have five victories to Northwestern's three. But Northwestern defeated Michigan.

For the first time in more than a decade, since the Minnesota shift of Dr. Harry Williams revolutionized football of those days, the northerns are battling for a conference title. This is the first year in the Big Ten of their coach. Dr. Clarence W. Spears, formerly of West Virginia and Dartmouth, but he has developed scoring power reminiscent of the days of Williams' teams.

Chicago and Wisconsin, who meet Saturday, are the only other conference teams with but one defeat each, but each has a tie against its record.

The conference standing, with point total of conference games only:

Team	W.	L.	T.	P.	OP
Minnesota	3	0	1	45	12
Michigan	4	1	0	99	3
Northwestern	3	1	1	31	31
Chicago	2	1	1	21	16
Wisconsin	2	1	1	25	33
Iowa	2	2	0	37	49
Illinois	1	2	0	23	21

YALE TO HAVE ONLY LIGHT WORK THIS WEEK

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 15—(A. P.)—The Yale football coaches announced today that they were planning to meet the "reaction" which took place in Saturday's battle with Princeton by giving the squad an easy week of preparation for the Harvard game on Saturday. The ones were permitted to join the Princeton players Saturday night at a number of after-the-game dances.

It is felt by the coaches that there is not enough time to undertake a program of corrective scrimmages to strengthen the line or speed up the backfield.

Only one Eli player is on the injured list, Duke Richards is suffering from a bruised shoulder but will return to the team by the middle of the week.

Five Yale men won their first letters in the game Saturday. They are: Dwight B. Fishwick, quarterback of Glen Ridge, N. J.; William B. Vandergrift, tackle, of Jacksonville, Fla. Walter Bradley, end, of Richmond, Va.; James Stetson Coleson end of Macon, Ga., and William A. Webster guard, of Shelton, Conn.

MISSOURI LEADS IN VALLEY CONFERENCE

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 15—(A. P.)—But one barrier remains before the Missouri Tiger in its triumphant march, undefeated through the Missouri Valley conference toward its second successive gridiron title.

Next Saturday the Tiger will stalk the Kansas Jayhawker at Lawrence to finish up the season, and the odds are all in favor of the beast. The Jayhawkers will go into the traditional battle with a disastrous season behind them, a record of five defeats, one tie and one lone victory, that over the trailing Oklahoma Aggies. The Tigers stand with not a blemish, Nebraska, Kansas Aggies, Iowa State, Washington and Oklahoma having fallen prey to them.

With but one exception, 1918, the Tiger and the Jayhawker have clashed annually since 1891. Kansas has won seventeen of the games, Missouri has won eleven and five have been ties.

The Drake Bulldogs are close upon the tiger and Missouri must defeat Kansas to gain the laurels should Drake defeat Iowa State in its last game Saturday at Ames.

TIGERS AND NUTMEGS MEET IN TITLE GAME

Next Sunday, Nov. 22, place undecided, the Greeneville Tigers and Nutmegs battle it out for the grid championship of Norwich and eastern Connecticut. This game should be the game of games for this section as both teams are out for the other's scalp.

In preparation for this game the Nutmegs will get down to work tonight when a long practice session will be held at Chelsea Parade at 7.30 sharp to which all members are requested to report promptly. Drills will also be held Tuesday and Friday evenings so that when next Sunday rolls around the team should be in first class shape. The Nutmegs hope to have their full playing strength of the field next Sunday so that Greeneville can prepare for a busy afternoon when the Nutmegs are met.

VOLLEYBALL TEAM OPENS SEASON ON WEDNESDAY

The men's volleyball team at the Y. M. C. A. is booked to open its season's schedule Wednesday evening when a match game is to be played against the fast South Manchester sextette. The visitors have enjoyed competition with the various teams about the state including the state champions of Meriden, and a fast game is anticipated. The locals are playing good ball and Physical Director Fritz is of the opinion that the Association will have an unusually strong team for this season's competition with outside teams. Wednesday evening's contest will be open to the general public and no admission will be charged.

NO POST SEASON GAME FOR DARTMOUTH TEAM

CHICAGO, Nov. 15—(A. P.)—Dartmouth will engage in no post season football games, Jessy Hawley, coach of the Big Green team, said tonight, although offers have been received from all parts of the country, including the Pacific coast.

The Dartmouth players broke training after the Chicago triumph last night.

NUTMEGS LOSE HARD FOUGHT GAME TO LORRAINE TEAM OF WESTERLY

Sunday afternoon at Sachem Field before a large crowd the Nutmegs went down to defeat before the Lorraine A. C. of Westerly by the score of 12 to 6. The game was well played from start to finish and it was not until the final whistle was blown that a winner was assured. All three touchdowns came as a result of the aerial game. Lorraine scored both their touchdowns in the first period before ten minutes of the game had been played. The Blake to Carr combination resulted in both of the visitors scores, Carr dashing for two touchdowns after receiving Blake's long tosses. The Norwich score came in the third quarter in the second play after the kickoff. MacLaren of Norwich kicked off to Blake of Lorraine, who, when tackled by Butts, Norwich left tackle, fumbled and Butts recovered the ball on Westerly's three yard line. On the first play Herberts hit center for one-half yard and on the next play F. McGrath shot a short forward to Herberts, who went over for the score amidst a maze of Westerly tacklers. All tries for extra points failed.

In the first quarter Westerly had a big advantage over the local boys and it began to look as though the game would be a run-away for the visitors. However in the second period, the Nutmegs staged a comeback and fought Lorraine to a standstill, in the third and fourth quarters the Nutmeg offense began to assert itself but it was not quite enough to overhaul the visitor's twelve point lead.

The Nutmeg's line played a whale of a game, Westerly gaining not a single first down by rushing throughout the entire game. Westerly's only first down outside of the passes came as a result of two five yard penalties in the third quarter.

For Lorraine, Peanut Blake, Nick Mooney, Carr, Gavitt and Thravernetti were the shining lights. Blake and Carr being especially responsible for long gains by the aerial route. For the Nutmegs Williams, who tore through the Westerly line at will, Kelly, and Carlin, by their clever handling of forward passes and vicious tackling, Butts, by his general all-round play and Herberts, by his terrific line plunging were the luminaries for the local boys.

In Sunday's game Grover and Hagberg, guards, Pallocha, tackle, Sadinsky, center and Chase, halfback, were all missing from the lineup and much credit is due the substitutes who took their places for the game.

The lineups were as follows:

Norwich		Westerly
Kelly, le		le, Mark
Ludlow, lt		lt, Brunds
Conerfry, lg		lg, Ashworth
Sullivan, c		c, Robar

DARTMOUTH ESTABLISHES SAFE POSITION IN EASTERN FOOTBALL

NEW YORK, Nov. 15—Hanover's gridiron comet has finished its course.

Homeward bound from Chicago tonight with strengthened national title claims, meteoric Dartmouth brings back to the quiet New Hampshire hilltop from which it hurtled two months ago one of the most brilliant records of modern football. Unbeaten for two seasons, with a total of 340 points for eight contests this fall an average of almost 43 a game—Jesse Jawley's remarkable team lays aside the maleskins to rule the eastern gridiron front until another year with undisputed authority.

Yale, only two days ago at the head of the contending pack; Pennsylvania, sensation of the early season, Syracuse, hitherto unbeaten and Army, the conqueror of Notre Dame, all have tasted deep and damaging defeats which have added to the lustre of the Dartmouth conquest in its triumphant invasion of the middle-west.

Few campaigns have been more kind to an eastern contender for national honors than this one to Dartmouth. For while the green flare yesterday was inflicting on Chicago its worst defeat at 38-7 since 1918 California unbeaten for nearly six years, bowed to Washington on the Pacific coast, and Iowa, powerful big ten team trod the path to defeat taken by the great Michigan machine.

Possibility of dispute to Dartmouth's claims loomed tonight, however, with Missouri, Washington and Tulane still in the running. Tulane and Missouri have tied, 6 to 6, however, while neither team is able to show a remarkable scoring record such as that of the New Hampshire aggregation. Against the green eleven's total of 340 points, Missouri stacks 103 for seven games, while Tulane has 216 for eight contests. Washington, new sensation of the coast, was held to a tie by Nebraska.

Dartmouth's sweeping triumph at Chicago was the silver lining remaining from a gridiron cloudburst which struck eastern football at full tide, leaving followers of favored elevens completely stunned.

Another Princeton "miracle team," turning its back on a tie with Navy and a defeat from Colgate, snatched the "big three" title from what had appeared to be a powerful Yale eleven, 25-12. Columbia submerged the disasters of its Cornell, Ohio State and N. Y. U. contests beneath a great triumph over the West Point cadets 21-7. The Pittsburgh Panthers, who suffered a jolting defeat from LaFayette, early in the fall, came like a bolt from western Pennsylvania to rout the Quaker ranks which had scarcely been closed behind the dashes of Grange.

But not all the favored teams saw their early season records and hopes wrecked in the teeth of yesterday's storm. Colgate still stood forth unbeaten among the major elevens of the east, decisive victory over a Syracuse team which had previously been scored upon only by Ohio Wesleyan in a 3-3 tie. Fordham, conqueror of N. Y. U. and victor over Holy Cross, also retained its place beside Colgate, as undefeated stampeding C. C. N. Y., with 76 points. The same team held with Dartmouth the honor of being one of the season's few unbeaten and untied elevens.

Lafayette, the team which blocked Pittsburgh's early advance, likewise deprived Colgate of a similar standing, by holding the Hamilton, N. Y., outfit to a 7-7 draw.

A bewildering aerial attack, the principal defensive weapon of Dartmouth, has also brought to Princeton one of the most astounding "big three" triumphs in the history of the series. With the victory goes to Roper's team the distinction of piling up one of the biggest scores of the series. A total of sixty-one points was amassed by the Tigers-36 against Harvard and 25 against Yale.

How unreliable were early season test of series power has been convincingly proven once more in the unexpected triumph of a supposedly weak Tiger. Harvard had mystified the experts by surpassing Yale in an overwhelming triumphy against Middlebury, only to lose to Holy Cross and Dartmouth. Yale lost to a Pennsylvania puzzle, then came back and defeated Army. But Princeton had been the most deceptive of all, with its successive blows at Harvard and Yale as the climax to a season which otherwise gave little indication of jungle success.

Other games felt the general spirit of revolt. A rebuilt Harvard team, gathering new hope from Yale's defeat by Princeton, came back after three successive defeats and set the state for its grapple with the Bulldog by nosing out Brown, 3-0; Canisius held Cornell to 7 points in the first half before wilting completely; Maryland almost upset Washington and Lee before losing, 7-3; Bucknell led Navy until the final quarter; W. and J. owed its only touchdown against Detroit to a fumble.

LaFayette, Amherst, Georgetown, N. Y. U. and Holy Cross were a few of the teams which dodged the uprising and refused to be driven from the dope bucket.

MULLIGAN'S BLUES BEATEN FOR FIRST TIME THIS SEASON

HARTFORD, Nov. 15.—(A. P.)—The All-New Britain professional football team, winner over the undefeated Atlantic City Blue Tornadoes last Sunday, continued its assault against undefeated elevens by handing George Mulligan's state championship Hartford Blues their first defeat of the season by a score of 6 to 0.

Neither team could gain with any consistency through the opposing line, although as the first half ended the Blues had the ball on the New Britain one foot line after a series of line plunges by Davis. Two field goals by "Chuck" Connors, former New Hampshire and Steam Roller star, proved the winning margin.

FOOTBALL SEASON IS FEATURED BY EXCEPTIONALLY CLEAN PLAYING

NEW YORK, Nov. 15—(A. P.)—The November sport trail tonight led through an impending war on the high cost of loafing talent to its final contest of collegiate football.

A sharpening of pencils for the All-American bombardment and renewed discussion on the training advantages of the ice business, as conducted by Red Grange, echoes from the wings of the state, with sectional supremacy apparently already established. Dartmouth in the east, Tulane in the south, Washington on the Pacific coast and Missouri in the mid-west stood out in their fields. There remained to be decided only questions of traditional rivalry, bringing together such old foes in the east as Yale-Harvard, Army-Navy, Lehigh-Lafayette and Cornell-Pennsylvania.

As fandom took up the absorbing question of individual prowess—pitting the powerful wing of "Big Swede" Oberlander against the flying feet of the phantom Grange and the charge of the weirs against the thrust of the josses—critics digressed for a brief period to pay tribute to the team of 1925 for cleaner football.

It is not so far back on the college gridiron that the great backfield player was the target for particularly aggressive treatment from opposing teams. Officials have commented on the marked absence of such play in many important games this year. Grange, expected to be subjected to a severe test at Pennsylvania, owed a measure of his success to sportsmanlike tactics on the part of Young's men.

"Pennsylvania's one slogan was to 'get Grange,' but the 'getting' tactics were a distinct departure from the methods used by too many teams in the past," commented one critic. "When Grange was tackled, he was simply downed—he was not mauled or abused."

When Davis-Elkins players learned that the crippled Harding was Army's only available quarterback, the cadet star was treated with exceptional consideration by the West Virginia eleven, while Rutgers perceiving the new trend of the game, has gone so far as to call into a play a drop kicker whose accuracy is dependent upon his taking the range through a pair of spectacles.

The passing of this ancient dance on the gridiron touched no responsive chord in the pugilistic realm as the fight of promoters against paying exorbitant purses to star boxers gained official recognition and assistance from the New York boxing commission. The efforts of this board were directed toward aiding Tex Rickard to put something besides gloves and water buckets in the ring of his new $5,000,000 Madison Square Garden for a Christmas benefit, but signs of a dearth of good championship cards still confronted the famous matchmaker tonight.

Boxing

Mickey Walker indicated that he may be coaxed into a defense of his title against the new English favorite, Tommy Milligan, but Young Stribling balanced the favorable turn by declining to engage in heavyweight combat with Gene Tunney. Rickard finally threatened to follow in the footsteps of Jimmy DeForest in developing new talent to "lock out" the nation's pugilistic royalty. His outlook was somewhat dimmed however,—as the steadily increasing army of foreign talent failed to get past the first lines of American resistance, defeat of the French champion, Lucient Vines, being the chief blow dealt last week.

Baseball

In contrast to the turmoil within pugilism, loomed the prospect of a tranquil season of indoor baseball, with the windows of approaching major league meetings here flung wide open to admit the dove of peace which once fled wildly before the verbal thunderclaps of Commissioner Landis and Ban Johnson. There was every indication that the magnates would carry to the session only chips that could be knocked off in constructive action—consideration of the question of an earlier closing date, locking the portable typewriters of the world series mauler-reporters, and improvement of the ever troublesome draft situation.

Track

The outdoor athletic season likewise neared the finish line with no outward indications of strife. Finnish supremacy over the long distances remains unbroken. For four years American clubs of the Metropolitan section have endeavored to dislodge Willie Ritola and his compatriots, but the Finns continue rule over the cross-country routes.

America thus has left only the growing hope that Albert (Whitey) Michelson of Port Chester, N. Y., a possible Olympic marathon champion has been developed this year. By his triumphs in the fifteen mile A. A. U. title grind and the Port Chester marathon, Michelson established ermarkable time records.

It is seventeen years since this country produced an Olympic marathon champion, and while Michelson may not succeed to the title once held by Johnny Hayes, he has at least partially covered the tracks of a decade left on American running history by Hannes, Kohlehmainen, Willie Kyronen, and Ritola.

NEW LONDON MAY RAISE WHARF RENT OF NUMEROUS FLOATING FISH MARKETS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 15.—It is expected that the proposed ordinance regarding the use of fuel oil for heating will be reported to the city council Monday evening, as that measure was referred to committee last week when the ordinance was introduced by the fire marshal with the endorsement of the city manager. There was some lively discussion of the proposed measure then and the statement was made that the ordinance had the ear-marks of being an instrument by which insurance companies were seeking to make the city do work for them in bringing about restrictions as to the use of oil for heating that were not warranted. Councilor Whiton, one of the shrewdest members of the city government insisted that the proposed ordinance should be referred for a report, while other members were inclined to vote to reject the ordinance as so complicated that no one knew exactly what was desired unless it was to hamper the users of oil for fuel so that such use would not be attempted. As the ordinance now stands there is said to be small chance of its adoption. Under its provisions there is absolutely no chance of accident from the use of the oil, and, indeed, the expense involved in the installation of the means of burning oil is so great that no one would be apt to attempt its use.

There is criticism of the action of the city council in fixing a very low rate of rental for berths for the fishing boats that come to the city wharf and there retail fish in as much as the price charged is about the same, or exactly the same, as is charged in the retail markets. It is understood when the wharf was placed at the disposal of the fishermen that residents of the city would be supplied with fish at a normal figure because the fishermen had no overhead to pay in the way of store rentals and clerk hire. What would seem to be a good reason for expecting that fish could be retailed for a lower price than the stores charged. At the time it was said that such a deal was hardly a fair one as the stores paid taxes and gave employment to men not employed when the fishing boats supplied the fish. A change in the rental charged the fishing boats may be made if the prices at retail are held up where they now are.

An automobile owned and operated by Arthur J. Page, 381 Broad street, and a commercial truck owned and driven by Morris Krasnow, 73 Connecticut avenue, were in collision this morning at the corner of Broad and Williams street. Both machines were damaged.

Carl M. Bliven, Mystic, came to New London Saturday night and parked his automobile on Green street, near the corner of Golden street. When he returned two hours later he discovered that the auto, a Hudson coupe, had been stolen. He notified the local police of the theft and an alarm was sent out to various police departments of the state. This morning the automobile was found abandoned in Meriden. Bliven went to that city during the day and recovered his property.

At the institution this afternoon it was stated that the boy was resting as comfortable as could be expected.

Two youths together with several companions, was riding on the rear of an express wagon owned by Morris Bampert and driven by Palmer Beckwith on Pequot avenue, when Beckwith attempted to drive the youths from the vehicle by using a whip, the Cohen youth jumped from the wagon and in front of the automobile, which was about to pass.

The New York, New Haven & Hart-ford Railroad recently pensioned a number of its employes and among those to be retired are two New Londoners, veterans in the service of the railroad.

Lewis W. Tooker, 33 Howard street, well known yard conductor employed in the union station yard many years, was one of the railroaders pensioned. Mr. Tooker's pension was brought about by a piece of steel entering his eye and destroying the sight of that member recently. Mr. Tooker entered the employ of the New Haven road April 20, 1858 as yard brakeman under Herman Schults, yard conductor at Norwich on the Norwich & Worcester divisions. From September, 1896 until October, 1896 he was employed in the same capacity on the Naugatuck division and from October, 1896 until February 4, 1923, he was employed as yard brakeman and yard conductor, the greater part of which time in the New London railroad yards. Mr. Tooker has always been considered one of the best if not the best employe in train service on the New London division. Although his pension has been but recently approved, it is effective as of February 1, 1925. Mr. Tooker has a record of 37 years of continuous service.

The other New Londoner to be pensioned is Olin F. Miller, 110 Hempstead street. Mr. Miller entered the employ of the New Haven road in July, 1887, as freight clerk and freight checker under Charles Prentis, then agent of the New London line here. He was employed in that capacity until April, 1897, when he was appointed freight agent at Tafts, and in December, 1897, he assumed the duties of freight agent at Jewett City, which position he held until his recent retirement. Mr. Miller has a record of 38 continuous years of service.

Another veteran railroad man to be retired is William McGowan, 26 Northwest street, Stonington. Mr. McGowan entered the employ of the Providence Line Steamship company as fireman May 2, 1881, under Chief Engineer Finigh, of Stonington. He was made passenger brakeman February 26, 1886 on the New York, Providence & Boston railroad, and was promoted to baggage master February 26, 1893, continuing in this capacity until his retirement, Mr. McGowan has a record of 44 years of continuous service.

Carlos Barry, cashier of the Union Bank & Trust company, has returned to his home, Quaker Hill, after having spent several days in New York.

Judge S. Victor Prince was "good to 'em" in the police court Saturday because he showed leniency to the men presented for infraction of the laws of the city and the state. Frank Lacosky, a Norwich man was presented for intoxication and for vagrancy. He went to the police station the night before showing positive signs of having been tackling booze. He said he had not indulged in intoxicating liquor but his appearance contradicted what he said. He wanted a place to sleep. That was provided for him but he was cautioned that he had come there so frequently that he was then in the vagrant class. This seemed to anger him and he let out a torrent of abuse upon the officers who escorted him to his "room." That led to the charges being made against him in court. Lacosky told Judge Prince that he resided in Norwich but that he could not get work and that he had a wife and three children to support. His statement could not be denied as he was allowed to get out of town, cautioned to keep away from liquor and to make an earnest effort to get employment.

Robert Wentworth a young man who said his home was on Fisher's Island bought an automobile at New Haven and sought to drive it here and then to take it by boat to the island. He was possessed of a Maine license, but had no such paper that permitted him to operate a car in Connecticut. He took a chance and lost because a policeman stopped him and asked to see his authority to drive. He said he supposed the license he held was all he needed. To let him get to the island Judgment was suspended.

Ralph W. Tinker charged with in-toxication was given a suspended sentence. He has been in court before but never for intoxication. He is getting to the brink however so he was told to watch his step or take the penalty.

Philip Merriam, drummer, parked his car on the west side of Bank street in a restricted area just as if there were no forbidding signs there. He said he did not see the warning boards because there were other automobiles ahead of him. That was a slim sort of an excuse but it was a possible reason why Merriam offended and he was given the benefit of the doubt. He was told in plain words what would happen if he offended again and then he was released.

Demersky furnished sureties on his bond of $1,000 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow morning in H. Marcus and Arthur Wilensky. Irving C. Larkin, 12 Union street, a truck driver, was held in bail of $50 as a witness against Demersky. E. F. Fakourey, Main street, qualifying as surety on the bond.

Black, 84 Thames street, Groton, lodged complaint with the police this afternoon alleging that the operator of a Jordan automobile which is registered in the name of Joseph Muscarella, 110 Shaw street, had evaded responsibility when the driver's machine collided with a car owned and operated by Black on Bank street, corner of Shaw street. Black declared that after his machine was struck and damaged that the operator of the colliding automobile speeded away without stopping to ascertain the extent of the damage occasioned. Later in the day Traffic Officer John Courtney determined that the owner of the car's brother, Charles Muscarella was the guilty driver and locating Muscarella, took him into custody. Muscarella will be arraigned in the police court Monday forenoon.

Traffic Officer William Corcoran ascertained late this afternoon that a Jordan automobile had been parked on Winthrop street. Inquiry of the police brought the information that the auto is the property of Hillmut Tranter, 35 Vineland Terrace, Hartford, and was stolen in that city last Friday.

James Dixon, colored, and with a long police record for playing the part of a "Peeping Tom," and for petty offenses, was arrested this evening by Patrolmen Frank Philopena and John Foley charged with statutory burglary. He was made a prisoner being unable to furnish a surety on his bond for his appearance in the police court.

International Balladist at Broadway.

Asked what she thinks of the musical training of the general public, Isa Kremer, the famous Russian singer who will sing here tonight at the Broadway theatre answered:

"If the music is not the biggest thing in the life of everybody it can be a very potent factor in the lives of those to whom it is but a second and third interest. Simply think of the musical foundation which is being ingrained in the American children.

"School days are mighty impressionistic days and if boys and girls are drinking in music from the ages of about ten to twenty a basis of musical love, understanding and appreciation is being laid that is seldom, if ever relinquished. Later in life other things may claim their periods but the years of early training and development will nearly always exert an inored influence and pull them back in the wonderful art of music whenever they begin to stray from it. Not only will some of them become good practical musicians but the great majority of them will become the mainstay of your concert audiences in the future."

Palace Theatre.

At last, the world's foremost comedian, Charlie Chaplin, has launched his greatest comedy, "The Gold Rush," on the sea of popular fancy. Announcement is made by Manager McAvoy of the Palace theatre that he has paid the record price for any photoplay ever shown in Norwich and that the celebrated star's new United Artists Corporation release comes here soon.

For sixteen months, Charlie Chaplin worked on this production. During that time he was practically a hermit—recluse to all, save his studio associates. Only the vaguest announcements of progress on "The Gold Rush" came from his studio.

The factory system of movies, and the consequent mediocrity as an art, have in Charlie Chaplin an example of the opposite production method in this dramatic comedy. It has been made with the artist's necessary leisure. It was never restricted by definite schedule or time-clock methods, but inspired by Chaplin with a passion for perfection as his only taskmaster.

When Chaplin works, he burrows into solitude. He broods, agonizes, sweats comedy and its dramatic counterbalance from his soul. He creates by inspiration. When the mood is upon him he toils feverishly. Then he may rest and brood again for weeks—and always when the productive throes are upon him he is sensitive to the thumpings of the outside world.

WILLIAM MITCHELL

Princess Bonnie is destined to win its way into the heart of local theatre goess, from the raising of the curtain until the finale of act two.

In choosing Mrs. Mabel Buckingham for the role of Princess Bonnie the talent committee has secured an ideal voice and personality to meet the requirements. Another fine choice has been made in securing J. Warren Kane to play the part of Roy Sterling, lover of Princess Bonnie, and he may be trusted to handle his part in his most efficient manner.

Aunt Crabbie, as played by Mrs. Myra Frink Ward, is sure to be one of the pleasant surprises of the show while Donna Pomposo, played by Miss Mary Prodell, a new Legion find, promises to be one of the artistic hits of the show.

Miss Eunice Taft, in the role of Kitty Clover, has a part which she is able to fill to perfection and her solo numbers are most charming.

Herbert McNeely may be trusted to handle the imposing character of Admiral Pomposo and George Madden, as Salvadore will get his part across in his usual capable manner. Frank Crowell as Captain Tarpaulin and Harry Bowers, as Capt. Surf have parts of importance and delightful solo numbers, as does Faicetti, which is ably handled by Walter LaFontaine, who possesses a clear and powerful voice.

On the shoulders of William Mitchell, the Legion has placed the role of Shrimps. This part, wherever Princess Bonnie has played, has been a hit of the show and "Bill" may be trusted to get it across and also get the laughs, for he has demonstrated his laugh getting ability in other local products. Two of his best numbers will be My Bark Canoes which he sings with Kitty, and You Never Lose a Little Fish.

Get your seats now at Engler's and boost the Legion in its work for the disabled veterans.

An announcement of the formation of a "service association" designed to clude 12,000 Massachusetts state employes was followed quickly by a statement from Gov. Alvan T. Fuller denouncing any joint movement on the part of state employes to compel salary increases.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theater

"Lo, the iron horse has come," said an amazed band of Indians as they watched the progress of the first locomotive across their hunting grounds.

But to the amazement of the aborigines is nothing when compared with the excitement created at the Breed theater last night, where The Iron Horse, the latest William Fox screen feat, was shown for the first time in this city.

It was an amazed audience which left the Breed theater after the showing of this picture, for they had witnessed the greatest screen production of this or any other year. Mere words are inadequate to describe this colossal masterpiece. It is the highest point ever attained by a motion picture production. It is astounding in its mighty proportions.

To call The Iron Horse a great achievement, and let it go at that would be like classifying The Odyssey, Dante's Inferno, or Milton's Paradise Lost, merely as great poems. The Iron Horse, which Mr. Fox completed at a tremendous cost in money and time, is a national epic of one of the stirring periods in American history which will live through the ages.

The theme of The Iron Horse is the race between the Central Pacific and Union Pacific railways for mileage in the building of the first trans-continental railway, during and after the Civil war.

To George O'Brien, new William Fox "find," goes the honor of playing the leading male role in this epochal achievement of screenland. Madge Bellamy was honored with the leading feminine role. Both must have realized the honors conferred on them for their acting is beyond criticism. Sharing the honors with O'Brien and Miss Bellamy are Judge E. S. Bull, who plays the part of Abraham Lincoln; J. Farrell MacDonald, and Francis Powers, who play the roles of humorous Irishmen, just discharged from the G. A. R., and they give the picture a touch of rare humor.

To Jack Ford goes the undying fame of having directed The Iron Horse. John Russell and Charles Kenyon are the authors.

Broadway Theatre.

Let us introduce, here, in a few words Isa Kremer, leaving to the critics the care to speak about her voice and her art.

She was born in Russia. When seventeen she went to Italy where she studied in Milan with the famous Professor Konsi. Four years later she made her debut in Mimi, of "La Boheme." Called back in Russia she sang Yolanda in "Yolanda;" Tatiana in "Eugene Onegin;" Martha, in "Czar's Bride," Madame Butterfly, Mahon, etc.

In 1916, at the apogee of her success she abandoned the opera for the concert field. Her debut in Moscow made her celebrated all over Russia and her career since then has been but a continuous success. She left Russia in 1919, sang in many European capitals and came to America in October, 1922. Those who were in Carnegie hall the 29th of October shall never forget this marvelous and unique afternoon when the enthusiastic audience surrounded the stage acclaiming a long time the singer. The day after the press confirmed in splendid words the verdict of the public.

Since then Isa Kremer has conquered all the cities where she sang and few artists have been praised as she has been. But the space is measured here and we can only reproduce a few of the criticisms.

four big cities.

New York Tribune—H. E. Krehriel: It may be said that there is that in the quality of her art—in the eloquence of her tones, in her varied facial expressions, in the plasticity of her poses and gestures, the varied fibres of her voice—even in the technical excellence of her vocalization—which awakens understanding in the emotions of even those to whom not a word of French, Italian, Russian or even English is intelligible. She is an interpreter who plays upon the minds and emotions of her audience as the pantomimist did whom Nero wished to attach to himself that he could make his wishes understood by his barbarian subjects who knew not the Roman tongue. In this she is admirable.

Chicago Tribune—Edward Moore: Isa Kremer developed her own specialty, that of singing the songs of many nations in the language of each and making one as eloquent and dramatic as any opera of them all.

Isa Kremer has everything from tender humor to serious tragedy in her larynx, her face and her hands, and she sang before the most friendly audience on earth.

Also, her sense of the dramatic makes her the best of the interpreters of Moussorgsky's "Hopak."

Herald-Examiner — Glenn Offord Gunn: That enormously gifted singer Isa Kremer cast her hypnotic spell over the 2800 persons who gathered in Orchestra hall to hear her last night. she carried them from Russia to Italy, France, the Sunny South. She did this in a brief quarter of an hour and with a short group of songs. But she made it as worthwhile a fifteen minutes as I have spent in the concert hall for many a season.

PUBLISHER OF BOOKS DEAD HEROES REWARDED BY DEBT

AMIENS, Nov. 14 (AP)—Publication of books written by French writers killed in action during the World war put M. Edgar Malfere in financial straits, but it may obtain for him the decoration of the Legion of Honor.

The publisher ventured all his fortune in posthumous writings, which in part was a labor of love, because Malfere's brother, an author of promise and a host of author-friends, met death in war. Wishing to provide a literary memorial to the... Malfere got out expensive collections. Their sales did not reward him.

Former poilu writers of France, for the most part too poor to assume the loss of their publisher friend, have asked the minister of fine arts to decorate Malfere with the Legion of Honor for unselfish and patriotic service.

Loveis never found by seeking it and it never stays for pleading.

CREATE MORE SCHOOLS FOR VAGRANT RUSSIAN CHILDREN

MOSCOW, Nov. 14 (AP)—Vagrant children in Russia number more than 300,000, the commissar of education has found. He characterized it as a situation menacing the welfare of the country and accordingly has organized a new system of factory schools for homeless children.
The big centers, like Moscow, Leningrad, Kharkow and others are overrun by homeless waifs, who sleep on the sidewalks, half-naked and half starved. The "Central Lenin Fund" for vagrant children, to which the government contributed several million roubles and to which another few millions have been added by voluntary contributions, has been found insufficient.
The factory school intends to teach the waifs various trades in addition to their general education.

An agreeable truth may lie at the bottom of the well, but the disagreeable kind comes to the surface.

POETRY

A Prayer

Lord, not for light in darkness do we pray,
Not that the veil be lifted from our eyes,
Nor that the slow ascension of our day
Be otherwise.

Not for a clearer vision of the things
Wherewof the fashioning shall make us great,
Not for remission of the peril and stings
Of time and fate.

Not for a fuller knowledge of the end
Whereto we travel, bruised yet unafraid,
Not that the little healing that we lend
Shall be repaid.

Not these, O Lord. We would not break the bars
Thy wisdom sets about us; we shall climb
Unfettered to the secrets of the stars
In Thy good time.

We do not crave the high perception swift
When to refrain were well, and when fulfill.
Nor yet the understanding strong to sift
The good from ill.

Not these, O Lord. For these Thou hast revealed;
We know the golden season when to reap
The heavy-fruited treasure of the field,
The hour to sleep.

Not these. We know the hemlock from the rose,
The pure from stained, the noble from the base,
The tranquil, holy light of truth that glows
On Pity's face.

We know the paths wherein our feet should press,
Across our hearts are written thy decrees.
Yet now, O Lord, be merciful to bless
With more than these.

Grant us the will to fashion as we feel,
Grant us the strength to labor as we know,
Grant us the purpose, ribbed and edged with steel,
To strike the blow.

Knowledge we ask not—knowledge thou hast lent;
But, Lord, the will—there lies our bitter need,
Give us to build above the deep intent
The deed, the deed.

—John Drinkwater.

The Polar Quest

Unconquerably, men venture on the quest
And seek an ocean amplitude unsailed.
Cold virgin, awful, scorning ease and rest,
And heedless of the heroes who have failed.

They face the ice floes with a dauntless zest.

The polar quest! Life's offer to the strong!
To pass beyond the pale, to do and dare,
Leaving a name that stirs us like a song,
And making captive some strange otherwhere.

Though grim the conquest, and the labor long.

Forever courage kindles, faith moves forth
To find the mystic floodway of the North.
—Richard Burton.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Call the manager. This is a bad one.

Waiter—I wouldn't be in, were you sir. So's he.—Harvard Lampoon.

Talk is cheap until you start telling your wife how much you won.—University of West Virginia Moonshine.

Customer—This skunk coat is very fine, but will it stand rain?
Salesman—Did you ever see a skunk carry an umbrella?—Columbia Jester.

Yes, she's a lady of the old school. As to how?
Always asks a gentleman's permission before smoking.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Young Bride (at night in Pullman berth)—Honey, Honey?
Man (in next berth)—Confound it, madam, this is a sleeping car, not a bee hive!—The Progressive Grocer.

Parson (to hostess' little boy)—I suppose you know the story of Jonah and the whale?
Johnny—Yes. When I told Mr. Goodcatch about sister's other fellow, she said I was a Jonah and I got whaled.—Boston Transcript.

Restaurant Manager (to orchestra conductor)—I wish you'd display more tact in choosing the music. We've got the National Association of Umbrella Manufactures here this evening, and you've just played "It Ain't Gonna Rain No More!"—Good Hardware.

It was at a summer camp and Caroline was nowhere to be seen for more than an hour. When she came back she told her mother she had been for a walk with her best friend. Alarmed, the mother said: Never do so again. You little girls must not go to the woods alone.
Caroline answered—But we were not alone, Muvver. Evelyn was wis me and I was wis Evelyn.—Everybody's.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, Nov. 14—(By the A. P.)—All records for the volume of trading on the New York stock exchange were broken this week when over 15,000,000 shares changed hands. Prices suffered a drastic collapse in Tuesday's record-breaking session over 3,000,000 shares, but recovered most of the lost ground later in the week with the rails and oils superseding the motors as market leaders.

Wheat prices advanced 3 to 8 cents a bushel in response to a sudden revival of heavy export buying. Cotton prices broke sharply on Tuesday, but soared upward again on Wednesday, in reflection of uneasiness over the condition of the unpicked crop. Selling was renewed later in the week on reports that Lancashire spinners were proposing a further curtailment of production, but the week's closing prices were generally above those of last Saturday.

Money rates, continued relatively easy despite the unexpected raising of the Boston federal reserve rediscount rate on Monday afternoon, which was generally blamed for the heavy selling of stocks the next day. Speculative confidence in the market was restored when the New York federal bank reduced its 3 1-2 per cent rate at its meeting on Thursday. The weekly clearing house statement showed an excess in reserve of over $44,000,000.

The rally in the stock market started Wednesday, the morning after the big break, and continued through the first hour of trading this morning after which heavy week-end profit-taking turned the course of prices irregular. Motors were heavily sold on the theory that they had discounted all the good news in sight.

TAFTVILLE

Leo Boulley has resigned his position with the Poneman company.

William H. Whitehead, of Boswell avenue, has been a recent visitor in Woonsocket.

A minstrel troupe has been organized among the young men and women of the parish of the Taftville Congregational church to supply the entertainment at the second night of the annual church fair, which is soon to take place. Archie Torrance, Jr., is to be the interlocutor and the end men are Victor H. Davis, Thomas Parsons George W. Weller, Jr., and Oscar H Heinrich.

Troop 2, Boy Scouts, held a meeting Friday evening in the recreation rooms of the Taftville Congregational church under the direction of Scoutmaster Harold E. Linderson.

Plans for a welcome-home affair to be given in honor of the return of Rev. U. O. Bellerose, pastor of the Sacred Heart church, who is en route from Europe, are being formed among the parishioners.

The small owl recently captured by Albert Langlois was found dead in its cage one morning last week. As the owl had a never-ending appetite for raw meat, the cause of its death is not known. The bird was pronounced by some who saw it as a saw-whet owl.

Miss Anna M. Beardow and Newell Beardow, of Providence street, have been recent guests at the home of Mr and Mrs. Harry Cook, of Branford.

Sugar Brook Farm Guests

A Central Village correspondent writes: Thursday evening, Norman White had open house for friends, who were interested in his collection of Indian curios, relics and native basketry. Many were glad to meet Needahbeh, the full blooded Penobscot Indian from Maine, who was at the garden party at Sugar Brook last summer and added much to the success of the affair. The exhibit was given and he also had a sale of beautiful baskets. He sang a solo during the evening and read the address he was to broadcast from radio station WJAR at Providence the following evening. A lunch was served by Mrs. Day and her assistants, Miss Freda Eyers and Mrs. Abby Hopkins. Friends from Norwich, and Moosup were present, the Norwich guests including Dr. W. W. Leonard and Dr. H. H. Chamberlain.

An old bachelor says that it was Adam's wedding Eve that caused it all.

A very few doses righted him. His bowels became active and in a short time Robert became regular and his general health improved."—Mrs. O. A. Close, Waltham, Mass. Only one of many tributes to Dr. True's Elixir,

The True Family Laxative

and worm expeller. Made of pure herbs, pleasant to the taste and effective in correcting constipation in old and young. Large sized family bottle $1.20; other sizes 60c and 40c.

THANKS NORWICH CITIZENS FOR AID IN DRIVE

The following expression of thanks to the people of Norwich for the assistance they gave in the drive for St. Joseph's school was made Sunday by Rev. S. A. Icick pastor of St. Joseph's church:

"The drive for the St. Joseph school is over. Over nine thousand dollars in cash has been realized. The pledges and other donations which we still expect to receive, will, we hope, greatly increase the total amount.

"When one considers the fact, that times were none too prosperous and that the people had their taxes and coal bills to pay at this time, this drive was a great success and a wonderful manifestation of a big, broad and generous community spirit. A vast majority of the people of Norwich contributed towards the St. Joseph's school. Among the contributors all races and creeds were represented. The people who are in favor of private or sectarian schools and those who are against them assisted us in our enterprise.

"Being in the city but a short time I greatly appreciate the generous and general support that I receive from the citizens of Norwich. The new St. Joseph school will not only save money for the average taxpayer, but it will fill a long felt want as a community center for those who need such an institution most, in order to get acquainted with American language, ways and customs.

"The remarkable success of the drive was in no small measure due to the energy and ability of the chairman Mr. Adelard Morin, to the co-operation of the general committee and to the untiring efforts of the team captains and their teams. I wish to hereby acknowledge on behalf of the St. Joseph parish and myself the great appreciation and deep gratitude for their self sacrificing efforts on behalf of the new St. Joseph school.

"I take this opportunity to thank sincerely all the citizens of Norwich for their generous contributions and wholehearted support of an institution which, I hope, will serve the best interests of this wonderful community.

"The new school will be completed and opened for public inspection on the 15th of January, 1926. You are all cordially invited to come and to avail yourselves of the various social features that it will offer."

OPENING SCHOOL BUILDING AT MERIDEN SANATORIUM

One of the most unusual school buildings in Connecticut will be opened the coming week when the six room structure which has been built for 325 children at Undercliff, the state tuberculosis sanatorium at Meriden, is fully equipped for use. All the pupils are patients of the institution, which is filled with boys and girls under thirteen years of age, who are suffering from lung tuberculosis. The state tuberculosis commission determined that they should have school privileges equal to those enjoyed by other Connecticut children of school age and some time ago erected a small school building. It has recently been enlarged and remodeled until it contains six school rooms, each seating about 40 pupils, and is capable of filling the school, demands for the sanatorium even when it is enlarged beyond its present capacity. Four of the six rooms have a sweeping southern exposure upon which windows almost the entire front of the building, open. Instead of being a typical open-air school, in which the children sit with hands and feet heavily bundled in cold weather, it is a fresh air institution and spacious windows are opened as generously as befits the prevailing weather conditions. The school is equipped with a heating plant, with electric lights, and with every city school room convenience and will allow the convalescing children to keep abreast of the classes which they would have entered if they could have been at home and attended school with their home playmates.

One of the expansions of the school building has been the addition of a kindergarten room, constructed and furnished in accordance with the next approved design and equipment.

The entire school plant at Undercliff, including its six rooms and six teachers, is under the supervision of the state department of education, and Doctor A. R. Meredith, secretary of the state board of education, has alluded to the school rooms at The Seaside sanatorium at Crescent Beach and at Undercliff as among the most unique in Connecticut.

CONNECTICUT SPEAKERS FOR FORESTRY CONFERENCE

Connecticut is to have a large part in the second New England forestry conference at Springfield, on Dec. 10-12th. Col. H. S. Graves and Prof. H. H. Chapman of the Yale Forestry School, A. F. Hawes, state forester, and P. L. Buttrick, secretary of the State Forestry association, are the committee from this state.

Coming on the heels of the New England conference at Worcester, this congress will again show New England acting as a unit and intelligently planning for its future.

This region whose forests were once a great source of wealth, is now largely dependent for lumber on the far west, paying an enormous transportation tax to the transcontinental railways. Meanwhile, she has millions of idle acres which if used for growing lumber, would supply all her needs and be a great source of wealth.

Col. W. B. Greeley, head of the U. S. forest service and George D. Pratt, president of the American Forestry association, will be the chief speakers, Mrs. J. E. Gerard of New Haven, of the Connecticut Women's clubs, has the honor of being the only woman to participate. She will speak on Women's Part in Forest Conservation. Other Connecticut speakers are A. F. Hawes, state forester, who will talk on the Forest Fire Menace, Prof. H. H. Chapman, of Yale, who will speak on Forest Taxation, W. O. Filley, who will discuss Forest Investigations, Senator F. C. Walcott, president of the Connecticut game commission, will bring to the conference the latest information of the Relation of Forestry to Fish and Game and P. L. Buttrick of the Connecticut Forestry association, who will discuss Town Forests.

All sessions of the congress are open to the public.

WEST SIDE MAN FOR SUPERIOR COURT TRIAL

Joseph Simborski, 36, of No. 23 Summit street, was bound over Saturday morning to the criminal superior court on a charge of bestiality, by Judge H. H. Pettis in the city court. Bonds were set at $3,000 and being unable to furnish them Simborski is in jail awaiting his trial. This is the second time Simborski has been bound over to the superior court within four months. Last August he was arrested after being found in a goat shed on High street. The charge at the time was breaking and entering and Simborski was bound over when presented in the city court. In the high court he was fined $50.

Since then he has been watched by people on the West Side, and as a result of his actions late Friday afternoon as seen by people in the neighborhood, he was arrested Friday night at his home, the police having been notified and a warrant being sworn out.

In court Saturday morning Charles J. King of No. 46 Spring street and others, testified that they first noticed Simborski's mysterious actions as he was carrying something concealed under his coat and was going over a hill through an open lot on Spring street. They stated that Simborski had frequented the lot for some time. His actions in that section had aroused the suspicions of people living in the vicinity and they had decided to watch him.

The "something" concealed under his coat started to squirm and got away. It was a hen. Simborski acted as if he wanted to get out of sight of some school children in the vicinity. Mr. King notified Officer Patrick Murphy and Officer Eugene Calkins was also notified.

Officer Calkins tried to cut off Simborski's escape but the men went down Spring street and into a store. Officer Calkins followed him and in order to satisfy himself as to the man's identity, he engaged in conversation with him at the store. A warrant was sworn out and Friday night a squad of officers arrested Simborski at his home.

FALL IS SEASON FOR MORE SERIOUS ACCIDENTS

Motor vehicle transportation in Connecticut is faster through the fall than in the summer, with fewer accidents, but those accidents which do occur are more serious, because of the greater average speed and less immediate mechanical control, and changed conditions due to rain, sleet and wet leaves, says the November bulletin of the state motor vehicle department which comes out today under the heading: "How Weather Affects Traffic."

Illustrating the fact that the thinning out of traffic as the fall season progresses makes for "comparative freedom from traffic emergencies and hazards, and faster time," the bulletin points out that "the actual difference in time, meaning safe time, between two points is marked; for example, between Hartford and New Haven on a busy day in August as contrasted with a busy day in October it amounts to half an hour." It is natural and right, in the view of the department, "that average speed should conform to the capabilities of the vehicles and the capacity of the drivers to be governed by what the engineers call an ample margin of safety."

The difficulty, however, is that, with fewer vehicles on the road, and consequent faster moving of traffic, comes some of the worst weather of each year. The differences in human foresight, particularly the ability to realize and make allowance for changed conditions make September, October, November and December prolific in bad motor vehicle accidents. Drivers have become accustomed to the slow congested summer traffic and do not react quickly enough to the new conditions—fewer cars at greater speed—with the result, according to the bulletin, that control is less prompt and accurate and accidents are worse as to results.

Exceptions are the days of the big football games at New Haven, when the Connecticut traffic returns to summer proportions, so far as numbers go, but it is different in its makeup, going one way chiefly and being composed largely of selected cars with high grade drivers and includes few slow vehicles, such as trucks, to complicate it. Moreover, every available police agency in the state concentrates on the careful regulation of traffic on such days, although, as a matter of fact, the figures in the department show that a day of a big game is less a time of emergency in Connecticut than any pleasant Sunday.

The effect of weather conditions on road surfaces, windshields, drivers in closed cars and pedestrians under umbrellas or bundled up in heavy clothes, covering the ears and often obscuring clear vision, is discussed in the bulletin. Smoke from burning dead leaves, a common nuisance in the fall is mentioned as an additional hazard, as the smoke often becomes so dense that drivers cannot see through it and children fireworshippers are always to be expected in the shadows of these fires.

While the winter snows slow up the traffic, owing to the necessarily narrow highway lanes in many places the deadon type of accident prevails largely, due to the difficulty drivers have in turning out of ruts in time to avoid collisions.

Railroad crossings are held to be protected well enough nowadays so that there is little danger to anyone who takes proper care at any time in the year, but it is imperative that the car be under control and in readiness to stop at all crossings. The North Carolina law which compels a complete stop before going over a railroad grade crossing does not have the endorsement of the Connecticut department, which takes the position that "it is almost too much to ask any person to stop when obviously there is no necessity for it, but whenever the conditions are such that the driver of a car is uncertain as to whether a train is approaching or not, then a stop is indicated."

STATE MANUFACTURERS ARE TO ELECT THEIR OFFICERS

Officers and four new directors will be elected at the annual meeting of the Manufacturers Association of Connecticut to be held in New Haven on November 18. The nominating committee, of which Charles B. Cook, of Hartford, is the chairman, will submit to the membership the following names, and nominations will also be accepted from the floor: President, E. Kent Hubbard; vice president, John H. Goss; treasurer Robert C Buell; for director from Windham county, Dan H. Curtis, agent American Thread company, Willimantic: directors at large, Joseph A. Horne vice president Yale & Towne Mfg company, Stamford, F. B. Farnsworth president and treasurer, Eastern Machinery company, New Haven. H. H. Pease, president and treasurer, New Britain Machine company New Britain.

The officers will be elected for a term of one year and the directors for four years.

Those directors whose terms automatically expire this year are F. B Ricketson, vice president of the Wauregan company and agent of the Ponemah mills, Taftville; E. A. Morse, chairman of the board of directors of the Stanley works, New Britain; I. M Ullman of the Strouse, Adler Co., New Haven, and Charles T. Treadway, a director of the Horton Manufacturing Co., Bristol.

At the annual banquet at 7 p. m. at the Hotel Taft Governor Trumbull will preside and Secretary of Labor Davis and Senator Hiram Bingham will speak.

In the afternoon session, which opens in Osborn hall at 1:15 addresses will be given by Professor F. R Fairchild, of Yale, on "The Present Tax Situation," by President E. Kent Hubbard, of the association on "Coordination of Transportation Agencies," and by Walter Rights on "The Anthracite Strike."

Bus Parties To Games

Several special bus parties motored through Norwich during Saturday morning, bound for New Haven or Providence for the football games. One big lemon-colored bus carried a party of students from Boston.

DISCUSSES RELOCATION OF NORWICH-PUTNAM HIGHWAY

In editorial comment upon the relocation of the Norwich-Putnam highway, the Plainfield Journal has the following to say under the title of Just Supposing:

Just supposing we take another look at this Norwich-Putnam highway rebuilding proposition. What will be the results if either of the two plans proposed is carried out? For the present we will forget the Jewett City part of the plan and concern ourselves with the northern section to Danielson.

Just supposing the Green Hollow relocation plan is adopted. The road will probably leave the present highway near the Francis place in Central, cross the river on a new bridge and follow the Green Hollow road into Broad street, Danielson. Because this is a relocation proposition, the highway department has not authority to maintain both the old and the new roads, and the old road would revert to the town for care. Legislative action would be required to change this and keep the road under state care. This fact has apparently been forgotten.

That means that about a quarter of a mile of road north to the boarding house corner, Central, and a mile and a half from Wauregan school house north to the Killingly line would be turned back to Plainfield. From the Killingly line to Danielson, or about two and a half miles would be turned over to Killingly. Total distance not over four and a half miles. Included in this is one steel bridge at Central.

The present Green Hollow road, now under town care, would be taken under state care. Total slightly more than five miles. The towns concerned would give up care of gravel road, and take over care of tarvia road.

From the point of view of the state the highway department will get aid from the Federal government at the new flat rate of $15,000 per mile, and in addition one-half the cost of bridging the river. There are no grade crossings to consider in this plan.

Now just supposing the Green Hollow plan is not adopted. Then the present road will be rebuilt. On it are two grade crossings. Federal aid is not given at grade crossings, though it will be given up to the crossing. But it is the definite policy of both the federal government and the Connecticut highway department to do away with all grade crossings in the interests of safety. This policy is to be commended. Division Engineer John Smith of Norwich stated to the Journal recently that in all probability if the Green Hollow plan is discarded that the present road will be so routed as to eliminate all grade crossings on it. The survey has not yet been made, but a knowledge of the road will show a few things which can and cannot be done.

It is certain that the crossing in Central street for the one on Main street, Danielson, will not be lifted over the tracks in their present location. Therefore another place to jump the tracks must be found.

In Central, this may mean branching off at the center and going over the railroad somewhere opposite the high school. At Danielson it will mean doubtless branching easterly from the present road before reaching the borough, going over the tracks, and entering Danielson on Broad street just as though the Green Hollow plan were used. An underpass is frowned upon by the department because it causes so much trouble in winter, and even where an underpass used, there seems to be no feasible route which does not involve Broad street so far as Danielson is concerned it looks as though travel will be taken off the narrow Main street anyway, as it should be.

All in both Central and Danielson some road mileage will revert to town care if the above plan is adopted.

This project also calls for two bridges over the railroad. The already overburdened railroads will be called upon to pay one-half the cost of these bridges. The state pays the rest except for a small proportion of the surfacing for which it is understood the federal government pays.

Now which is more economical?

The Moosup river must be rebridged at Central under any plan, so that can be disregarded. The Green Hollow road is unusually straight and level into Danielson. No dangerous curves or grades.

Under the second plan the road is bound to be more crooked, more hilly, and in addition will have two bridges over the tracks, and grading and steel work is expensive. This route is not as direct and will therefore be longer. In such event the cost to the state will be more, the cost to the railroads will be a great deal more, and the cost to the federal government will be somewhat increased. And remember it is the ultimate consumer who pays every time.

As far as the towns go it is difficult to estimate at this distance just how the figures would line up. As regards that steel bridge at Central, under the Green Hollow plan there would be a new bridge a few hundred feet east of the present one, and there is already one near the Central Worsted mill. What will be the need of the old narrow bridge? Surely it will not pay to maintain that bridge to save autos only a few hundred feet of travel.

Which ever way things work out apparently there will be some tarvia road turned back to the towns for care and the only way to avoid this will be legislative action, as has been started.

Then the common sense, far sighted plan would appear to be to adopt the direct route which avoids the necessity of bridging railroads and which will run straight and true, opening up in both towns another section of territory to tourist travel with resultant increased property values on this road with the result that the towns will be enabled to collect more taxes to help pay for the tarvia road then taken under town care.

Connecticut College

(Special to the Bulletin)

One of the keenest desires of the average person is to read literature of his own time, to appreciate contemporary as well as standard authors. Since the college library of necessity must supply needed reference-books before considering the latest books, there has been a lack of available modern fiction, poetry, drama and biography.

At the suggestion of Professor Girard Jensen, the students in advanced composition and writing classes decided to supply themselves with new books by purchasing them. The plan which met with eager approval by all was that each girl should contribute one dollar a semester and that the money should buy volumes chosen from a large list of contemporary books—all of them recent and some just off the press. The carrying out of this plan has established a happy precedent by which the latest works of facts and fiction may be available. These books are at the disposal of all students.

The list includes: Dark Laughter by Anderson; Jungle Days by Beebe; Prairie Fires by Beers; Drums by Boyd; Like Summer's Cloud by Brooks; The Interpreter's House by Burt; O'Malley of Shenanagh by Byrne; Professor's House by Bather; Contemporary Plays by Dickenson and Crawford; The King of Elfland's Daughter by Dunsany; The Great Gatsby by Fitzgerald; Caravan by Galsworthy; The White Monkey by Galsworthy; Soundings by Gibbs; Barren Ground by Glasgow; M. Ripois and Nemesis by Hemon; The Master of the Inn by Herrick; The Old Women of the Movies, etc by Ibanes; The Constant Nymph by Kennedy; Orphan Island by Macaulay; Hills of Dreams by Machen; Hard Harker by Masefield; The Lamp and the Bell by Millay; The Song of Three Friends by J. G. Nerhardt; The Book of Earth by Noyes; Immigrant to Inventor by Pupin; Watchers of the Sky by Noyes; My Dear Cornelia by Sherman; Taboo by W. D. Steele; The Kenworthys by Margaret Wilson, Mrs. Dalloway by Woolf.

Sophomore hop was held Saturday in the new ball room at Colonial house. There was an added zest to this dance since it was the first one to be held at Colonial house. Carolyn Frear was chairman of the hop committee. The other members were Adelaide King, Olive LaHar, Ruth Shuerman, Virginia Hawkins and Margaret Merriam. Lois Day was chairman of the decoration committee. The patrons and patronesses for the dance were President and Mrs. Benjamin T. Marshall, Dean Nye and Dean Benedict. Miss Sherer, Dr. and Mrs. H. W. Lawrence are honorary members of the class. Miss Helen Hood, president of the Senior class also attended the sophomore hop. Lyceum Seventeen Serenaders, under the direction of Allie Wrubel furnished the music. There were twelve dances and two extras, about one hundred couples attending.

The freshman waitresses for the dance were: Tessa Ayres, Claire Adams, Frances Frear, Lillian Hixey, Nancy Royce, Mary Slater, Elisabeth Sargent, Mary Linn Woodley, Muriel Whitehead and Helen Smith. The waitresses were dressed in Colonial costumes of flowered muslin bodice and under-skirt of tarleton of contrasting color. The customes were of different pattern but all the same style.

LEAVEN OF THE PARABLE MONSIGNOR MAY'S TEXT

Yesterday, the 24th Sunday after Pentecost, the epistle—I Thessalonians, I. 2-10—and the gospel—Matthew 12. 31-35—read in the Catholic churches throughout the world was the same as read on the sixth Sunday after Epiphany. The gospel was the parable of the grain of mustard seed and the leaven which the woman took and hid in three measures of meal. In preaching to the large congregation at the 7:30 mass in St. Patrick's church, the rector, Rt. Rev. Michael H. May took "until the whole was leavened" as his text.

While our spiritual progress always seems to us discouragingly slow, the preacher said, while temptations, appear oftentimes to increase as we grow older, this is no accident, but a manifestation of the designs of God. Were men not beset by temptations did they not realize the frailty of their natures, the irregularity of their desires they would lose the incentive to strive to advance spiritually.

As the athlete must exercise the body, must overcome defects, must refrain, must gain strength by his efforts, so with the soul; although temptations will meet men to their dying hour, yet the very striving to overcome them will mean new strength and God will never suffer His children to be tempted above that which they are able to withstand.

It is not temptation which is wrong—but the consent, the yielding of sin. No matter what the virtue against which temptation troubles the soul, there are always two weapons, prayer and the sacraments. Briefly but convincingly the preacher developed this thought.

Great as was St. Paul, he was beset by temptations, yet he strove against ever his dependence upon his Master, ever his dependence upon his Master. The example of holy Job was cited also. The lesson was, the effect upon daily life and conduct of constant and determined resistance to one's besetting sin, through taking advantage of the means God has placed in the power of each,—confident prayer, and the solace and check of the sacrament of penance.

Monsignor May later gave holy communion to a very large proportion of the congregation, having the assistance of Rev. John J. Reilly. The communicants included the members of the parish Rosary society, who offered their communion for the departed members of their society, their households and for the holy souls in purgatory.

It was announced that the Catholic Ladies of Columbus had requested a memorial mass today (Monday) for the departed members of their organization.

Next Sunday, the communicants will include the men of the Holy Name society, following confession Saturday afternoon and evening.

Reaches St. Augustine Safely

Mr. and Mrs. L. Albertson of Main street, East Side, have received word of the safe arrival of their daughter, Mrs. C. G. Jahn, at her home in St Augustine, Fla. She left here last Monday after a visit of about two weeks and during that time had the experience of seeing one snow storm, the first she had seen in over 20 years.

A new scheme for the improvement of Irish roads has been decided on by the Free State government at a cost of nearly $20,000,000, to be spread over nearly three years. It is proposed to bring 1,500 miles of the country's 4,000 miles of trunk roads to a standard which will give a road life of eight to ten years. The laden weight of new motor lorries will be restricted to nine tons under the plan, and owners of horsedrawn vehicles will be compelled to use wheels with wide rims.

EFFORTS UNDER WAY TO SAVE FAMOUS CALIFORNIA REDWOOD

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 14 (AP)—Increasing effort, with prospect of success, is being made to preserve from extinction the world's tallest and most beautiful tree, the Sequoia sempervirens, or redwood.

Spread over the northern hemisphere of Europe and America when the earth was young, the tree was scoured from the globe by ancient ice sheets until there remained only a forested belt of a few hundred miles along the coast of northern California and a bit of southern Oregon. There in cathedral grandeur it raises its lofty spires 350 feet and more. Its name, sempervirens—ever living—arouses the imagination, for it is from 2,000 to 3,000 years old, only a thousand years younger than its cousin, the Sequoia Gigantea of the Sierra Nevada Mountains.

Magnificent timber, resulting maturity and decay for centuries though fallen, it was cut and shipped throughout the United States as to endanger its exhaustion. Aroused, The Save-The-Redwood-League, composed of such nature lovers as Franklin K. Lane, Dr. John C. Merriam, William Kent and others, actuated by love of beauty, in recent years has raised money to buy some groves and induce the state of California and various organizations to preserve others.

Today, 16,515 acres have been freed from the woodman's menacing axe. In addition, the league has initiated a program for a national redwood park of 20,000 acres of trees that were a half-thousand years old when the star appeared over Bethlehem.

The lumbermen have sympathized with the spirit of conservation, and moved greatly by considerations of financial advantage, began reforestation so extensive as to promise complete replacement of trees cut down. Merchantable redwood timber in the forests, estimated at 50 billion feet board measure, will be reproduced by planting at the rate of 550 million feet board measure yearly, assuming the present rate of cutting and reproduction. Lumbermen figure from this that the second growth of redwood will be ready for cutting in 100 years at the same time that the virgin timber has disappeared.

The tree itself is a great factor in its perpetuation, for sprouts spring from its stumps so profusely and persistently that M. B. Pratt, state forester, says:

"If the planting by the lumber companies is continued on the present scale, I consider that adequate means will have been taken to reforest the cut-over lands, particularly since these lands are reforesting more or less by themselves by means of stump sprouts."

The redwood belongs to the pine family or cone bearing group. In the fall of the year, the cones are gathered from the ground and taken to the nurseries of the lumber companies at Scotia, Fort Bragg and Caspar, Cal. Seeds removed from the cones become trees of six or seven inches in one or two years. Trees thus grown in 1925 numbered 3,250,000.

In the winter of two years ago a start of replanting was made when 500 acres were reforested. Last winter 3,000 acres were planted, and the program for the present winter embraces 6,000 acres. When the total reaches 10,000 acres yearly, this with natural reproduction, it is hoped, will preserve the redwood for posterity.

COURT ASKED TO VACATE PONZI STAY OF SENTENCE

Former Postal Coupon "Wizard" is in Florida Attempting to Recoup His Fortune—Will Endeavor to Sell 10,000,000 Lots With an Expected Profit of $100,000,000—Would Use the First $2,000,000 in Attempting to Repay His Massachusetts Creditors.

BOSTON, Nov. 16.—(AP)—The Boston Herald tomorrow will say that the Suffolk county superior criminal court has been asked to vacate a stay of sentence granted Charles Ponzi, postal coupon "wizard" who has been sentenced to from seven to nine years as a common thief. Ponzi is in Florida attempting to recoup his fortune.

A motion was filed with the clerk of the court today and a hearing has been set for Wednesday next with Assistant District Attorney Maurice Carp prepared to ask that Ponzi be declared in default and returned to serve his sentence.

The motion contends that Ponzi has had ample time to perfect and present his bill of exceptions, on which his stay of sentence was based, and has failed to do either.

Ponzi, who is at liberty under $10,000 bail, has announced that he is attempting to recoup his fortune in Florida real estate by selling 10,000,000 lots with an expected profit of $100,000,000. He has announced that he will use the first $2,000,000 in attempting to repay his Massachusetts creditors who lost their savings when his "international postal coupon" bubble burst.

Ponzi has already served a federal sentence for using the mails to defraud.

William H. Lewis, Ponzi's attorney here, said tonight that he would oppose the motion and termed the action as "entirely unnecessary." He declared that his client had the right of bail until the highest court of appeal had passed on the case and said that he already had filed several bills of exception, none of which had "been acceptable to the district attorney's office."

OPPOSED TO QUARANTINE ON IMPORTATION OF NARCISSUS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—A spirited dispute over the agriculture department's quarantine against importation of narcissus and allied groups of bulbs, scheduled to become effective January 1, marked a hearing on the subject today before Assistant Secretary R. D. Dunlap.

All except the final half hour of today's session devoted to argument by representatives of the Garden Clubs of America, the American Bulb Dealers Society and numerous eastern horticulturists, against the quarantine, contending that the introductin of a new plant disease, or the spreading of a horticultural menace, was not involved.

Representative Charles L. Abernathy, democrat, North Carolina, however, made a vigorous plea in favor of the quarantine, which drew the applause of western bulb growers and the hisses of some of the opponents of the order.

Bringing the economic question into the proceedings, Mr. Abernathy declared that the people of his state as well as others along the south Atlantic coast had invested in bulb growing enterprises on the advice of the agriculture department with assurances that the quarantine would not be rescinded.

Advocating the measure as protection for an American industry, he urged against consideration of foreign interests, especially those of France on the ground that the "French won't pay their debts." It was at this point that the demonstration marked by applause and hisses developed.

NO REAL INDICATION COAL STRIKE IS TO END

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 16.—(AP)—There was some activity among the anthracite miners and operators and their supporters today in the effort to end the strike, which enters its twelfth week tomorrow, but nothing came to the surface to indicate any change in the situation.

While the Rev. J. J. Cutran, of Wilkesbarre, who has been trying to bring an end of the deadlock, was telling the City Business club of Philadelphia in a luncheon address that the mine workers should receive a wage increase counter statements were made public at Hazleton, Pa., by operators and miners on matters at issue.

At Hazleton and its vicinity employes of the Jeddo Highland Coal company, one of the largest independent operations in the hard coal fields, received letters signed by the company showing the amount of wages they have lost in the last eleven weeks and suggesting that they urge their leaders to accept arbitration and enable the men to receive a Christmas pay.

"Don't be fooled by false news about an early settlement," the letters declared. "Almost everyone who knows the facts believes this strike will last until next spring or longer unless arbitration is accepted."

WON RACE TO BEDSIDE OF HIS DYING SISTER

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(A. P.)—After a race with death in a special train for which freight and passenger trains were shunted unto sidings, Guy Waggoner, millionaire oil operator of Fort Worth, Texas, was at the bedside of his dying sister tonight.

The racing special train covered the 1,031 miles between St. Louis and New York in three hours less than the scheduled time of twenty-three hours of the fastest expresses on the Pennsylvania railroad.

A limousine waiting here with a traffic policeman on the running board to clear the way, completed arrangements and Waggoner sped to the bedside of his sister in record time. The trip cost him more than ten thousand dollars, five thousand of which went to the train crew for their part in the performance.

The $5,000 was promised the train crew if they made the run in twenty hours or less, by Mr. Waggoner when he boarded the train. When he climbed from his coach here and started for the limousine he called back over his shoulder to the crew, "You win boys. You are wonders!"

NEW RECORD MADE BY FRENCH AVIATOR

LE BROUGET, France, Nov. 16.(A. P.)—The French pilot Lucien Bossoutrot today set a new mark for birdmen to shoot at when he reached an altitude of 3,500 metres (11,500 feet) remaining in the air one hour 21 minutes, 12 seconds, with a machine weighing 14 1-2 tons, six tons of which was "useful" weight. This is said to be the first time a heavier than air machine has lifted a similar load from the ground.

The Bossoutrot machine is the same super-Goliath plane with which last week he broke the altitude and distance records for planes carrying four tons of useful cargo.

STEPHENSON SENTENCED TO LIFE IMPRISONMENT

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Nov. 16—(A. P.)—D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan, today heard Judge Will M. Sparks sentences him to life imprisonment, for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer.

"Time will unfold the cold white light of truth, and show this honorable court and the world that D. C. Stephenson is not and could not be guilty of this or any other charge against him," Stephenson told the court in a speech preceding his sentence.

Attorneys for the condemned, men hastened to Indianapolis after the formal passing of sentence to prepare motions asking a new trial. They intend, they said, to carry the fight to the Indiana supreme court.

Stephenson was found guilty of second degree murder Saturday by a jury which acquitted Earl Klenck and Jesse Gentry, his bodyguards and co-defendants. The three were charged with first degree murder in connection with the death of Miss Oberholtzer, who took poison after an alleged abduction and attack last March 15.

Sheriff Charles A. Gooding, said he was not sure when Stephenson will be taken to the Indiana state prison at Michigan City.

Klenck and Gentry were back in the jail today after less than two days freedom. They remained there until their leader was sentenced. They had surrendered shortly after noon to answer indictments charging arson and conspiracy to commit a felony. The arson indictment charges the men, with Stephenson and Fred Butler, his private secretary, with responsibility for a fire at the former Klan leader's suburban home in Indianapolis.

NEW HABEAS CORPUS WRIT BY COUNSEL FOR CHAPMAN

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 16.—(A. P.)—On Thursday of this week, Frederick J. Groehl, counsel for Gerald Chapman, who is sentenced to hang next month for the murder of a New Britain policeman, will submit in federal court here, a revised application for a writ of habeas corpus to Judge Edwin S. Thomas, it was learned today.

Judge Thomas ruled last Friday that he would sign an order for a writ today, directing that Chapman be produced in federal court in Hartford on November 26, Today, however, Attorney Frank A. Murphy, representing Chapman, appeared before Judge Thomas and asked for more time in submitting the application.

The application for the writ is the next move on the part of Chapman's counsel to save him from execution at the state's prison on December 3. It is the contention of the condemned man's counsel that he should be returned to the Atlanta penitentiary to complete his 25 years sentence before the state of Connecticut can carry out the execution of the death penalty.

The delay on the part of Chapman's lawyers resulted from a conference between Attorney Groehl and Chapman at the state's prison Saturday when Chapman made a number of suggestions which he wanted placed in the revised writ.

If the writ is signed Thursday it will be turned over to Marshal Jacob D. Walter for service on the warden of th estate's prison at Wethersfield.

TO DELVE INTO STATEMENTS OF MRS. M. R. LANSDOWNE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—(A. P.)—The Shenandoah naval court of inquiry decided today to begin tomorrow an investigation of statements by Mrs. Margaret Ross Lansdowne, widow of Commander Zachary Lansdowne that Captain Paul Foley as judge advocate undertook to influence the testimony she gave before that court concerning the accident which cost the lives of her husband and thirteen other officers and men.

Reconvening after a recess of a month, the court deferred the beginning of this new phase of the inquiry at the request of Major Henry Leonard, a retired marine corps officer, who was appointed judge advocate last Saturday after Secretary Wilbur had relieved Captain Foley of that duty at his request.

Major Leonard said he ha dnot had time to complete his examination of the record of the court in the previous hearings.

Coolidge Will Not Reappoint Haney

As Commissioner of the United States Shipping Board—Has so Informed Senator McNary.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—(A. P.)—With the disclosure today that President Coolidge would not reappoint Bert E. Haney, democrat of Oregon, as a commissioner of the shipping board, it became apparent that the executive might seek other changes in its personnel and urge upon congress legislation to divorce it from the fleet corporation. The president's decision with respect to Mr. Haney was made known to Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, a supporter of the commissioner.

All indications pointed to a crystallization in the president's mind of a merchant marine policy with the cardinal point a "one-man control of the operation and liquidation of the government merchant fleet, through the president of the fleet corporation probably under cabinet or direct white house supervision, in contrast to the present policy of control by a board selected with partisan and regional considerations."

Mr. Haney is serving under recess appointment but his name will not be sent to the senate next month because of the position he has taken in favor of the regional representation plan and his opposition to the one-man control idea, which was emphasized in his successful fight to have Leigh C. Palmer removed as president of the fleet corporation.

In his course at that time, Mr. Haney came into conflict with Mr. Coolidge, who favored retention of Mr. Palmer. Requested by the executive to resign, Mr. Haney refused on the ground that to do so would imply an admission of breach of faith on his part, stating that Mr. Coolidge had requested the resignation because he was not observing an "understanding" reached when he was appointed to support Mr. Palmer.

Prominent in the fight on Mr. Palmer and the one-man control plan were Commissioners Plummer and Benson, and there were indications today that the president might soon call for their resignations. Commissioner Thompson, who also stood with them recently resigned.

Another mentioned among those who might be asked to retire was Chairman O'Connor, although the voting for the ousting of Mr. Palmer did vote for stripping him of his powers, over the fleet, which had previously been conferred by the board at Mr. Coolidge's suggestion.

Whether any or all of them would comply with a resignation request was a much discussed question tonight. Under the merchant marine act, the president may remove a shipping board commissioner only for malfeasance, neglect of duty or inefficiency, it was intimated, however that one of the three at least might resign if asked to do so.

In any event, the entire situation is expected to receive considerable attention from congress. Chairman Jones of the senate commerce committee said today that he would introduce a bill to divorce the fleet corporation from the shipping board with regional representation retained for the latter which would then possess only semi-judicial, regulatory and a few policy functions.

NINE UNITED STATES COAST GUARDSMEN DROWNED NEAR SHELBURNE, NOVA SCOTIA

HALIFAX, N. S., Nov. 16—(A. P.)—Nine men of the United States coast guard steamer Marrill were drowned today near Shelburne, Nova Scotia. They were returning to the Morrill in a small boat when the accident occurred.

The men were in a 26-foot sail boat, which capsized in the storm-lashed waters of the harbor half a mile from shore.

One of the men, C. Taylor, engineer, second class, managed to reach shore three hours after the accident.

The Morrill, which was on her way from the Great Lakes to Boston to lay up for the winter, had been lying off Sandy Point, five miles from here for several days. She left Detroit two weeks ago.

The ten members of the crew in the sail boat had been on shore leave.

Taylor, the sole survivor, was in an exhausted condition and hysterical when rescued. Those who perished were:

Warrant Paymaster Kingsbury.
Warrant Boatswain Lungen.
Coxswain I. J. Brackett.
Chief Yeoman H. McMurdo.
Chief Boatswain's Mate J. R. Shea.
Cabin Steward H. K. Wilson.
Seaman Saulisak.
Seaman Diver.

Engineer Taylor said the men had an early dinner in Shelburne and set out to return to the Morrill, anchored some five miles up the harbor. Their boat had a large sail.

It was 5.30 o'clock this evening and dusk had fallen when they started out. After covering about one-half the distance the Morrill the sail boat went over to her beams end under the force of a sudden heavy swell.

Efforts were made to cut away the rigging so that the craft might right herself. These failing, the men threw themselves on the side of the craft in order to bring it on an even keel.

This attempt proved fatal as the boat swung over and capsized before they could change their positions. All the ten men were thrown into the water.

Taylor's account of the fight for life waged on the overturned craft, described how five of the men were able to pull themselves out of the water and cling to the slippery keel. The upturned craft was constantly washed by huge waves. He also told of how others of the men, too weak to pull themselves up, clung to the edge of the boat and held on as long as they could.

One by one the visitors lost their strength and were forced to let go.

All the time the wind was carrying the wreck ashore, but at an almost imperceptible rate of speed. It was 6.30 o'clock when the accident occured, and pitch dark.

No one witnessed the accident from shore and the cries of the victims did not carry far in the gale that was blowing over the harbor.

At 9 o'clock the drifting craft had reached a point fifty yards off shore. Taylor was the only one of the men left. Half crazed over the loss of his nine companions and fearing his own ability to retain his hold on the boat until help reached him, he decided to strike out for land.

Being a strong swimmer Taylor finally succeeded in reaching th eshore at a wooded spot. Unable to walk he cried out for help and a small boy living nearby heard him. In a short time he was taken to shelter and soon recovered.

Efforts then were made to attract the attention of the Morrill with a view to signalling the tragic news to her commander. No answer could be secured from the cutter and finally communication was established with her by wireless.

None of the bodies of the nine men had been recovered tonight. The name of the ninth victim has not yet been ascertained.

Oppose the Proposed Cut in Alcohol Tax

Members of House Ways and Means Committee Are Deluged With Telegrams of Protest.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—Taxes became involved with prohibition enforcement today in the discussions of the house ways and means committee in its preparation of a revenue bill.

A sub-committee took under consideration suggestions of Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury, in charge of prohibition enforcement, to impose either a one cent a gallon tax on cereal beverages or a $100 occupational levy on brewers to give prohibition enforcement officials power to inspect near beer breweries. Mr. Andrews had informed the committee that power to inspect these plants was necessary to check the "flood of high-powered beer."

Committee members also were deluged today with telegrams of protest from drug manufacturers against the proposed fifty per cent. cut in the tax on alcohol. The manufacturers argued this would encourage bootlegging, and Representative Rainey, democrat, Illinois, said he would ask the committee to reconsider the proposed cut in the alcohol tax and remove instead the levies on stock and grain exchange transactions and those applying to deeds and conveyances.

The committee will meet tomorrow for the first time since last Thursday, and will receive a report from the sub-committee which has been working on administrative provisions of the new bill.

MARYLAND MOB FAILED IN ATTEMPT TO LYNCH NEGRO

CENTERVILLE, Md., Nov. 16—An unsuccessful attempt was made tonight by a mob of several hundred persons to remove from the Queen Anne county jail here, Joshua Tiller, young negro charged with attempted assault upon the four year old daughter of his employer.

Disregarding the assurances of the state's attorney, Marrison Brown, made from the jail steps, that the negro would be given a speedy and fair trial, the crowd brushed by him into the jail residence. They were unable, however, to pass the five steel barred doors which separate the residential section of the prison from the cells themselves.

Baffled here, the mob, lacking organized leadership was in a short while persuaded by Sheriff T. Frank Seward to leave the building.

At a late hour tonight but a few persons were loitering about the jail and no further trouble was expected.

Tiller has denied the charges against him, but was identified by the child.

SEAT OF SENATOR NYE MAY BE CONTESTED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16—The seating of Gerald P. Nye as a senator from North Dakota to succeed the late Edwin F. Ladd probably will revolve around the question whether a United States senator is a state or a federal officer.

Administration leaders in congress said today that the issue would be decided solely on the basis of law and without political influence. Their view is that what the senate must decide is whether Governor Sorlie has the authority under the law of his state to make an appointment.

PARIS, Nov. 16—The attitude of the deputies on Premier Painleve's financial plan is more and more uncertain on the eve of its presentation in the chamber, but it seemed fairly well assured that the socialists, who hold the whip hand, would accept the government proposals, at least as a basis for discussion. Their attitude will be finally determined when the full text of the elaborated plan is made public tomorrow.

In the meantime, at a meeting today, they reached no decision, but indicated that they would join the cartel on the floor.

The bill is certain enough of a stormy time in the chamber, whatever the final result. In fact of the fact that twenty-seven orators have already announced their intention to deliver their opinions.

BATTLE BETWEEN THREE MEN AND POLICEMAN IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Nov. 16—(A. P.)—Dominic Santoro of the Roxsbury district was reported to be dying with five bullets in his body, Patrolman John F. Farrell was in a hospital suffering from two bullet wounds and a third man was under arrest as a result of a gun fight between the officer and three men in the heart of the Italian quarter here tonight.

Farrell was assigned to accompany Raphael Sarno into the district to recover a quantity of provisions which Sarno reported had been stolen from his store and which he had located nearby. They found three men loading the provisions in question on a truck and Farrell placed one of them, Santoro, under arrest.

Sontoro drew a revolver and fired twice at the officer. Although one shot struck him in the chest Farrell drew his own weapon and sent five shots into Santoro, who dropped. The other two men on the truck opened fire from behind, one shot striking Farrell in the back. He wounded one of them with his remaining shot before sagging to the pavement from his wounds. The second wounded man was picked up by his partner and tossed into an automobile which was driven away.

Other policemen attracted by the shots sent Santoro and Farrell to a hospital, where little hope was held for the Italian's recovery. Farrell's wounds, although critical, were not expected to result in death. A man giving the name of Dominic Campone who was seen running away after the shooting was arrested later on suspicion and the police were attempting to trace the car in which the wounded man and his friend escaped.

SEEKING DATA ON METEORS SEEN IN NEW ENGLAND

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 16—In an effort to obtain all possible data on a display of meteors seen in various parts of New England yesterday, and believed by scientists to be a premature recurrence of the 33 year November leonids or "leonid showers", the Harvard observatory today requested amateur observers to send in any information in their possession. Professor Kirtley F. Mather, in charge of the observatory, said today there was no possible connection between yesterday's phenomenon and earth tremors recorded today by seismograph at Harvard and elsewhere.

Belief that the meteor display might be a recurrence of the leonid showers recorded for approximately the same day in the years 1799, 1833, 1866, but missing the year 1898, was expressed by Dr. Willard J. Fisher, who is making a special study of meteors and shooting stars at Harvard observatory under the auspices of the National Academy of Science. The meteors yesterday were observed at South Sudbury, Squantum, Ipswich, Roslindale, Stoneham, Harrison, Maine, Brunswick, Maine and Keene, N. H. They were seen in each case about 10.30 o'clock in the forenoon.

YOUNG NOEL GUILTY OF MURDER IN FIRST DEGREE

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Jersey justice lived up to its reputation for swiftness and severity today when Harrison W. Noel, 20 year old Montclair youth, was convicted of murder in the first degree with no recommendation of mercy after less than two hours' deliberation by a jury.

Under the verdict, there is no sentence possible but death in the electric chair. Noel will be sentenced by Judge Edwin C. Caffrey on Nov. 23.

The case went to the jury at 4:47 o'clock this afternoon. Noel was accused of the murder of Raymond Pierce, negro taxi chauffeur, on September 3, 1925. Noel killed Pierce, concealed his body and used the negro's taxicab to kidnap 6-year-old Mary Daly, of Montclair, from in front of her home. He killed her by shooting her twice in the head and concealed her body in the bushes, in a lonely section of Passaic county.

Noel was arrested three days after the murder of Pierce. He persistently refused to aid police, but after 34 hours' grilling broke down and made a complete confession of both crimes.

Noel had been an inmate of the Essex county hospital for the insane at Overbrook, N. J., for several months prior to the crime.

Noel was also under indictment for the murder of the Daly girl in Passaic county.

The trial lasted five days.

TROUBLE FOLLOWS RECENT ELECTON IN KENTUCKY

FRANKFORT, Ky., Nov. 16—(A. P.)—Adjutant General Rehoe late today ordered out a detachment of Kentucky national guard infantrymen to preserve order at Hyden, county seat of Leslie county, in southeastern Kentucky, following trouble over the recent election, when two votes decided the sheriff's race.

The order followed a telegram from Governor Fields at Hindman, in Knott county, an adjoining mountain county, where the governor had gone on a road inspection, calling out the troops.

Two officers and 20 men armed with four machine guns and rifles will leave Hazard in Perry county, another adjoining county, tomorrow morning for Hyden, 18 miles away.

Troops were called upon receipt of a request of County Judge Leslie Combs of Hyden, who rode all night and forded streams to reach the governor at Hindman 30 miles away.

He declared Leslie county was not in control, that all county officials had left, that state troops were essential, and that "a couple of hundred armed men were on opposing sides," threatening trouble.

Joe Morgan, sheriff of Leslie county, was shot and killed at Hyden Sunday, as an outcome of an election controversy. Morgan had been appointed sheriff eight months ago to succeed J. Maggard who resigned after a band of armed men rode into Hyden and shot up the court house.

Morgan could not succeed himself as sheriff under the Kentucky law, said his wife ran for the office as an independent candidate. She was defeated by the republican candidate George W. Revis, by two votes.

Heated feeling followed the close vote. Sheriff Morgan, just before his death, filed suit contesting election. No further bloodshed had been reported tonight.

JEALOUSY CAUSED MAN TO SLAY HIS SWEETHEART

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Nov. 16—(A. P.)—Police late today said jealousy caused Joseph Palmeri, 23, to shoot and kill his sweetheart, Wilhelmina Schleissler, 21, early this morning in the Union City apartment where she lived with her younger sister and father. Palmeri then killed himself.

On a table in the bedroom where the couple were found was a note which read: "She asked me to kill her. We love each other so forgive us." The signature was a roughly drawn question mark.

The bodies were found by the sister of the dead girl, Margaret Schleissler, who was returning from a motion picture theatre. Finding the front door locked, she climbed the fire escape to the bedroom window. She saw the two lying across the bed but did not know they were dead until she had entered the room by way of the window. She then collapsed and it was several minutes before other tenants in the house were notified.

Police today questioned tenants, but found no one who had heard a shot fired. The girl was shot twice through the head, and the man once. A .32 calibre revolver lay near the dead man.

According to the sister the couple had been "going together" for some time. She said they had never quarrelled to her knowledge. The father was working in Jersey City at the time of the shooting. No explanation could be given for the note left by Palmeri.

LETTERS READ IN THE RHINELANDER CASE

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 16—Leonard Kip Rhinelander today admitted that he had lost control of his annulment suit against Alice Beatrice Jones, his negro wife. That he had objected to the introduction of her fervid love letters and that he had not been convinced she was a negress when he signed the complaint against her.

His admissions came in the course of a vigorous cross-examination at the hands of Lee Parsons Davis, counsel for the defense and at times caused audible comment from the spectators. The cross-examination, which had been awaited eagerly by the courtroom crowd, began this afternoon after Isaac N. Mills, his counsel, had finished reading the last of almost 100 of Alice's love letters.

MILL STOCK DAMAGED WHEN DRAIN PIPE CLOGS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 16—One of the most severe storms of the year was felt here early this morning when a high wind, which raised havoc with loose objects and vibrated houses, was later accompanied by a downpour of rain, akin to the proverbial cloudburst. About 3 o'clock in the morning the wind had reached an alarming velocity. Window-blinds, shed doors limbs and a large variety of other articles were picked up and strewn about yards especially in places of high location. About 3 o'clock the skies burst open and, within a few minutes the gutters and some of the streets were flooded. The ten-inch drain pipe on Bridge street became clogged and the water collected and flooded back into the yard of the east mill of the Quidnick-Windham Manufacturing company. The water flowed into the lower floor and caused damage estimated at $1,000 to warps and cotton in the slasher and warp department. Agent Walter B. Knight notified City Engineer Robert E Mitchell of the damage Monday morning and men were sent to the scene to remodel the drainage system there in order to avoid further trouble of this nature in every section of the city washouts were reported. Several cellars and basement tenements were inundated and the damage is placed at several hundred dollars. Superintendent John S. Sullivan had the full force of the street department on hand early in the morning remedying the trouble. Twenty-five lines representing about two hundred stations of the local branch of the Southern New England Telephone company were placed out of commission, most of them being on the Park street cable line.

The first trolley car, which is due to arrive here from Norwich at 5:45 o'clock, was delayed about one hour and one half when it encountered a series of washouts along the division from Baltic to this city. The last blockade was at the railroad underpass at the foot of Jillson Hill where considerable sand had washed down onto the trolley tracks and shovels had to be put into play before the trolley could pass to reach the Main street terminal.

CATCH YOUTH HIDING IN MAIN STREET STORE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 16.—Raymond L. Brown, 18, giving his address as 511 Main street, this city, was placed under arrest about 8 o'clock tonight when he was found hiding in a rear room of the Atlantic and Pacific store, Alling block, on Main street. Brown was formerly employed as a clerk in the store. For some time he had been working in Hartford. He had been seen in this city of late and his actions had been suspicioned by the police. Monday evening Daniel Wade, manager of the store and Wilbur Cross, is clerk, had gone into the store to work. They heard unusual noises in the rear and investigations disclosed Brown hiding behind a box. The young man had entered the building through a trap door leading into the cellar from an alleyway. He had then forced another trap door and made his way onto the first floor. Brown will be brought before the police court Tuesday morning.

HUSBAND ACCUSED BUT SON STOLE THE MONEY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 16.—Accused by his wife of having stolen $10 from her pocketbook, Vincency Kokaska was placed under arrest about 10 o'clock Monday forenoon to answer to a charge of breach of peace committed while he attempted to clear himself of guilt. Later in the day it was discovered that Kokaska's son, a pupil at the Natchaug Grammar school, was carrying an unusually large amount of money on his person. When questioned the boy confessed that he had stolen $10 from his mother. Kokaska was out under bonds today and is scheduled to appear in police court Tuesday morning.

REPUBLICANS NOMINATE JOHN C. TRACY FOR MAYOR

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 16.—John C. Tracy, retired jeweler, was nominated for mayor at the republican city caucus held in the town building Monday night. Committee Chairman Nelson A. Daniels opened the meeting at 8.15 o'clock and Raymond C. Comins was chosen chairman and John B. Edgarton, clerk. All nominations were made unanimously. The ticket is not, however, fully complet in as much as the third ward failed to select an alderman. This ward, which has always been democratic, has suffered further from the republican standpoint due to the removal of the majority of the handful of republicans who were residents there. When Chairman James M. Smith called the ward's meeting to order only three electives besides himself were present and they could not agree on a candidate. Inducement to have Mr. Mr. Smith accept the nomination failed. The committee will fill the vacancy later by nominating a candidate or endorsing the democratic nominee, Arthur J. Dubreuil. Other nominations in addition to that of Mr. Tracy for the mayoralty were: Aldermen at large, Charles H. Beebe, incumbent, and Wilfred A. Levaude, city clerk and treasurer, John B. Edgarton, former incumbent; city sheriffs, Louis Hodis; auditor, E. F. Whittemore; assessors, Miss Florette Grenier and Charles R. Cone; chairman of the city committee, Nelson A. Daniels; ward alderman, first William E. Jackson, incumbent; second, Robert H. Fenton; third, no nomination; fourth, Walter R. King, former postmaster. First ward caucus was attended by about 35 electives who had anticipated a battle for the nominations. Rumors had it during the day, that George F. Elliott was to enter the race for that position. The impending fight did not materialize however, when Mr. Elliott arose and explained that he had known nothing of his proposed candidacy up to a few minutes previously. He asked that Alderman Jackson be nominated for re-election. Chairman of the ward committee are: First, William E. Jackson; second, Raymond A. Parker; third, James M. Smith; fourth, William Lution.

Democratic ward committees appointed at the ward caucus held Saturday evening in connection with the general caucus to nominate candidates for city offices are: First—David P. Ahern, chairman, Albert J. Piche. Mrs. James Lynch, Mrs. Leondas Demers, Mrs. Mary Hanson and Louis Veziard; second, Arthur P. Bergeron, chairman, Thomas A. Shea, Frank F. Fenton, James J. Lee, M. E Sullivan Mrs. Loretta Costello, Mrs Minnie Flynn, Mrs. Ellen Lynch and Miss Rose Calmse; third, J. B. Davis, chairman, with power to select assistants; fourth, Valentine L. Murphy, chairman. James S. Donahue, Jr., John A. Kelley, Jeremiah Murphy, Edmund R. Portelance, Thomas O'Brien, John T. Meikle, Mrs. James S. Donahue, Jr., Miss Sabra Stoughton, Mrs. Frank Herrick, Mrs. Adelard Lavinge Mrs. A. J. Martineau and Lyman Maine.

Miss Marion Bertrand of this city became the bride of Augustine Ashe, of Holyoke, Mass., at a pretty wedding solemnized at St. Mary's church, at 9 o'clock Monday morning, by Rev. H C Belec, who also celebrated the nuptial mass. The couple were attended by Miss Helene Martin, of this city, and Frank Ashe, of Holyoke, brother of the groom. A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride, 241 Valley street Mr. and Mrs. Ashe are spending their honeymoon in New York city and will later reside in Holyoke where the groom is an assistant overseer of the carding department of the American Thread company.

The pandemic depopulation of over 175 tenements owned by the American Thread company, occasioned by the serving of ejection notices on striking employes of the company, comes into the limelight as a new and somewhat unforseen aftermath. This particular echo of a period of chaos has become a source of much work for the registrars of voters, A. Linn Weatherhead and Thomas A. Shea, who have been kept mighty busy during the past two weeks to get the lists into proper shape. The moderators and election officials of the four wards will have quite a job at the city election in December to properly direct electors and see that they cast their ballots in wards where they reside. In addition to the vacating of company owned tenements there was a general shifting of residence in all wards of the city. All of the company tenements are in the third and fourth wards. None of the new occupants of these have resided here long enough to be entitled to vote at the coming election. This fact has caused a general depletion in the strength of the voting lists. It is estimated that the democrats have lost considerably in strength in the third ward.

Thirty-seven weeks ago a general strike of about 2,500 operatives of the American Thread company local plant was called. Attempts at mediation failed and no settlement has ever been reached 'etween the strikers as a body and the company. Former employes who have failed to find work elsewhere or have not returned to their old jobs are still holding daily mass meetings at the Central Labor Union hall, and, although their numbers have dwindled, they are still carrying the routine business to maintain the strike. The thread mills are being operated, the employes being for the most part workers who came here from other cities. To a casual observer passing the mills on a week-day there is no indication that, some months ago the huge plant was lying idle after a general walk-out. Hundreds of the younger employes were among the first to leave the city and seek work elsewhere. Gradually they were followed by families. Of late raised a fund and purchased the Slovak-Polish and Russian families. Sunday night the heads of eight Polish families boarded the 6:11 o'clock train bound for Hartford and six for New Britain, where they have secured employment.

The bearers were James D. Healy, Jeremiah Donohue, Timothy McCruhan, Patrick Danahey, Jeremiah Haggerty and James Bulger. Rev. Father Quinn read the committal service at the grave in St. Joseph's cemetery.

Funeral services for Mrs. Nettie E. Chapman were held at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, at the late home in Chaplin, with Rev. John H. Knitt officiating. Burial was in New cemetery South Chaplin. The bearers were Robert O. Snow, of this city, and Clifford Burdick, Wilfred Burdick and Floyd Landon, of Chaplin. Avery and Van Zandt had charge of the arrangements.

Charles J. Healy, of 144 Spring street, this city, is among the employes of long service to be granted a pension by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company and the Central New England railway Mr. Healy became employed by the Central New England in 1879 as station helper to John Beckwith, station agent at New Hartford. He served as brakeman on the New Haven road from 1884 to June 30, 1889. On November 20, 1898, he was promoted to a passenger conductor holding that position until his recent retirement after a period of 27 years. Mr. Healy has a record of 46 years of continuous service with the New Haven and Central New England railroads.

Cars owned and driven by Michael E. Sullivan, of Ash avenue, and Max Bratschneider, of 397 Main street, collided at the railroad track crossover at the corner of Jackson and Union streets Sunday evening causing some damage to both machines Officer Lariviere investigated the accident. The face of St. Joseph's church has turned gray within the past few days due to some atmospheric condition which resembles the work of moisture The phenomenon has attracted considerable attention and has caused the comment that the church, which was 50 years old some time ago, is getting old. The church is built of red brick, and with the entire face of it covered with a film of gray the appearance of the edifice is unusual.

Fire supposed to have originated from a defective chimney or sparks alighting on the roof at two o'clock Monday morning destroyed the home of Jan Leofesky at Westchester in the town of Colchester, formerly known as the Erastus Carrier place. A large barn and woodshed were also burned to the ground. Of the household furnishings only a small amount of bedding was saved. All of the live stock in the barn were saved but the contents, consisting of several tons of hay and farm implements, were consumed in the fire. The shed which was attached to the house contained a considerable amount of firewood.

Mr and Mrs. Leofesky and their two minor sons, it is said, had a narrow escape from being burned to death. Mrs. Leofesky was awakened by crackling sounds and arousing her husband, they found the house to be enveloped in flames in the portion where the chimney of a large fireplace was located. They hurriedly left the house with their two children. The high wind that was blowing at the time added to the fury of the blaze and in a few minutes the house was enveloped in flames which caught the shed. Mr. Leofesky entered the house twice and each time brought out some bedding but that was all he could save. In the meantime word was sent to some of the neighbors but they arrived too late to save the house or any of its contents The neighbors assisted in removing the stock from the barn, which soon caught afire from the blazing embers and also burned to the ground. There was nothing in the vicinity of a fire fighting nature so that Leofesky and his neighbors were practically helpless. The blaze was reflected on the sky and could be seen for miles around. The house was of stone construction, two stories high and containing nine large rooms. The loss is esilmated to be about $9,000.

—"many, many dentists today recommend Life Savers"

They're safe for tiny teeth

"This is the only kind of candy I like my own children to have," the dentist told the mother.

"These little Life Saver mints are much better for little folks. Try the new Violet flavor. Children love them."

• • •

Every growing child craves sweets. Active little bodies demand sugar. But children's candy must be pure—and they should not overeat.

Life Savers, the little candy mints with the hole (life saver shape), answer this problem in just the right way. They are china-hard and deliciously flavored.

This means that Life Savers are eaten slowly. Children suck them to make those wonderful flavors last longer. Little tummies are not upset. And Life Savers are kind to tiny teeth.

They're safe and wholesome. You may conscientiously be generous with Life Savers for they are the ideal candy for little folks.

Six flavors are displayed at all good stores so you may help yourself: Pep-o-mint, Wint-o-green, Cinn-o-mon, Lic-o-rice, Ci-o-ve and Vi-o-let. Five cents a package.—Life Savers, Inc., Port Chester, N. Y.

DANIELSON

PLANNING BIG FOX HUNT FOR THANKSGIVING DAY

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 16—A fox hunt such as the country hereabouts has not witnessed in this generation, is being arranged for Thanksgiving morning under the auspices of the Danielson Rod and Gun club.

It is to organize at daybreak at Bradford Ledge on the Lester Williams farm in the town of Brooklyn and may lead to many points or any point in eastern Windham county. The crafty quarry will determine that.

James Moran of Danielson and John Harrington of Brooklyn are working out the details. It is to be a great hunt make no mistake about that. Up to Monday 21 of the finest foxhounds owned in this and adjoining territory had been promised for use in the big drive against reynard. The red and the gray speed boys of the woods are in for a hard time on Thanksgiving day. One can hear them now inquiring "Thanksgiving—what do you mean?" It will be anything but a day of gratitude for these raiders of chicken coops and marauders in general. It is likely they will be inquiring long before noon as to when the armistice is to be signed.

The Rod and Gun club is going to make this a big event. It is not being upstage in its plans either, for any man who likes a fox hunt and has a gun is invited to be on hand and join in.

At the present time the main idea is to get the hunters together at Bradford ledges not later than daybreak. That's the hour for fox hunters to be on the job, old-timers will tell you, and this hunt is to be conducted according to best tradition. Any one interested can find out every detail of the plan by talking the hunt over with Mr. Moran or Mr. Harrington.

Foxes are quite plentiful in and about the territory where it has been elected to start the hunt. It is almost certain that some foxes will be obtained during the day, so the sportsmen who go out will have a good run for their efforts, money counting little in the program of the day.

STATE OFFICER GARDNER RECOVERING AT HOSPITAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 16—Reports on Monday from the Hartford hospital, where he is a patient, indicated that State Officer George L. Gardner, attached to the Danielson barracks and injured when he fell from his motorcycle at East Hartford Saturday night, was "miserable." His condition was so described to indicate that he was badly battered in his fall, but not permanently injured. His complete recovery is regarded as merely a matter of time.

Officer Gardner was one of many officers assigned to keep tabs on traffic entering and leaving New Haven incident to the Yale-Princeton football game at the week end. He was understood to have been en route home, when the motorcycle he was riding skidded on street car tracks and threw him. He struck on his face, knocking out a number of his teeth and nearly severing his tongue.

It is anticipated that Officer Gardner will be a hospital patient for some time. Mrs. Gardner left here Monday to be with him.

The accident to Officer Gardner recalls another that cost the life of Officer Perie Roberts of the Danielson barracks when, like Officer Gardner, he was assigned to traffic duty in New Haven two or three years ago on the occasion of a big football game in the Yale bowl and was killed in a fall from his motorcycle.

State officers fared ill on Saturday. One is dead from injuries received when he was struck by an automobile.

State Officer Gardner formerly lived in Central Village. He is a son of Dr. J. F. Gardner of that place.

One cannot charge every "I don't feel good this morning" up to night before parties. Hundred of utterly fatigued people went to their various occupations Monday morning because a wild southerly storm hit Danielson during Sunday night.

The gale that rocked houses and left restless people tossing about in their beds was of the kind that might have been related in a Joseph Conrad tale. Sheets of rain, riding the wings of the gale, dashed against window panes in manner to threaten their destruction. The storm brought a night of sleeplessness to hundreds of people, leaving them with no great degree of zest for their tasks of Monday.

In outlying sections trees went down before the storm's blast, silos were knocked over and telephone lines put out of commission. In country districts there were washouts to claim the attention of road repairmen following the storm, one of the most vicious of the fall season.

Following a prayer service at his home in Brooklyn Sunday afternoon, a funeral service for Augustus Tawyer was conducted by Rev. John R. Pratt at the Congregational church in that place. Numbers of relatives and friends attended the service. Burial was in the South cemetery. The bearers were Thomas Tawyer, Thomas Tawyer, Jr., Louis Lafleur and Frank Hakek. Martin T. Burns was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Pooling the power interests of New England, as generated from water privileges, is a subject of alluring interest to Killingly. For one thing, Killingly has the Whitestone stream, tumbling down the hillsides of East Killingly, back of which are a number of storage reservoirs. Ownership of the East Killingly water power has not been overlooked. These privileges have been a closely held asset for many years, and as long as a decade ago plans were talked of that involved turning the "white coal" up there into power. One engineer has said that 5,000 horsepower could be developed by damming the Whitestone brook for every ten feet of its fall and installing turbines and electric generators. The idea is to use the water over and over again. Imagine 5,000 additional horsepower developed in the town of Killingly. It would go a long way toward operating all the machinery in town. Of course, such a plan as has been mentioned here would involve increase of the storage reservoir capacity, that there might be ample water for release in dry seasons of the year.

ALL RUN DOWN, NOW HEALTHY

"Honestly, in all my 15 years of experience as a nurse I have never known of a medicine that compares with Tanlac," is the glowing tribute of Nurse M. E. Chappelle.

"Time and again I have recommended Tanlac and always with surprising results. Some time ago my Mother complained of being generally run down and on the verge of a nervous breakdown. She had no appetite, her stomach was disordered, digestion weakened and her bowels were most irregular.

"Tanlac came to her aid at once, brought on a vigorous appetite so that she began to eat with the greatest relish, and made the digestive organs function properly once more. In a short time she was well, happy and strong, and although over 80 years of age she is now vigorous enough to look after her household duties and go out quite a little, too. This is why I praise Tanlac and consider it the best tonic and health builder ever discovered."

What Tanlac has done for others it can also do for you. Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Take Tanlac Vegetable Pills for constipation. Made and recommended by the manufacturers of Tanlac.

OUR MERCHANT MARINE

If there are any changes made in our laws governing the merchant marine they will come through congressional action. That there will be an effort made to effect certain changes at the coming session can be expected. It is not improbable that there will be a movement in behalf of a reduced shipping board, if in fact the board is not abolished and the merchant marine placed under a bureau in the department of commerce. Certainly there have been conditions which warranted such a change.

Congress will hear from many quarters in regard to the merchant marine, the money needed for it and the desirability of cutting down the loss that is sustained from its operations each year. It should of course welcome any facts and opinions that will aid in reaching the most advantageous solution.

What the National Merchant Marine conference will have to offer as the result of its session this week will be awaited with interest. It has been conducting an investigation of our merchant marine and its committee has made a report to the effect that there should be no such discrimination as accepting only those immigrants which come in American ships and there should be no endeavor made to force trade in American bottoms because that simply invited retaliation and when that is resorted to there is no telling where it will stop. It may prove more harmful than it might at first seem to be advantageous. It does not favor a ship subsidy, the financial aid that is furnished being only such as is paid for services rendered such as in the transportation of mail or the maintenance of service to certain regions for the purpose of trade stimulation.

It is not to be supposed that the action of this conference will in anyway bind Congress. There's no certainty that it will have any influence upon action by that body and yet there cannot fail to be food for thought in such decisions as are arrived at following a careful study of the question by those who are guided by other than political motives.

LEAVING COLOGNE

Having reached a decision to evacuate the Cologne bridgehead the first of December, the allies are moving in a way to please Germany. It is the expected reaction to the creation of confidence among the allied nations by Germany. It comes soon after the withdrawal from the Ruhr and means a further departure from the conditions that have existed since the war but it reflects the better relationship of what have been very bitter neighbors and the belief that all nations in Europe are going to abide by the Locarno agreement.

Germany has desired this evacuation for some time and it must be an eye opener now for it to realize that it might have brought this about some time ago had it acted in a different manner than it did relative to the terms of the Versailles treaty. Germany cannot fail to do a bit of reflecting upon this point. It brought upon itself the occupation of the Ruhr and the handicaps and losses which went with that and it by the same policy prolonged the stay of the allies at Cologne.

There are, nevertheless, those in Germany today who still cling to such methods. They would fail to support and break down the Locarno pact, or at least such part of it as imposes responsibility upon Germany. They would oust the existing German government in order to reach such a goal, but their efforts have been effectively punctured by the decision of the allies to withdraw from Cologne. What ever blows the German nationalists hoped to strike at the German republic must fall of their mark now that the much desired withdrawal of allied forces has been decided upon, since such evacuation comes as the result of the very thing that the German government or its representatives have endorsed. It therefore cannot be denied the credit at home for accomplishing what Germany has long desired.

Important and desirable changes have taken place in Europe as the result of the Dawes plan, the withdrawal from the Ruhr and the Locarno conference, and now the situation is to be still further improved by the decision concerning Cologne.

SHOULD WORK TOGETHER

From time to time efforts have been made, for what seems to be political effect, by Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania to direct attention to the lax manner in which prohibition is being enforced in that state and to hold the federal authorities responsible for it. Only recently he has renewed his tactics and this has called forth a reply from Secretary Mellon of the treasury department in which he directs the attention of the governor to the fact that licenses for breweries are not being granted to those which have violated the law, that the present licenses provide for inspection of such plants by state police and prevent wash sales of such property.

Likewise Mr. Mellon tells Governor Pinchot that the federal authorities welcome whatever assistance can be given by the state in regard to the character and records of brewery applicants and asks that if the state has any information concerning violations of that law that it be given to the dry agents in order that they may do their work more efficiently.

If it is going to be the disposition of the governor of Pennsylvania and the authorities of that state to maintain a policy of hands off and to fail to cooperate in the matter of law enforcement, it ill behooves them to cry non-enforcement and to point to things permitted when those very conditions are not stopped by them and their existence is not revealed to those who, the state seems to think, should bear the whole brunt of correction.

The secretary of the treasury has told the governor of the Keystone state where he can help but apparently is not doing so. He has also explicitly said that he would welcome the cooperation that ought to be provided and indirectly told the Pennsylvania authorities that there is some responsibility at least which rests upon their shoulders and it should be exercised. When it is not done such criticisms as are offered by Governor Pinchot fail to get the consideration that they otherwise might.

NORTH DAKOTA SENATOR

What has all the appearance of being an invitation for a political fight and perhaps serving as an issue for the followers of LaFollette to stage a new drive is the appointment by Governor Sorlie of North Dakota of G. F. Nye of that state as the senator from that state to succeed the late Senator Edwin P. Ladd. This appointment comes soon after the announcement by the governor fixing a date in next June for the holding of an election to fill the vacancy.

The chance for a fight comes from the fact that it is held that the governor of North Dakota has not been given the authority by the legislature of that state to make such an appointment, the vacancy calling for an election and inasmuch as it is maintained that the appointment is illegal it can be expected that there will be resistance in the senate when the appointee attempts to take his seat next month. It may be held that the appointment is only till election but it will be set forth that if the governor has no authority to make any such appointment it makes no difference what the period of time for which the appointee is named. If he could be named for a day he could be named until the next election.

Mr. Nye, as might be expected, is a LaFollette follower and a non-partisan leaguer. Possibly North Dakota would have elected him had it been given a chance but even the voters of that state have reason to feel that that chance should have been allowed them. The senate takes a firm stand regarding its members and it is not likely to tolerate those who come to it through questionable methods.

CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE

From such facts as were available at this distance there can be no surprise manifested at the finding of the investigators that the engineer of the express which crashed into the one ahead in New Jersey last week was responsible, or that he is to be prosecuted for criminal negligence.

There was a case where the equipment and signal system were in good condition and the latter working perfectly. The train ahead had responded to the signals set against it and would have been safeguarded by the signals had they been observed. That they were not obeyed is clearly established, and when an attempt was made to stop the train it was too late. The human factor in that engine cab had failed on the important responsibility. Whether it was his practice to do such things is not known. That the fog may have served to dim the signal is possible, but it doesn't appear to have been so dense that the engineer of the train ahead, and which train was late, couldn't see the signal that was set against him.

It was a fortunate thing that the trains were made up of steel cars as a safeguard against fire after the wreck, but it was unfortunate that there was no automatic train stop on that particular stretch of road, that would have served to have checked the speed of the train whether the engineer saw the signal or even disregarded it.

Grave responsibility rests upon the man at the throttle. He has the lives of those in the coaches in his hand. When he fails something serious can be expected to happen, even as it did in New Jersey.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Have you looked ahead and noted that Christmas comes on Friday this year?

The man on the corner says: It is our suspicion that Indian summer has gone.

It is claimed anything can be bought for a price. What are you offering for the state of Florida?

There's a decidedly different effect whether it is a coal mine or a summer resort that is closed for the winter.

"Darrow declares he still drinks despite the dry law." But he mustn't think he is alone in his indulgences.

Just because a girl who was spanked became an opera star will that old fashioned practice now become popular?

Florida may hold all that are going there, but it would be too much of a strain to think of entertaining all who want to go.

Of course we have to be reconciled to cool weather when it is realized that good snappy weather is needed to get the turkeys in prime condition for Thanksgiving.

That southern editor who is giving up the business because he cannot stand the criticism is quite the opposite type from the California editor who is editing his paper in jail.

THE SEWING CIRCLE

"I have a new thought for the optimist," said the fluffy-haired blond, rolling up her sewing and beginning to collect the stray threads from her blue-tailored lap. "The sociable child next door told me this morning that she was going to be an old maid like me. She liked the nice soft-looking dresses I wore, she explained, and her mamma said they were all right for unmarried women, but that the mothers of troublesome little girls had no time for frills."

"Smart child," commented the black-headed member, briefly.

The fluffy-haired blond chuckled, "I told her," she said, "that there were two sides to every question, and had she considered what she would do when she got old if she had no children to take care of her?"

The speaker paused.

"Well?" prompted the young matron.

The fluffy-haired blond chuckled again; "Oh yes, she had thought of that, she said, but she guessed her grandchildren would look out for her."

"You are an awfully funny girl," said the black-headed member reflectively. "So cool and fastidious and so perfectly casual with children, and yet every child in the block loves you with a positive passion. Do you feed 'em cookies on the side or is it witchcraft?"

"Quit your spoofing," said the accused lady, making an effort to subdue the crinkly golden mass of hair she owed to nature and failing utterly. "The trouble with you women who have children of your own is that half the time you don't treat them like human beings.

"I know one small boy who is suffering painfully from what you might call questionitis congestion just because his mother is such a fool. He and his mother and grandfather were down at our fishing camp on the gulf last spring, and the mother went around saying 'E-en-t, be careful,' every time one of us opened his or her mouth in the child's presence. She dressed up her own remarks to him in child psychology language until I should have thought it would make the poor kid sick at his stomach and I fancy it did——"

She paused for breath and a swallow of tea.

"Well?" said the young matron with the auburn wave, like an official prompter.

"Of course his poor little mind was simply seething with the questions he never got honestly answered," grumbled the fluffy-haired blond, "like roots that grow and grow in a flower pot until they burst instead of coming up properly into leaves——"

"Or like bread when you put in too much yeast," murmured the young matron, who was taking a course in cooking and didn't care who knew it.

The fluffy-haired blond ignored her pointedly, with a glance of scorn.

"His grandpa was his only true friend," she continued, "for grandpa had been a drummer in the confederate army, and on the rare occasions when mamma allowed they to go crabbing together they had the time of their young lives. I'll bet that boy could name every villain on the line of Sherman's march to the sea. And every time he went out fishing with me——"

"Where would mamma be then?" inquired the black-headed member.

"Oh, fortunately, she was addicted to the newest novels," said the fluffy-haired blond, "so abduction was easy at times. But I made a bad break one day and the youngster never quite forgave me."

"What happened?" demanded the listeners.

"Oh," said the narrator, "he asked me why I didn't play bridge, like his mother, and I said I didn't have time lately. I used to before the war, I told him, but since then I seemed to be too busy." The fluffy-haired blond passed her cup for more tea and reached for the cake.

"Well?" murmured the others again.

"He asked me if I meant the civil war," said the fluffy-haired blond, and grinned regretfully as the sewing circle shouted with mirth.

"It was too good to keep," she confessed, "but the boy heard some one laughing and gave me the black ball. And I don't blame him in the least, either," she finished frankly. "It was a low-down trick to tell, and I'll never do it again."

"Hm-mm," remarked the black-headed member, "not witchcraft after all. Just a plain square deal, I guess."

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

"Don't worry—work." This is the favorite motto of "Tom" Taggart, Indiana democratic leader and former United States senator, who today enters upon his 70th year. Mr. Taggart has been working, and working hard nearly all of his 70 years. Born in Waterford, Ireland, he came to America with his parents when a small boy and settled in Ohio. Young Thomas had to earn his own living. So at the age of 15 he went to work as a waiter in a railway station lunchroom. Before long he had prospered enough to buy a small hotel in Indianapolis. Today he is owner of the great resort hotels at French Lick Springs, which are among the largest in America. His political career began in 1886 with his election to the office of county auditor. Later he was chosen mayor of Indianapolis and several times re-elected. In 1904 his election as chairman of the Democratic National Committee brought him into national prominence.

From Small Beginnings

Frederick Douglass, the Great Negro Orator

At one time a slave working for a cruel master, at another the chosen representative of the United States in a foreign port—such was the change that Frederick Douglass, by his own effort and determination, made in his career.

Frederick Bailey was born in slavery, and lived in slavery for many years. It was not until he was nearly 25 that he abandoned the name of Bailey and took that of Douglass, a noble character in Sir Walter Scott's The Lady of the Lake. As Frederick Bailey he lived in the worst of all positions, that of a slave who was handed about from one master to another, set at different kinds of manual work, and regarded as a mere laborer. As Frederick Douglass he was noted as a public speaker, was honored as an editor, and given government positions of high responsibility.

Frederick Douglass was the son of a white father. Perhaps from that father he inherited both his determined spirit that resisted slavery, and his intense desire to have learning. Even in the humble life of a slave, when a mere boy, he blacked boots, without permission to carry on extra work, and saved enough money to buy books from which to study. He educated himself, after he had been taught to read by a kindly woman who sympathized with the boy. During his years in slavery and during all his life, until his death at the age of 78, he remained a student, eager to learn.

Such a man cannot be kept down by any kind of slavery, nor by any kind of life. When he was about 19 he resolved to escape from servitude, and at last, after having experienced both kindness and harshness in all kinds of work, he put on sailor's clothes and went to New York and New England, where he supported himself by hard work as a laborer. He took part in an anti-slavery meeting, showed power as an orator, and from then on he was a public figure. He spoke and lectured in the North and in Great Britain; he wrote the story of his life; he strongly influenced public opinion, became an editor, and after having held various government offices became at the age of 72, United States Consul to Haiti.

CHILD TRAINING

"OBEDIENT MOTHERS"

Mrs. W. B. Bailey

"Oh, Dr. Parks, how glad I am to see you!" exclaimed Mrs. Barker, welcoming a former college teacher who had been an inspiration to her in her work. "I've been so anxious for you to see my home and children ever since I learned you were in town."

The home was indeed cosy with all of the touches which indicate a real home in which children may live a happy life. The children, LeRoy and Elnora, both splendid looking little tots, were shown and complimented. Then the mother and the teacher began a conversation on topics of common interest.

"Mother, come an' get me something to eat!" interrupted Elnora.

"Not now, please. I don't want you to eat yet."

"Mother, I'm hungry," whined the little girl.

"That's all right, won't you please run and play?"

"No. I won't. I'm hungry and I want something to eat."

"Dear me!" And the exasperated mother went to get the child what she wanted.

Soon she returned and the conversation was resumed only to be broken in a few seconds.

"Mother, come here," demanded Le Roy from without.

"Mother is busy, dear—what do you want?"

"Mother-r-r, come here!" a more urgent command.

Mother went. She had scarcely resumed the talk when both children rushed wildly into the room.

"Oh, Mother give me a nickel," they demanded in concert.

"What for?"

"We want something."

"You don't need a thing, and I've no nickel for you."

"Yes, we do; we want an ice cream cone. Hurry, Mother! The ice cream man is coming now."

"You are not hungry. You have just finished eating."

"We are hungry. We want ice cream!" The whines were becoming roars.

"Please go play with your toys, children. Mother wants to talk to Professor Parks."

"Give us a nickel!" Both yelled louder and louder as they stamped and kicked.

"Dear, dear! Do for goodness sake, stop that noise! Any one would think you were being killed. Here, take this nickel and do not ask for another for a week."

The howls ceased at once, and the children scampered away.

The professor however was discouraged, and making his excuses he left, wondering how one of his most brilliant pupils, one who had always seemed so independent, could allow children to order her about in such a manner. Then he felt pity for the children. Finally he shrugged his shoulders and with a whimsical smile said to himself, "So often in public addresses I have bemoaned the fact that we are a nation lacking discipline, a land of disobedience. Perhaps I had better recast and say we are a nation of strict discipline, a land noted for obedience—on the part of the mothers, who go promptly at the call of children whom they permit to order them about day after day—a land of obedient mothers, a land where mothers make the requests and children command."

And what of the children so reared? How can mothers expect teachers to deal successfully with them in the schoolroom after such utter lack of discipline in the home?

Stories That Recall Others

Tribute to Teacher.

Frank, age six, was a mischievous chap in school and along with several others, just as bad, managed to give the teacher no little trouble.

His schoolhouse is situated in a busy street so that the teacher always went with the children to the street. Frank was telling his father about some of the pranks they played and then began to explain how the teacher coached them never to cross the street without looking for machines, for they might be killed.

"Yes, sir, dad," exclaimed Frank in surprise, "as mean as some of those kids are she doesn't want them to be killed. What do you think of that?"

Unclaimed Property.

Whiff! and a woman's hat caught up in the gale went whirling into the middle of the street, rolled over several times and finally came to a stop under the front end of a car. The considerate motorman backed his car, a small boy deep in sheepskin darted out and rescued the hat.

Returning to the sidewalk he looked about for the owner, who, evidently to cover up her confusion, had disappeared. The boy paced about on the corner, hoping that someone would come up and offer to take the wayward headcovering off his hands, but only smiles from the passing men and giggles from the girls rewarded his efforts.

In desperation he finally jammed the hat down on the post at the curb and scuttled down the street. It remained there for a long time undisturbed and no one seems to know just when or where it eventually went.

The boy is certain that he has lost interest in rescuing stray hats.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Frightful Toll From Tuberculosis.

Mr. Editor: I believe congress should make an award to anyone who can show the public health service and the agricultural departments how to abolish tuberculosis in the United States.

The importance of my proposition can be seen by the frightful loss of human lives and money to this nation in the following statistics:

Deaths from tuberculosis (1922) 90,463 people; animals slaughtered per order of the examiners for tuberculosis in the last fiscal year (up to August 1) 210,782. New York state's loss $1,465. Just think of it, one state's loss for one single year. Connecticut lost 2,977 cattle (1925).

Now for the dollars and cents! Sickness and final costs for a human, $500, total $45,016,000; 210,782 cattle cost the nation $4,423,284; farmers' loss, according to the appraisal, $39.49 per head $8,337,015, or a total of $57,836,299. Cost of medical attention, etc., millions more, of course. But this is not all! Consider the millions of babies living entirely on milk with no attention! None of us can do quite as well without milk, hence the great danger to us all if we all use it! My proposition was not one of billions for bunkum. Those who had bunkum for billions got the billions for bunkum from our great American statesmen!

LEMPEREUR REACHES TOP OF HER ART BUT STILL OBSCURE

PARIS, Nov. 16. (AP)—After 35 years in theatrical obscurity, Madame Lempereur has reached the top of her profession, but the public still will see nothing of her.

Madame Lempereur is a theater prompter. She has been appointed to officiate at the Comedie Francaise, France's leading state theater, otherwise known as the House of Moliere.

"A good prompter is as rare as an actor with talent," said Andre Antoine, manager of the Odeon, second state theater, where Madame Lempereur previously served. "Many's the time my old comrade has pulled me out of a hole. I was only free from anxiety when she was in the prompter's box."

Every mother thinks there is no baby like her own, and every other mother is glad of it.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and seals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

INGROWN NAIL

Turns Right Out Itself

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

Sleep Adds Years to Your Life

New Preparation Gives It to You

The most wearing-out process which could afflict a person is that which is caused by lack of sleep. Fitful, insufficient slumber tears the nervous system to pieces and causes much of the weakness, irritability and susceptibility to disease which is often blamed on other causes.

Lack of sleep ages one, destroys beauty and certainly shortens your life. And yet it is so easy to have the deep refreshing slumber of childhood.

A sleep that will make you feel like a new person and add five years to your life—a slumber that will banish the "blues" and give you the strong, healthy nerves which mean a sunshiny, cheerful outlook on life. And you can get all these benefits from a new, harmless, easy-to-take preparation called Neura.

Neura contains no opiates or habit-forming drugs. The results from the use of Neura have been so remarkable however, that it is now dispensed by Lee & Osgood Co. and druggists everywhere with a guarantee to return the small cost if you are not amazed and delighted with the results from the use of the very first package. Get a good night's sleep tonight by taking Neura today.

BEAUTIFY IT WITH

Just Dip to Tint or Boil to Dye

Each 15-cent package contains directions so simple any woman can tint soft, delicate shades or dye rich, permanent colors in lingerie, silks, ribbons, skirts, waists, dresses, coats, stockings, sweaters, draperies, coverings, hangings—everything!

Buy Diamond Dyes—no other kind—and tell your druggist whether the material you wish to color is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton, or mixed goods.

The altar was banked with palms.

Her princess veil of tulle was caught up and held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley. The wedding march was played by Howard T. Pierce. Immediately after the ceremony, the naval escort ranged themselves in the vestry of the church in two lines of four, facing each other, and with raised swords made an arch under which the bride and bridegroom left the church. About 500 guests witnessed the ceremony.

After the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents for approximately 100 guests. The house was decorated with palms and chrysanthemums. Music was furnished by a stringed orchestra. In the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. Cooper and Ensign and Mrs. Richards.

Following the reception the couple left immediately for a wedding trip. The bride's traveling gown was a Russian model of black chiffon velvet with gold brocade inserts. She wore a close fitting hat in harmony with the costume.

On their return Ensign and Mrs. Richards will make their home in New London. Ensign Richards is stationed at present on the destroyer Downes.

Guests were present from Boston, Springfield, New York, Hartford and New Haven. Many naval people attended.

TWO HEAVY RAINS BRING NEEDED REINFORCEMENTS FOR RESERVOIRS

One year ago today, Nov. 17, Stony Brook reservoir was empty and was shut off and for the rest of the year the city and town was dependent upon Fairview reservoir until the Trading Cove brook pumping station was put into operation. This year the conditions are appreciably better as there is still some water to be drawn from Stony Brook and the two heavy rains within the last three days have added a substantial reinforcement to both reservoirs.

Late Thursday night the rainfall was 1.20 inches and Sunday night's rain was almost equal to it, producing 1.15 inches, according to the measurements at the water office. Monday afternoon Fairview reservoir was seven feet down from full pond and there was a full head of water pouring in through the pipe from the Bog Meadow auxiliary pond. This will doubtless serve to raise the level of Fairview reservoir during the next few days and there will also be a flow into Stony Brook from the watersheds of that reservoir which responds very quickly to a heavy fall of rain.

Sunday night's rain came near to filling the trench through the meadow along Town street at Norwich Town where excavation has been done in preparation for laying the pipe for the new Deep River Brook reservoir. Monday the water department had a gasoline pump at work to empty the ditch of water and the prospects were that it would be some time before the ditch is clear as the meadow land through which the ditch runs is saturated from the rain and the water will continue to seep through for some time.

The most serious difficulty which the Sunday night storm made about the city was in washouts on the streets where there are slopes which the water ran in a flood. About the only hilly streets that escaped were those where there are macadam surfaces.

Street commissioner John C. Donovan had his men at work on Cliff street, Boswell avenue, Oakridge street, Crescent street, Pratt street and a number of others where washouts were called to his attention. The surface dirt that came down from the hills was deposited in heaps on the level surfaces and it was necessary to shovel these out of the way as well as to fill up the holes that had been scooped out on hillsides.

Although the wind Sunday night and early Monday morning was terrific so that many people declared their houses shook till they were afraid the buildings would be blown over, no trees were blown down and there was nothing for the street department to do in clearing up wreckage of this kind.

DRY AGENTS IN STATE ARE ALL REAPPOINTED

Connecticut's 17 prohibition enforcement agents, whose resignations became effective on Saturday, went back to their jobs Monday morning under an order re-appointing them issued by Frank T. Putney, state prohibition director.

Putney stated Sunday night that Connecticut will not see any change. In some states, it was believed that changes would be made. When the new prohibition program was put into operation all unclassified agents throughout the entire country were called upon to resign. This was done for the purpose of accepting the resignations of the undesirables and re-appointing the desirables. The resignations became effective on Saturday. Putney explained that there were no changes made in Connecticut, in that he re-appointed or rather recommended for re-appointment every one of the present 17 enforcement agents in the state. The national directors sanctioned and the agents were notified Sunday that they are re-appointed and ordered to report for duty Monday morning. Mr. Putney pointed out that the clerical help in the offices, which is under civil service, was not involved in the re-appointment.

Among the number reappointed are Prohibition Agents Harry Avery of Windham and Joseph Fitzpatrick of New London.

PUTNAM NATIVE DIES SUDDENLY IN WOONSOCKET

Henry Augustus Barsalou, of Woonsocket, one of the best known men in northern Rhode Island, died suddenly Sunday morning. He was sitting in an armchair at his home, 66 Hamlet avenue, reading a Sunday paper, after returning from an early service at the Precious Blood church. The paper fell from his grasp as Mr. Barsalou slipped to the floor. He was dead when the family reached him. The cause of death was heart failure.

Although Mr. Barsalou had been in failing health for several years, he had been about his business, that of furniture salesman, as usual Saturday. Even after returning from church, only a short time before his death, he was apparently in his usual health, doing some minor duties about the house before he sat down to read the paper. Had he lived until Thanksgiving day, he would have been 50 years old.

Mr. Barsalou was born Nov. 26, 1875, at Putnam, Conn., a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Barsalou. His parents came to Woonsocket while he was but a child, making their home on Hamlet avenue where they both died years ago.

After completing his education in the public schools, Mr. Barsalou entered the employ of the late E. L. Simmons, clothier. After being employed there for about 16 years, he entered the furniture business as a salesman for the Austin S. Cook company and was with that concern and its successor, the E. Scattergood company, for considerably more than a quarter of a century.

He was identified with republican politics in Woonsocket for nearly 40 years and served on the republican city committee, and also on the first ward republican committee, of which he was chairman for many years. Mr. Barsalou was for nearly a quarter of a century connected with Woonsocket's health department.

Mr. Barsalou was a past dictator of Woonsocket Lodge of Moose. He was also a member of various other fraternal organizations including Woonsocket Council, Knights of Columbus, and the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Corinne (Smith) Barsalou, whom he married in 1898, two daughters, Mrs. Harold G. Voelker and Mrs. William Plasse, both of Woonsocket, and a son, Clarence Barsalou of Worcester, Mass.

He also leaves three brothers, Eugene and Joseph of Providence and William A., of Woonsocket, four sisters, Mrs. Amelia, wife of Feliz Charbonneau; Telleries, widow of Treffie Belrose; Emma, widow of Charles N. Gobeille of Woonsocket, and Amanda, widow of Samuel McKay of Providence; and two grandchildren, Faith Hambly Barsalou of Worcester and William B. Plasse of Woonsocket.

FORMER PASTOR PREACHED AT TRINITY M. E. CHURCH

Rev. Frederick C. Coleman of North Cohasset, Mass., a former pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church from 1911 to 1917, was welcomed by a good sized congregation at the church on Sunday evening when he was here upon invitation of the pastor, Rev. J. Harlow Graham, and preached the sermon for the evening.

In opening his sermon Rev. Mr. Coleman referred to the pleasure with which he received the invitation to visit his former pastoral charge and the eagerness with which he accepted it. He expressed his great pleasure at being here and referred feelingly to the many in the church membership who had passed away in the period since he had been filling other pastorates.

Rev. Mr. Coleman spoke from the text, "The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God and the communion of the Holy Spirit," which he called the trinity benediction, a text at once simple but profound, and like many other texts in the Bible that lead us out into infinity. The preacher discussed the significance of each phrase in the text. What do we mean by grace? It is used in the New Testament to express the beauty, the truth and power that came into the world through Christ, adding something entirely new to the spiritual forces of the world. There was nobility of character among men before Christ, such men as are described in Plutarch's Lives, but there was something lacking when you compare it with the high development of Christian character that came through contact with Christ. That contact made the weak Peter a prince in Israel and raised Paul to an eminence he never would have reached without it. We now think of the love of God as ever with us, surrounding us and holding us. To these early Christians this was a new idea which did not come till Christ came and founded the Christian church. Before Christ came, men believed in God but he was a transcendant God. He was almighty in power and wisdom and he liked to hear men talk to him, but he was a long way off. He wasn't near, there was no communion. Christ brought the new truth that God is love and we could commune with him. Three Christian benedictions were new to the world.

SHORT CIRCUIT STARTS FIRE IN AUTOMOBILE

A short circuit in an automobile in a garage in the Ailing Block on Franklin street was instrumental in calling out the fire department at 11:20 o'clock Monday evening. FOOTBALL HONORS FOR 1925 HAVE BEEN PRACTICALLY DECIDED UPON

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Football's spring for the finish post this season looms as an anti-climax. Two weeks of gridiron campaigning remain but for the most part, particularly in the east and far west, the main battles have been won and the laurels distributed.

Dartmouth, for instance, not only has clinched a clear claim to the mythical eastern team crown, where the Green a year ago was forced to share the top with Yale and Pennsylvania, but also has put forward a potent claim for national championship recognition on the strength of a clean-cut intersectional triumph over Chicago.

Princeton, by astonishing victories over Harvard and Yale on successive Saturdays, has clinched the "Big Three" title; Amherst has wrenched the "Little Three" championship from Williams; while in the far west, the University of Washington has at last broken the magic spell of California's supremacy in the Pacific coast conference. The south and middle west alone have major title claims still in dispute.

Seldom, if ever, in the history of eastern football has so little importance, so far as titular aspirations are concerned, been attached to the closing three classics along the Atlantic seaboard, those between Yale and Harvard at Cambridge next Saturday, Cornell and Pennsylvania at Franklin field Thanksgiving day and the Army and Navy at the Polo grounds November 28. Tradition is the long factor that makes these annual struggles stand out now.

Yale has tasted defeat at the hands of Penn and Princeton, while Harvard rallied to beat Brown only after losing to Holy Cross. Dartmouth and the Tigers, Cornell felt the full fury of the Dartmouth avalanche, while Penn, after a fine start, slipped back against Illinois and Pitt. The Army and Navy have trod rough paths and are out of the main title hunt but there will be no lack of glory on that account for the winner of their annual battle.

At least four other eastern teams can claim rankings superior to these six outfits, whose ranks usually are in the vanguard. Besides Dartmouth's great eleven, Colgate, Pitt and Princeton, on their finishing form, now seem well as runnersup.

West Virginia's powerful eleven, which has come fast since losing to Pitt early in the season, and Fordham's unbeaten array also aspire to the select circle of top-notchers. Fordham shares with Dartmouth the distinction of being the only eastern outfit neither tied nor beaten but the failure of the Maroon to play a "Major League" schedule keeps it from the topmost flight.

Colgate, Pitt, Fordham and West Virginia all have further tests to meet before their final ranking is made. Eddie Tryon and his mates tackle Brown Thanksgiving day at Providence; the Panthers meet their old rivals, Penn State, on the same day; Fordham meets Georgetown this Saturday in a game which may determine the Catholic College championship, while West Virginia's Mountaineers clash with Washington and Jefferson in another holiday battle.

Such fixtures as those between Lehigh and Lafayette, Syracuse and Columbia, Holy Cross and Boston College also remain on the schedule but none of them figure to have conspicuous effect on the ultimate rating of eastern elevens.

The statistics of the eastern football group follow:

Team	W	T	P	Pts	OP

HARVARD PERFECTING ITS DEFENSE AGAINST YALE

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 16—(A. P.)—Harvard's varsity football team began today its last week of preparation for the Yale game here next Saturday, with a long signal drill and dummy scrimmage against Yale formations that lasted until well after dark. Jake Stafford, who took over the quarterback position when Captain Cheek was shifted to halfback, was still in the infirmary with a leg injury received in the Brown game, but the coaches said he would be able to practice by Wednesday or Thursday and was expected to start the Yale game.

George Hoague, varsity guard and the only other Brown game casualty, appeared at practice leaning on a cane and doubt was expressed as to when he will be able to resume practice. The varsity lined up with Carl Lindner and Clem Coady, who started the Yale game last year, in the tackle positions back in their old berths. Captain Cheek was at quarterback in place of Stafford. Crosby and Zarakov were at left and right halfback and Miller was at fullback. Chauncey, whose drop kick defeated Brown alternated with Zarakov. Miller and Crosby.

Captain Cheek, in his capacity as president of the college student council announced that he had forwarded an apology to Brown for the Harvard students' action in ripping up the goal posts, which precipitated a riot after last Saturday's game. The Harvard Crimson, student daily, apologized editorially to the Brown authorities and undergraduate body.

AMHERST WILL PLAY DUPLICATE SCHEDULE

AMHERST, Mass., Nov. 16—Amherst college, "little three" gridiron champion, will play a football schedule in 1926 that is almost a duplicate of this year's schedule. The only change is the substitution of Union for Springfield. Princeton is included for the third successive year. The following games have been announced:

September 25, Rochester; October 2, Princeton at Princeton; 9, Bowdoin; 16, Hamilton; 23, Wesleyan at Middletown; 30, Massachusetts Aggies at M. A. C.; November 6, Union; 13, Williams.

BULKELEY PREPARING FOR GAME WITH FORDHAM FROSH

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 16—Bulkeley high schools football team unnerved by its game with the LaSalle Academy of Providence last Saturday started its preliminary preparations for the all important game of the season to be played with the Fordham Freshmen here next Saturday afternoon.

Coach Canty held a light practice today to give the men practice in their formations and drill them in their signals.

Bulkeley although it has not won the larger percentage of its games this year on the gridiron yet they have played some of the strongest teams in the state and have not been beaten as throughly as they might have been with a team that is of the Bulkeley calibre this year.

With the Fordham game in mind, Coach Canty did not intend to give his boys the customary Monday afternoon rest but he put them through long signal drill and did a little work on punting. The effects revealed in the LaSalle game called for more black board instruction pointing out the errors in the orange and black play. The remedies were explained by Coach Canty and the formations were given and the boys started on their way towards the maroon freshmen.

The aerial attack did not work as well last week with the Bulkeley boys as Coach Canty wanted it to and it is thought that the Bulkeley motor is preparing for an extensive aerial attack against the maroon freshmen. This means that Bulkeley will treat Fordham with their own medicine since they seem to be anxious to use the aerial attack in all their encounters.

Fordham frosh will present a strong line against the orange and black boys this Saturday and the perfection of the aerial attack will be of great advantage to the New London team. It is expected that the entire Bulkeley eleven as it faced Norwich a couple weeks ago will be put against the boys from the Bronx.

The game is expected to be the best that has ever played this year by the local boys and every method of football known to Bulkeleys football mentor is being used that the boys might come throught in first class shape.

Everything that has ever characterised a football team will be there to make up the Bulkeley eleven Saturday afternoon.

Barring injuries that might develop during the week, Bulkeley's football team ought to be able to give the Empire state boys a good run for their game any way.

POSTAL PUGS TO SHOW WARES IN COMING BOUTS

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(AP)—The first public exhibition by the pupils of Jimmy DeForest's "correspondence school of applied fistic science" will occur at the Pioneer A. C., November 24, when ten of the veteran trainer's "students" will attempt to uphold the honor of the mail course against a similar number of undergraduates of the school of practical experience.

DeForest has been conducting a correspondence course with prospective pugilists throughout the country. He selected ten of his best, assembled them together in his New Jersey camp and proceeded to add the practical to the theoretical with the hope of uncovering some potential champion.

The results of this unique pugilistic experiment will be watched with interest by those who doubt the power of the "postal" punch of the ability of the amateur inside the professional arena. DeForest claims the results already are beyond his fondest expectations but promoters are withholding judgment until the scheme is tried out.

BASEBALL WRITERS FAVOR ARTICLES BY PLAYERS

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(AP)—Members of the New York Chapter of the baseball writers' association of America went on record today as opposed to any move designed to curb the writing of special articles by players.

Copies of a resolution denying the chapter's right to attempt or urge regulation of the player-writer issue were forwarded to baseball Commissioner Landis and to James M. Gould, of St. Louis, national president of the baseball writers' association.

Commissioner Landis took cognizance of the player-writer question in Pittsburgh during the world's series when he called Roger Peckinpaugh before him after the publication of an article under the Washington shortstop's signature criticising an umpire's decision.

No definite lineup has been decided upon but the team will probably be chosen from the following players: Aldrich, Brewer, Brock, Beeghinso, Perkins, Robertson, Janloski, Navick, J. Fox, McCarthy, F. Fox, Hasam, Sechter, Johnson, Smith, Tombari, and Koptaine.

The game is scheduled to start at 3:30 p. m. and the officials will be made up of ex-Academy grid stars.

Old Pipe, we're pals for keeps

SIX months ago, Old Pipe, we were headed for absolute divorce. We were wrecked on the twin rocks of Tongue Bite and Throat Parch. I tried tobacco after tobacco. Then . . . I found Prince Albert!

Today, Old Pipe, you're closer to me than a tattooed anchor. P. A. made you sweet and cool as the wind from a laden orchard. P. A. led me out of the hot-pipe desert into the pleasant valley of contented smokers. Comfort fell upon me . . . and it was welcome as rain to a dusty frog.

Say good-bye to worry, you fellows who don't yet know the joys of a jimmy-pipe and P. A. Tell gloom to be on its way. Your first fragrant pipeful will give you a 99-year lease on happiness. Prince Albert is the mildest, sweetest, kindest smoke mortal man ever knew.

Prince Albert gives you a lot more for your money in quantity as well as quality. There are TWO full ounces in every tin of P. A. The U. S. revenue stamp shows you that. Make a break now for the nearest shop where they hand out pipe-peace in tidy red tins.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bite of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

Look at the U. S. revenue stamp—there are TWO full ounces in every tin.

A. A. U. RECORDS COMMITTEE APPROVES 200 MARKS AND REJECTS TOTAL OF 66

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 16—(A. P.)—The American Amateur Athletic union, in annual session here, late today approved 200 records and turned down 66. Some of those rejected were because of the presence of better performances in the event in which they were recorded. Others were for lack of sufficient proof. The great Paavo Nurmi and Willie Ritola were denied certain honors because the distances involved were not recognized by the A. A. U.

Nurmi's mark of 10 minutes and 31 seconds for 4,000 yards was thrown out because of the "trick" distance. Ritola's mark of 15 minutes, 31 seconds for three and one quarter miles went into the discard for the same reason.

During the session Gustavus T. Kirby, president of the I. C. A. A. A. and L. N. Goldsmith, chairman of the records committee, engaged in a heated battle of words over the refusal of the committee to ratify the indoor broad jump record of William A. Dowling of Georgetown university, made at New York, February 17.

That the veracity of the mark of 22 feet 1 1-8 inches made at a meet in which Kirby was the referee should be questioned aroused the ire of the latter. He insisted that everything was correct. The committee head said that a member of the board was present and reported that the pit was three inches lower than the take-off.

When informed that the committeeman in question was Lawson Robertson, Kirby asked the committee to reconsider its decision.

Robertson reported that he informed the officials on the night of the meet that the equipment was improper. President Murray Hulbert, of the A. A. U., intervened and had the previous vote of the convention not to accept the record withdrawn and then requested that the committee investigate further. The matter was referred back to the committee.

The 220 yard hurdle record of Charles R. Brookins of the University of Iowa made in May 1924 and which was referred to the committee for further investigation last year was today approved. Brookins' time was 23 seconds.

Jackson V. Scholz of the New York A. C., is the holder of the 100 yard dash record with a mark of 9 3-10 seconds, made at Greensboro, N. C., last May.

Jonni Myria, of the Olympic club, Los Angeles, had one javeline record of 224 feet, 11 inches rejected because A. A. U. officials were not present at the time it was made. His mark of 212 feet, 11 inches was accepted.

Joie Ray remains in the record books, being linked with Nurmi in possession of the mark of 4:12 for one mile.

Swimming records for both men and women drew little protest. Agnes Geraghty is the possessor of all but four of the breast stroke marks, John Weismuller, Arne Borge and Walter Speece divided honors among the men natators.

SHIFT MADE IN RIGHT SIDE OF YALE LINE

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 16—(A. P.)—The right side of the Yale line which was characterized by the coaches as the most glaring center of weakness in the Blue forward wall which collapsed before the Princeton assault Saturday was given a shakeup this afternoon as the coaches started preparation for the Harvard game Saturday.

Duke Richards, regular right guard, bruised his shoulder in Saturday's game and will be out for the season. Bill Webster, captain of the freshman team last year, was shifted to fill that position. Burt Benton, right tackle, was replaced by the veteran Ben Butterworth who has been on the bench since the Pennsylvania game. Fred Potts, right end, was left in the varsity line. The coaches devoted a part of the afternoon to a lecture.

INDOOR BASEBALL MEETING POSTPONED TO THURSDAY

The meeting scheduled to be held Monday evening at the Armory for the purpose of forming an indoor baseball was postponed to Thursday night at 8:00 P. M. It was at first thought that six teams could be secured to enter but it is now definitely settled that the following four teams will comprise the league: Tigers, Faber's All Stars, Nutmegs and Battery B. The league is expected to open immediately after Thanksgiving so that a full schedule of games can be played before the closing of the indoor season. All managers and captains are requested to report promptly at Thursday night's meeting.

NUTMEGS HOLD SHORT SIGNAL DRILL AT PARADE

Monday evening at Chelsea Parade the Nutmegs held a short signal drill in preparation for Sunday's game with the Greeneville Tigers. Another drill will be held Thursday evening which all members are requested to attend.

NEW PLAN FOR WORLD'S SERIES GAMES SUGGESTED

CHICAGO, Nov. 16—(AP)—A suggestion to play the world series games in the different cities of the major leagues was submitted to President Johnson of the American league today. Mr. Johnson said he had not come to a decision but probably would discuss it with his club owners at their annual meeting.

Adoption of the suggestion would give "fans" who cannot make the trip to the cities represented by the contestants an opportunity of seeing the games.

ACADEMY TO PLAY STONINGTON ON SATURDAY

The entire Academy football squad was given a rest Monday afternoon and will not begin their preparations for the final league game of the season with Stonington High School Saturday afternoon until this afternoon. In their last game the Academy and Stonington battled through four, hard, fast quarters to a scoreless tie. Since that time however the local team has improved a hundred per cent and should have little difficulty in drowning the eleven from Stonington.

VALUABLE PLAYER SELECTION TO BE MADE AFTER SERIES

CHICAGO, Nov. 16—(A. P.)—Announcement of the most valuable player to his team in the American league probably will be withheld hereafter until after the World's series, President Ban Johnson of the American league said tonight. Rogers Peckinpaugh of the Washington club was awarded the prize for 1925, and it was pointed out that this may have weighed on the player's mind in the last World's series when his errors proved so costly to the Senators.

TRYON OUT OF GAME BECAUSE OF ILLNESS

HAMILTON, N. Y., Nov. 16—(AP)—Eddie Tryon, star backfield ace of Colgate University's undefeated football team, is ill in the infirmary and will be out of the game for several days. Tryon contracted a slight cold on the muddy Archbold stadium gridiron in Saturday's game with Syracuse.

It is expected that Tryon will be back in the lineup against Brown on Thanksgiving.

GRANGE'S DAD OPPOSES SON IN PROFESSIONAL FOOTBALL

CHICAGO, Nov. 16—(AP)—Red Grange's greatest admirer, his father, is opposed to the illustrations young Illinois gridiron star playing professional football when the curtain rings down on his intercollegiate career in the Ohio-Illinois game next Saturday.

Grange's father, a deputy sheriff at Wheaton, Chicago suburb, said tonight he would not object to Grange accepting any of the other numerous offers made him, whether it was the movies, writing for a newspaper syndicate, or any form of public appearance, but that he did not approve of commercialised football.

"Every time I read in the paper that Harold has accepted a contract from this or that team, it gives me a shock," the older Grange said. "I sincerely hope that he does not do this, although he has not confided in me what his plans are. I have a notion, however, that he will drop out of school for a while after the football season and accept one of the offers made him.

"I think he's entitled to 'coin in' on the long runs, his gridiron fame has brought him. It has been expensive for me to send Harold and his brother Garland through the university. We are not rolling in wealth and I think the public would approve of anything Harold does."

When Grange bids his adieu to the intercollegiate gridiron, there probably will break out the most intense argument that sports has ever listened to an amateurism and professionalism. A fortune awaits the famous Wheaton iceman, no matter what offer he accepts. His decision as regards a career is awaited with almost as much suspense as his exploits on the field.

Whether Grange has signed a contract to appear in Miami in a football game on Christmas, and elsewhere this fall, can not be verified, although Grange has persistently denied these reports. A close friend and adviser of Grange declares that he is positive Grange has signed no contracts and that Grange has turned down offers with the explanation that he wishes to maintain his amateur standing until he finishes playing with Illinois. The belief persists in Champaign that if C. A. Pyle, owner of a motion picture theater there, has signed a contract for Grange's appearance at Miami, he had done so of his own accord and with the belief that when Grange leaves school he will be able to influence him to play.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

Southern California, although eliminated from the national title race by reason of a defeat at the hands of Stanford, appears to have clinched high scoring honors of the football season with 386 points in nine games. Dartmouth, east's entry for the major honors, ranks second, 46 points in the rear.

Four members of the Princeton "miracle team" which upset football dope by defeating Yale and annexing the "big three" championship, are honor men academically in Jungletown. They are Crago, Hobson, Bartell and Weekes.

Organization of an eastern professional football circuit was under discussion in New York Monday as the result of a visit to the metropolis of Joseph Carr, president of the National Football league. Teams in New York, Washington, Newark, Atlantic City, Boston, Hartford, Buffalo and Rochester were suggested.

The triumph of Frank Carney of Philadelphia for individual honors and the victory of the New York A. C. in the team race of the junior national cross-country race was a blow at the supremacy of the Finns in long distance running. Karl Koell, picked as a likely winner, was compelled to quit over covering only a third of the six-mile route.

Another French boxing champion swings into action in a New York ring Monday when Edouard Mascart tackles the Wyoming featherweight, Eddie Anderson. They are scheduled for twelve rounds to a decision.

The United States Lawn Tennis association has joined the Amateur Athletic Union in protesting against the federal tax on club initiation fees and membership dues. A total of 650 tennis clubs are interested, President J. W. Mesereau points out.

At Victoria the tracks cross each other and one train went through the other, hitting the middle car throwing it many feet in the air, tearing the track up on both railroads and wrecking 11 cars on the trains beside damaging the other cars. Deacon Fraser is well known here and in Noank and had charge of the Pendleton ship yard here until it was disposed of a few months ago. He is now engaged in evangelistic work in the south with Rev. Albany Smith.

RECEIVED 4,400 VOLTS WHILE PICKING APPLES

Joseph Flaherty and George Calnan, two youths from South Boston, bumming their way home from Philadelphia, were walking along the state road near the town farm Friday morning. Being hungry they spied some apples on a tree and Flaherty climbed the tree to procure some for breakfast. Losing his balance, he seized an electric wire carrying 4,400 volts. His hand and one leg were badly burned, but somehow he broke contract and fell to the ground. As soon as posible he was taken to Westerly, and then to the hospital.

Look Out!

Look for the picture of the Quaker on every package of oats you get. That's the only way to get the "Quaker flavor" —the old Scotch flavor—that you want

WHAT you want in oats is flavor. Everything else takes second place. Oats originally a Scotch dish must have true Scotch flavor to be at its best—real "Quaker" flavor.

Nobody has yet succeeded in imitating Quaker flavor. That enticing and toasty Scotch tang of the Quaker brand.

People who ordinarily don't take to oats, find delight in that unique flavor. Once you taste it, you are spoiled for ordinary oats. So when asked to "try" a substitute, say "NO."

That flavor is not the result of guesswork but of certain Quaker milling processes applied to the finest, plumpest oats that grow. Some 50 years were spent in perfecting it.

Quick Quaker cooks in 3 to 5 minutes. It makes the finest, the most savory and quickest of hot breakfasts.

Due to Quaker milling methods, it supplies, too, the "roughage" you need to make laxatives seldom necessary.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

With the approach of cold weather building operations in and about Norwich have been rushed along during the past week when conditions for building were favorable. According to local contractors and other contractors throughout the state it is evident that the present year will set a record in building in Norwich and in the state. There has been a noticeable increase in the number of new buildings erected in the town and in adjoining towns. This is especially evident along the new Norwich-Hadlyme road where there has been erected a number of new dwelling houses as well as filling stations.

Between the city line at Maples corner on West Main street and Gardner lake there have been at least twenty new buildings erected during the past year. Some of these are dwelling houses, two are stores, two are garages and there are also many wayside stands which have closed. Beyond the lake there are a number of new filling stations and several stores.

Going south along the Norwich-New London road there has been a large increase in the number of new buildings erected, especially in the Mohegan hill section. Here several dwelling houses and two filling stations with stores attached have been erected.

At the Norwich state hospital the new ward building has been roofed in and the interior work is being done. The Sheltering Arms building is well along the brick work having been brought to the second story.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were 15 sales of real estate as compared to 20 sales for the corresponding week in 1924. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $68,100 and $171,125.

There were 20 sales of real estate in New London during the past week, a gain of eight sales over the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $158,000 and $44,070.

Building Permits in State

Building permits were issued this past week in the cities of the state reported in the Commercial Record to the number of 319, as compared with 331 permits issued in the like week of 1924, and 315 in 1923. The cost of new construction this week was $1,520,534, while in 1924 it amounted to $1,786,444 and in 1923, $1,112,390.

Labor Conditions

Labor conditions in the building industry were summarized as follows by the building construction research bureau of G. L. Miller & Co. in a survey based largely on data gathered at the recent convention of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor at Atlantic City, N. J.: 1. Wage scales now highest in history of building industry and still higher rates appear in prospect for some localities. 2. Building crafts plan to maintain wages and working conditions attained during building prosperity period. 3. Labor is fairly tranquil and little interference to building operations from strikes and lockouts expected during the next few months. 4. Labor officials condemn interunion strife and lay plans to eliminate as far as possible jurisdictional strikes. 5. Sentiment for five-day week appears to have been indefinitely postponed. 6. Building unions urge strict fulfillment of contracts but declare for elimination of anti-strike and anti-sympathy strike clauses in agreements. 7. Settlement of long-standing jurisdiction fight between bricklayers and plasterers unions gives impetus to building activity.

Building Record in Sight

Carried forward on a wave of prosperity that has touched nearly all branches of trade and industry, the building industry seems destined to reach unprecedented totals this year. Activity in building has been gaining momentum since 1922. Following a slack year in 1921 came a year of moderate improvement. Further increases were recorded in 1923 and 1924 in the cost of construction work started. And this year for the first time, the value of all building construction work will exceed $6,000,000,000. This in itself has had far reaching effects. Trade in lumber, cement and other materials has been greatly accelerated, in most cases exceeding all previous records, and employment has been furnished to thousands at good wages. Production in the cement industry is expected to reach 163,000,000 barrels, or 6,000,000 above 1924, the previous high record. It is 28,000,000 barrels in excess of 1923, which was an active year, and 66,000,000 more than 1921, a poor year.

What is true throughout the country in respect to building activity is true in Connecticut. Many cities and towns in this state will have records by the end of the year of building operations far in excess of any previous marks. Hartford, the leading building city in the state, seems likely to lead again in the matter of new construction. Activity in the capital city has been maintained at record-breaking proportion and if the present rate continues the year's total will probably exceed the record of nearly $21,000,000, reached in 1920. The state's activity, however, has not been influenced entirely by the high pace set in the larger cities. There has been a corresponding rate of activity in several of the smaller centers. In Middletown the year 1925 has already broken all records for building, the total of $1,084,368 for the first ten months as compiled by the Middletown Chamber of Commerce, being more than double the previous high record of 1923.

New London

The contract has been awarded to The H. Wales Lines Co., Mercer building, for an addition to the dining hall at the Connecticut college. The addition will be 45x80 feet, of frame construction, one story high. There will be an extension to the present heating system, new plumbing and electric wiring. The plumbing and electric wiring will be done by the owners.

Permits have been issued to A. H. Beckman for the erection of three houses on Warren street. The dwellings will be 26x36 feet. They will be of bungalow design, each arranged for one family. The total cost will be about $15,000. The construction will be done for the owner by day labor.

Nine holes of the golf course at the New London Country club in Waterford are nearing completion, and plans have been prepared for a clubhouse. It is not expected that construction will be started until next year.

Work has been started by Manuel Richards on an addition to his dwelling at 8 Lewis street. From private plans, the addition will consist of two dormer windows with interior alterations.

Ground has been broken for a house on Norwood avenue for Sylvia L. Silva. The proposed dwelling will be 24x26 feet, of frame construction, arranged for one family.

The Troy Laundry, the owner of which recently purchased the former H. K. K. Silk's Co.'s property at the corner of Hempstead and Home streets, will be removed from its present location in the Fournier building on Bank street, to the new home as soon as alterations to the building are completed and machinery installed.

ST. PAUL'S VICAR PREACHES AS A PAL, NOT AS "HIGHBROW"

KINGSTON-ON-THAMES, Nov. 14. (AP)—If the parishioners of St. Paul's church, Kingston Hill, desire intellectual stuff in the pastor's sermons, they have been told to go to someone else. But if they want a pal, the Rev. A. Wellesley Orr, the vicar, has asked them to come to him.

"The Archbishop of Canterbury advised me that the mistake I have been making is that I look upon my people, who have to listen to my sermons, as just ordinary men and women," said the vicar. "I was reminded that you are my intellectual superiors, who need from me far more than I have ever given you.

"You have learned to play the piano, to knit jumpers, and by wireless you have been brought into contact with the most intellectual subjects. You have a motor bike and side car, and so you have traveled. You visit the movie once or twice a week and see the intellectual Charlie Chaplin. You have made such advances that you can easily spot the winner in the 2:30 horse race almost any afternoon.

"I have not time for these intellectual things."

The vicar believes men and women go to church seeking ideals.

The wise man never boasts of his knowledge, but the man who thinks he is wise does nothing else.

SUPREME COURT RULING ON FOREIGN DEBTS OWED U. S.

WASHINGTON: Nov. 16—(A. P.)—Debts owed America in terms of the foreign currencies by subjects of the Central Powers of Europe at the outbreak of the World war must be paid, the supreme court held today, at the rate of exchange which prevailed when they fell due, with interest from that time until paid, including the period of American participation in the war.

The question reached the court in two cases in which Ladenburg, Thalman and Company of New York was a party. One was brought by the alien property custodian and treasurer of the United States, who contended that the rate of exchange for converting a debt owed by the German firm of Delbrueck, Schickler & Company should be that prevailing at the time the New York concern obtained judgment on the obligation in American courts.

The New York firm's contention for the exchange rate prevailing when the debt fell due was upheld in the lower courts but it appealed on the question of interest, having been refused this during American participation in the war, from April 6, 1917, to July 14, 1919.

The supreme court sustained the finding of the lower courts with reference to the rate of exchange, but reversed them in the matter of interest.

An expert is a man who is able to explain things so thoroughly that nobody can understand them.

NORWICH DOINGS 75 YEARS AGO

The Norwich and Worcester railroad was making good money 75 years ago and the stock was steadily rising in value as the road continued under efficient management.

In the south the slave question was holding the fore and the Nashville convention received a resolution urging a secession from the union as an only way out of the slave question.

The following items are taken in part from the Courier of 1850.

Tuesday, Nov. 2, 1850—The net profits of the Worcester and Nashua railroad for the past year were $42,119.-19, which the directors have used for payment of debts. The total income for the year was about $150,000 and a dividend of 2 1-2 per cent will be made for the six months ending on December 1st, next.

One of the most daring robberies reported from the country this year took place in New Orleans last week when five men stole five buckets of gold and silver from the home of millionaire McDonough. Notes amounting to $100,000 were overlooked by the robbers.

Shares of the Norwich and Worcester railroad have gone up lately due to the increased earnings of the road. Gross earnings for four months ending September 30th were $95,849.80 an increase of $10,935.80 over the same period in 1849. The road has been extremely well managed and the income is certain to grow during coming [illegible]

Thursday, November 14, 1850—According to the latest census the population of New Haven is 22,520. In 1840 the population was 14,390, thus showing a gain of 8,139 in ten years. The population of the city alone is 20,341. There are 4,322 foreigners in the city, of which 3,385 were born in Ireland.

In various elections the whigs have swung into office with substantial majorities in Massachusetts, Maine and New York, while the opposition has evidently won out in New Jersey.

A portion of the wreck of the Emeline has come ashore on Montauk, three dead bodies being found in the wreckage, only one of which could be identified.

Over 60,000 people are now on the plains and many of them are likely to find their graves there unless help reaches them. Water is scarce and began selling at $1 a gallon, then rose to $10 a pint, finally becoming unpurchasable. From fact it is learned that a man nearly dead from thirst offered $10, then $200 and finally $700 for a cup of water, and was refused by the people holding it. He finally wrenched the water from them and quenched his thirst, throwing the $700 at their feet. This only serves to show the situation thousands are in on the plains this fall.

Saturday, November 16, 1850—Delegates to the whig convention now in session at American hall, Hartford, include the following from Norwich. Amos W. Prentice, Serseneus Stocking, David Young and William E. Park. New London delegates are William C. Crump, F. B. Loomis, John H. Crocker and W. W. Kingsley.

The committee to nominate the permanent officers of the convention picked the following Eastern Connecticut men. For president, David Gallup of Plainfield; for a vice president, Learned Hebard, for New London county, John P. Trumbull and David Young represent New London county on the committee on resolutions.

The convention took a stand in favor of upholding the present fugitive slave law, but expressed itself in favor of a modification of that law, and denied any intention of breaking off their plighted faith with the brethern of the south.

The following resolution has been introduced to the Nashville convention, "Resolved: That a secession by the joint action of the slaveholding states is the only efficient remedy for the aggravated wrongs which they now endure, and the onerous events which threaten them in the future, from the usurped and now unrestricted powers of the federal government."

BAR AND GRILL ROOM OF N. Y. ELKS CLUB PADLOCKED

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(A. P.)—The mother lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks today accepted a padlock for the bar and grill room of the club for a period of six months, for violation of the prohibition law. The other part of the clubhouse will remain open to its members during the period of the padlock.

The submission to padlock today marked the culmination of a legal battle which has been in progress since October 26, when police and prohibition officials raided the basement of the club and seized nine kegs of alleged beer. Mr. Buckner said today that it never had been his intention to put a lock on the front doors of the club, but only to close that section of it in which there had been violations of the law.

In addition to the padlock, Albert E. Wallace, the general manager of the clubhouse, and Norman J. Fitzsimmons, manager of the restaurant, were enjoined never again to sell beer or liquor.

CHICAGO TO EXPERIENCE GREAT PROHIBITION DRIVE

CHICAGO, Nov. 16—(A. P.)—More than 200 Chicago and Cook county cabarets, cafes and road houses are to be hit in a drive by E. C. Yellowley, new prohibition director for the Chicago district.

The evidence against these places has been obtained, Mr. Yellowley announced tonight, as the result of the operations of a group of under cover men. When Yellowley assumed office it was reported that scores of raids were to be made beginning November 1 and that patrons as well as proprietors of places where liquor was drank would be arrested.

The raids failed to materialize and it was reported that the campaign had been called off. Mr. Yellowly said tonight that the campaign was launched as scheduled but by under cover men instead of by the raiding method.

Meanwhile Edwin A. Olson, United States district attorney, assumed personal charge of a federal grand jury investigation of a beer running syndicate reported to have been doing an aggregate business of upward of $800,000,000 a year. He said the resignation of James McDowell, his assistant who had been in charge of the investigation had no connection with the inquiry and added that he expected indictments to be voted shortly intimating that railroads which transported the beer may be involved.

French Woman Tells

How to Get Thin

Without Diets, Creams, Exercise or Dangerous Drugs

I reduced my own weight 50 pounds in less than five weeks, and at the same time marvelously improved my general health and appearance with a new French discovery called SAN-GRI-NA. To-day I look, act and feel far younger than my real age. From the results in my own case and those of my friends, I am absolutely convinced that any man or woman burdened with rolls of ugly, unwholesome fat, can take it off easily, quickly and safely with SAN-GRI-NA. Every day science discovers something new. SAN-GRI-NA is one of the latest French discoveries for the reduction of excess fat. It does away with weakening diets, tiresome exercises, torturing garments and absurd and expensive so-called reducing creams. It is used extensively in Paris, where women of every age pride themselves on keeping their figures slender and graceful, and where the men detest a heavy waistline or double chin. No matter how fat you are, or what you have done in the past to reduce you must remember that SAN-GRI-NA has never been offered before to the American public. IT IS GUARANTEED ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS, does not contain any dangerous drugs, and cannot possibly affect your stomach or your health. By simply taking two small tablets before each meal, I lost 50 pounds in two months, and I have not regained a pound since. I eat all I want and enjoy the best of health. You can do the same. Today go to any good drug store, ask for a package of SAN-GRI-NA. Do not accept anything else, as it is the only thing I ever found to reduce after I had tried hundreds of different ways and remedies.

NOTE—The above appeared in many papers about 2 years ago. Since then SAN-GRI-NA has been investigated by American Physicians, Nurses, Clinics, Beauty Specialists, etc., and is now endorsed and recommended to fat people by Dr. Rudolph, former Health Commissioner, as a most wonderful and harmless way to reduce. Every day letters from grateful users come to us from all over the country. Men and women in all stages of life have reduced 10, 20, 30, 40, or even as much as 50 pounds, saying also that they were able to greatly improve their health and looks. Do not accept a substitute. Insist on SAN-GRI-NA.

If your druggist does not carry SAN-GRI-NA in stock he can get it from his wholesaler or you can send a money order or check for $1.50 direct to the Scientific Research Laboratories, 1841 Broadway, N. Y. C., and one full sized box SAN-GRI-NA will be mailed you prepaid.

On sale at any good drug or department store. If your druggist does not carry San-Gri-Na in stock he can get it from his wholesaler or you can send a money order or check for $1.50 direct to the Scientific Research Laboratories, 1841 Broadway, N. Y. City.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

The Coon That Wasn't

Some things in life as in a dream
Are not exactly what they seem.
—Bobby Coon.

The instant Bobby Coon felt that sharp reminder he knew what it was and he recovered his wits. He did so. He knew that he had stepped on one of the little spears of Prickly Porky the Porcupine. Those little spears which Prickly Porky carries in his coat are called quills, as you know. This one had dropped from Prickly Porky's coat and Bobby had stepped on it in such a way that the sharp point had entered his foot.

Bobby didn't stop to pull it out then; that dog was too near. But the instant he felt that little spear Bobby remembered that he had seen Prickly Porky in the very tree under which he had stepped on that little spear. To be sure, it had been the day before. But Bobby knew that Prickly Porky sometimes spends several days in a tree, having plenty to eat and seeing no reason why he should move on. It was too dark to see if he was still up there, but Bobby decided to take a chance. So without pausing a second he scrambled up that tree.

Out on a branch half way up the tree he saw Prickly Porky and a little sigh of relief escaped from Bobby. Instead he kept right on up that tree until he was near the top. There he flattened himself against the trunk and waited.

How that dog did bark at the foot of the tree! He barked as if he were trying to bark his head off. What he was trying to do was to tell those hunters that he had driven Bobby Coon up a tree. Bobby, looking down, saw the light come bobbing along between the trees and heard the hunters calling excitedly to one another. Presently they were gathered just below around that tree. One of them pointed a flashlight up in the tree and began moving it about. Bobby knew that they were looking for him.

"There he is!" cried one of the hunters. "He is out on that branch about half way up. Don't shoot him! I'll climb up and shake him off and we'll let the dog kill him. He can't get away from us possibly."

To this the others agreed and the hunter started up the tree. When he reached the branch on which Prickly Porky was he could just make out a black mass out there in the feeble light from the flashlight below. It didn't enter that man's head that it could be anybody but Bobby Coon, so he didn't look as sharply as he might have. He began to shake that branch trying to shake Bobby Coon off. That is, he supposed it was Bobby Coon he was trying to shake off. But this wasn't so easily done. The man stood up on that branch and holding to a branch above began jumping up and down. There was a sudden sharp crack and down went that branch with Prickly Porky.

Bobby, looking down saw the light come bobbing between the trees

The hunter in the tree yelled as he clung to the branch above and swung his legs around the trunk of the tree. The hunters down below yelled as they saw what they supposed was Bobby Coon falling from that tree. But their yells were nothing to the yells of that dog a moment later as he sprang in and bit at Prickly Porky. Of course he got a mouthful of those little spears, and they hurt. They were in his tongue, his cheeks and his lips. No wonder he yelled. He backed away as hastily as he could, all the time yelping and crying. His master tried to get hold of him and got too near Prickly Porky. Like a flash the latter's tail came around, and there was another yell, this time from the dog's master.

For the next fifteen minutes or so there was a busy time and a lot of yelping and exclamations as those little spears were pulled out of that dog and his master, one of the hunters holding the flashlight while the others worked. You see, they knew that the sooner they were pulled out the better it would be for the victims. If left they would keep working in farther and farthers. Meanwhile Prickly Porky had climbed another tree and disappeared. As for Bobby Coon, he had climbed across to another tree along branches which met, and then down that tree and taken to his heels. He was safe for that night. As it turned out, he was safe for the rest of the season, for that dog wasn't in condition to hunt again until after Bobby Coon had curled up for the winter.

EW LONDON POOL-ROOM KEEPER TOO KIND TO THIRSTY PATRONS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 16.—Peter Demersky, a pool room keeper on North Bank street, was a party to a transaction Saturday night by which he received 50 cents according to the story told in the police court this morning. Today he paid into the court treasury, in a fine and costs, about $215. That sort of business would soon send Peter to the bankruptcy court. Peter relied upon Irving C. Larkin not to show the white feather, but in that he made a bad bargain too, for when Larkin was accused and he saw he might be accused also of violating the liquor law when he bought drinks from Demersky, he gave information to the police that left no doubt as to the guilt of Demersky and of his having sold Larkin whiskey at 25 cents a drink. The police disclosed gray matter, in abundance in handling the case from start to finish—the sense that is raising them in the estimation of the people in general. Sergeant Samuel Hick started things rolling against Demersky. The sergeant was going over the beats and came to the Demersky place with the windows whitened with kalsomine, chalk, paint or some other substance that made them opaque. But the surface of the glass was not completely covered and Sergeant Hick peered in. He saw Larkin engaged in a game of pool. When he stopped to chalk his cue he also oiled his throat, for he went to the rear of the pool room and there he was handed a drink—served in a small tumbler. Larkin necked it and went back after more soon. Then Sergeant Hick stepped in and found Demersky at the rear with the whiskey glass in his hand a pint milk bottle the contents of which Demersky poured on the stairway. Officer Hick grabbed the bottle in time to save a little of the contents and to discover that the odor on the drinking glass and that of the milk bottle were the same. Hick arrested Demersky and took Larkin along, too. At the police station Larkin was inclined to be garrulous after he was told that he might be proceeded against, as was Demersky. "Oh, I'll tell what I did" he said. "I bought two drinks and paid a quarter for each." That was the evidence the police needed and they had it in abundance. Larkin finally told the same story on the witness stand when Demersky was put on trial today. He didn't want to admit his purchases and did not do so till it was corkscrewed out of him by the prosecutor. Demersky would not admit that he sold the drinks to Larkin, nor did he deny so doing. He contented himself with saying, "I don't know!" But he pulled out $215 and settled with the court. Judge Prince attached a jail sentence of ten days to the judgment but suspended the execution of that part of the judgment.

Edward Hickey, having staid away from the police court several months, was back there this morning. His offense was intoxication. But his improvement in conduct in having kept away from the court so long was taken into consideration by Judge Prince and he suspended judgment that Hickey might feel that he had an incentive to stay away for a longer period.

Jacob Yasmend was fined $10 for intoxication. He was accused by Andrew Mickel, a store keeper. When this was disclosed Jacob admitted that he had drank considerable liquor, but he declared that he bought it from Mickel. It was the testimony of one man against the other so that court did not take the accusation by Jacob as serious. It was a pretty close call for Andrew though, and may serve to keep him from being accused with more positive evidence.

Morris Rosenberg of 21 Maple avenue was fined $3 for operating an automobile without having been granted a license so to do, and Charles Muscarella was accused of evading responsibility when an accident occurred. Muscarella had agreed to settle for the damage incurred, so his case was disposed of by his paying the costs of trial.

Jimmy Dixon, colored, was today sent to jail from the police court for a stay of three months as a "peeping Tom." He was caught at the disreputable act of trying to see what was going on in the home of Sidney Sulsman, on Federal street, where young girls were changing garments. Dixon tried to get away when he was detected, but Mr. Sulsman was too speedy for the "little coon" and he was caught. Jimmy made a fight to escape, and after he had struck Mr. Sulsman a couple of blows slipped out of his coat and started on the run for the lower streets of the city. But Mr. Sulsman pursued and saw where Jimmy made a stop—in a house on John street, the negro section of the city. Mr. Sulsman declared that the night was dark when the negro appeared and when Miss Sulsman called to her father to warn him that a negro was at the window and that he had his face close to the window glass, but Mr. Sulsman answered the alarm so quickly that he got Jimmy into his clutches. Abraham Gordon, an estimable citizen residing near the Sulsman house, also saw the negro, but he could not identify him as Dixon. Jimmy set up as a defense that he was not the man wanted for peeping. He said he was at the house where he was found and which was the one in which Mr. Sulsman located Jimmy for the police, for several hours before he was arrested. He also denied that the coat from which the peeper slipped was his garment, though it fitted him as did the cap that Mr. Sulsman secured from the fugitive. Jimmy called Edward Jones as a witness to testify that Sulsman must have been mistaken in identifying him as the peeper, but Jones made a bad witness and couldn't help Jimmy in the least. Dixon has before served time for a similar offense, and he has been accused when he was not convicted.

Mrs. Charles Waterhouse, of South Lyme; Mrs. Thomas May, 21 Reed street, and Mrs. Harry Blakley, 66 Franklin street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were dismissed Sunday.

Margaret W. Mahan, administratrix of the estate of Bryan D. Mahan, has sold a building lot on Learned street to Theodore N., and Harriet M. Harrison.

Theodore Soderwgin has sold a building lot on Learned street to Theodore N., and Harriet M. Harrison.

Station House Keeper Frank Gorcran resumed his duties today after having enjoyed his annual vacation of two weeks.

Chief Petty Officer Henry S. Ruggles, attached to the U. S. S. Bushnell, complained to the police today that a comparing and stop watch, the property of the federal government, but of which he was the custodian, was stolen from aboard the Bushnell Sunday. The discovery of the theft was not made until today. The watch is of 19 jewels and of Agassiz movement.

The funeral of Miss Minnie G. Harris was held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at her home, 53 Blackhall street, and was attended by many mourners, among them many teachers of the public schools. The services were conducted by Rev. Chester H. Howe, pastor of the First Baptist church. Relatives and intimate friends acted as bearers. Burial was in the family plot in Cedar Grove cemetery.

The funeral of Mrs. Ellen Hogan, widow of Edward Hogan, and mother of Patrolman John Hogan, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church. A mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Alexander Wollschlaeger. The bearers were members of the New London police department, Lieut. James C. Sullivan and Patrolmen Michael Dorsey, John Clifford, Thomas Lyden, John Sullivan and Michael O'Neil. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Catherine Leiper, 63, wife of John Leiper, died Saturday night at her residence, Pleasure Beach, Waterford. Besides her husband, Mrs. Leiper is survived by five sons, John Leiper, Jr., Leslie and Louis Leiper, of this city; Anthony Leiper, Pleasure Beach and Albert J. Leiper, Springfield, Mass. A daughter, Mrs. Jeremiah Norris, of this city, also survives.

William Henry, Jr., aged three months, son of William Henry and the late Ada M. Hoxie, died this morning at the residence of the child's father, 11 Walden avenue. The baby's mother died about three months ago.

Mrs. Grace DiMaggio, 69, wife of Salvatore DiMaggio, 435 Montauk avenue, died last night at Home Memorial hospital, where she has been under treatment four weeks. Mrs. DiMaggio having been striken about two months ago. Besides her husband, Mrs. DiMaggio is survived by two sons Frank and Arthur DiMaggio, and a daughter, Miss Virginia DiMaggio, all of this city. Two nephews are Frank and Antonio Piscitella, also of this city. Mrs. DiMaggio was one of the best known and most respected of New London's residents. She had resided in this city many years, coming to this country from the home of her birth, Tulso, Italy, 25 years ago. She had been married 50 years.

Clarence B. Graves, of Somerville, Mass., and Emily B. Hunt, Winthrop, Mass., were married Sunday in the chapel of the First Church of Christ, by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth.

The city's new aerial fire truck was put into commission today and is ready to respond to alarms. The truck is housed at the Central fire station and is manned by drivers of the Kosmoc Hose company designated by Chief Charles Rose.

Gladys Stratton, 200 Colman street, was robbed of her purse containing a small amount of cash and valuable papers, Sunday night, by a purse snatcher in the person of a sailor. The most valuable of the papers were found this morning on the street where they had been thrown by the fleeing thief. The woman was walking along Lincoln avenue when she was approached by the bluejacket, who grabbed the purse and yanked it from her grasp. The thief fled through Connecticut avenue and disappeared in the darkness. The theft was reported to the police, who made a search for the sailor, but did not apprehend him. This morning C. J. Leary, employer at the plant of the Bloom Silk company, Garfield avenue, found the pocketbook on Garfield avenue and a search of it revealed a bank book and a check made payable to the woman, but $8 and a small quantity of silver, together with a fountain pen, were missing.

The death of Mrs. Mary T. Marx, proprietress of a lodging house at 32 Golden street occurred this afternoon, after a lingering illness. She was about 57 years of age and had not enjoyed sound health for many months.

William Donovan, inspector in the employ of the Connecticut company, is a patient at Lawrence-Memorial associated hospital, having been operated upon recently for strangulated hernia. At the institution this evening it was stated that Mr. Donovan was resting as comfortable as could be expected under the circumstances.

Edward Riley, 55 Adelaide street, complained to the police today because of the acts of mischievous youths residing in the neighborhood of the Riley residence. Mr. Riley alleges that earlier in the day the youths entered his automobile, which was parked in front of his home and stole several articles besides damaging the machine.

David Elphenstone, a lodger, at 32 Golden street, complained to the police late this afternoon that while he absented himself at his employment today a thief entered his room and stole a double gold chain. Elphenstone suspects a fellow-lodger.

Morris Martin, a sailor attached to the U. S. S. Bushnell, complained to the police this evening that his locker at the Salvation Army lodging house, corner of State and Atlantic streets, had been opened and rifled of its contents and principally wearing apparel.

CITY COUNCIL ACCEPTS NIAGARA'S INVITATION

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 16—The city council held a short meeting this evening—short because there was little business to claim attention and the members had no new matters to bring forward. There were nine applications for permits to erect or alter buildings. All of them were granted as requested. Ordinances relating to sewer extensions of Ashcraft road and Reservoir street were read for a second time by title, and a proposition of an exchange of land for alterations in Reservoir street was accepted.

The proposed fuel oil ordinance was discussed and then left in the situation it was in prior to the meeting—in the hands of committee for report. Councilor Streeter is interested in the ordinance and desires that citizens shall have an opportunity to discuss it before it is adopted or rejected. He considers it a most important proceeding and one that may cost the citizens who have already installed oil heating apparatus a considerable sum if the ordinance is adopted as proposed.

The compensation board through F. C. Burrows recommended to the council the assessment on the city of the entire cost of sewer extension on Mercer street northerly from Gibson street which will cost $535. The report was filed, but not acted upon.

Building Inspector Linicus recommended that an addition to the Thomas Hose company house be taken down, as it has moved from the foundation upon which it rests since Thursday. He anticipates that the addition may settle further and for that reason he has ordered that the addition be vacated. His recommendation is that an entirely new building be erected there. The matter was sent to the committee on public works.

Silas Maxson offered to deed to the city a strip of land on Converse place if he was assured that no assessment on the land would hereafter be made against him for improvements or sewer. The proposal was referred to the city manager for investigation and report.

Niagara Engine company through a committee of which Fred C. Burrows is chairman, extended an invitation to the members of the council to attend the 75th anniversary celebration of the company at the Mohican hotel on the evening of November 25. Mayor Fox said he saw no reason why such an invitation should not be accepted and the council voted unanimously to dine with the firemen.

H. Marcus & Co., was granted permission some time ago to erect a sign on North Bank street but the sign overhangs the sidewalk a greater distance than the city ordinance allows. Now the petitions ask that the sign be allowed to remain in the position in which it was placed. The city manager will take up the matter and recommend to the council what action shall be taken.

Edward and Mary McCarthy represented to the council that they had failed to hand in their tax list and thus had been taxed 10 per cent. additional for their failure. They asked the council to abate the additional tax, but the council saw no way of doing that and referred the matter to the director of law for his advice. The council can abate taxes but it has no authority to change the statutes.

Price of liberty frequently depends upon the judge.

It is a spooky creepy comedy that keeps you in very good humor all during the showing.

Stars of Other Days will bring back memories to the stage devotees of 40 or more years ago. Corinne (the original) playing with Stars of Other Days, made her first appearance as an infant prodigy in Norwich just 46 years ago in a miniature playlore company at Breed hall Nov. 14, 1879. Other well known artists with Stars of Other Days are Tom English, the king of all tamborine artists, Harry Bartlett, the wonder man of the stage, and Twists and Turns the acknowledged in his line "Grotesque Leg-Mania," Eddie Reeves, world's champion wooden shoe dancer, and Gene Kimball, of the old dramatic school, with his marvelous power of delivery.

Frank McGowan plays tinkling tunes on the banjo and Miller Packer and Sells offer a novelty boob act that is very unusual. They are clever comedians and have very sweet voices. They were the hit of the show at the Palace last night. Copeland and Cato have variety enough for any vaudeville audience no matter how critical they may be. They sing and dance their way into the hearts of everyone in the audience.

Dance in New London

At Sloans Dancing academy in Lawrence hall, New London, there will be a big dance tonight. Music by Miner-Doyle orchestra of Springfield, Mass. This is their first appearance in New London and a genuine treat is promised all who attend. See adv.

Princess Bonnie

Just a few words here to Mr. and Mrs. Public. As Legionaires we feel it our duty to let you in on the ground floor so that you cannot miss getting your tickets today to see the best play there is while a chance remains. Yes, sir. It's a real, honest-to-gosh, bang-up good play. If Kathleen was a good production, and you recall that it sure was, then we'll have to say something more of Princess Bonnie, which we will produce tonight (Tuesday) and Wednesday at the Broadway theater. We'll say Princess Bonnie is "bester" than Kathleen.

It is a John B. Rogers production and is being directed by William H. MacGreevy, one of their most talented directors, assisted by one of the best local casts ever assembled for a local production.

Now about the play itself? Princess Bonnie is a comic opera in two acts. It has more comedy in one act than an average play, but enough of that. Get this—it's a Spanish, remember. Spanish. Now let your imagination run for a touchdown. Got it? Yes! Then go to Englers for your reservations before it's too late.

The play is filled with music, and some variety we'll say. Here are a few: Listen Well! I told You So! Never Never! Fall in Love, Bonnie. Come Hurry Up! Ha. Ha. I Told You So! Get these last two, they have a double meaning.

The players. Why discuss them except by names for you know them well. There's Mrs. Mabel Buckingham, Miss Eunice Taft, Mrs. Myra Frink Ward, Miss Mary Prodell, J. Warren Kane, Frank Crowell, William Mitchell, Walter LaFontaine, Herbert McNeely, George Madden and Harry Powers. There is no need to boost them to you for you have seen them in action, heard them sing and you have never found them wanting.

They have been rehearsing every night for nearly a month to give you two nights of pleasure and their efforts are appreciated by the Legion and will be by you also once you have availed yourselves of this opportunity to enjoy a night with them at the Broadway theater.

Make your reservations now and insure a good seat. Bring the family and help put this all-Norwich production across with a bang. It's your city, the cast are our own fellow citizens and the Legion is made up of your boys now as in 1917. See Princess Bonnie and you'll never be sorry you spent your money for the entertainment they will provide for you.

Palace Theatre

In "The Gold Rush," called Charlie Chaplin's greatest comedy, and coming next Sunday to the Palace under a United Artists corporation release, the world's most famous comedian is seen as a pathetic tenderfoot struggling along with hundreds of others who are in search of gold in the Klondike.

Poetic pathos and whimsical comedy are cleverly blended in this film. There is one scene in which Charlie, a be-draggled bit of humanity, finds a sympathizer and sweetheart—a girl in a dance hall. She dances with the little tramp who beams over her shoulder into the eyes of his rival, a wealthy miner.

There is Jim McKay, a giant as strong as an ox. McKay is enraged and Charlie trembles as the big man menaces him. The little man thinks after all that death is better than the loss of the queen of the dance hall.

To have the right types in Truckee, in northern California, where many scenes of this picture were produced, Chaplin took out a special trainload of hoboes with well-seared countenances and tattered clothes.

In several sequences it seems an endless line of ragged humanity that is creasing the Chilkoot Pass. A blizzard rages and men are blown about helplessly. They fight on doggedly, as this winding path out through the snows over a precipitous mountainside, is the gateway to their goal, the Klondike.

Then in another stretch there is Black Larsen, who lives in terror of the police. He builds a hut in the Alaska mountains and lives as a hermit amid snow and ice. To this hut comes the pathetic Chaplin. He knocks at the door for a rest before plodding along to the land of gold. Larsen does not care who starves, as he is not going to take any chances of the police apprehending him.

The scenes aboard a big steamship are full of human interest. The luxury and comfort of the first cabin are contrasted with the misery, want and sickness in the steerage. There is a little man, who a few years before went on the long hike to the Klondike, and who now aboard the great vessel, is seen wrapped in costly furs. He is unhappy because he has lost his girl. But in the steerage there is a girl returning home from Alaska wishing she could find her dear little tramp again.

At the Breed

From assistant cameraman for Tom Mix to the envious position of featured player in one of the greatest photoplays ever produced, is the accomplishment of smiling George O'Brien in the short space of three years. As Davy Brandon in the William Fox photoplay, "The Iron Horse," at the Breed theater, he gives a sterling performance and forces recognition as one of the leading male players of the screen.

This youthful player is admired by all women for his manly charm and is respected by all men for his qualities of manhood and sportsmanship. He finds himself at home in most sports and held the light heavyweight boxing championship of the Pacific Fleet during the war. Out on the Fox lot in Hollywood he was known as Smiling George O'Brien and was universally liked.

O'Brien confesses to being a native son of California, where he received his education. He is the son of the beloved chief of the San Francisco Police department, Daniel O'Brien. During the World war he served in the navy.

Returning to civil life, O'Brien took up his unfinished work at Santa Clara college in California, but fate intervened and he never finished the course. At this period he met Tom Mix the William Fox star, who interested him in a motion picture career. This career started humbly enough, carrying a camera for the Mix company. In a few months he was given small parts in Fox productions and his big chance came when William Fox selected him to play the leading male role in The Iron Horse, which was in production two years following one year's research work.

FOUR LIVES LOST DURING STORM IN BUFFALO HARBOR

BUFFALO, Nov. 16—(A. P.)—Four lives were lost when a fierce gale tore three barges from their tow and dashed them to bits on the breakwall of the Buffalo harbor early today.

The dead: George Dahl of Tonawanda, skipper of the barge Jerry V. Petrie, Mrs Dahl, Michael O'Brien, of New York, of the barge Annie J. O'Connor. Victor Jensaen, or Kurki, address unknown, of the barge Sherman Petrie.

The thre barges and the barge Carroll K. West, were in tow of the tug Barryton, bound for Buffalo from Cleveland. Lake Erie was lashed by a 70-mile an hour gale which whipped the high waves, burying the barges time after time and finally snapping the tow ropes between the first and second barges.

William Smith, the lone survivor of the barge crew, related that the tow was about seven miles from Buffalo when a particularly heavy blow was encountered. He heard a shot-like noise which told of the parting of the tow line but owing to the pitching of his vessel, the Carroll K. West, it was some time before he was able to communicate this information to the tug.

When he finally succeeded, Captain Clark of the Barryton sent out an S O S call to which the Buffalo coast guard crew responded. Three tugs also set out to help locate the lost barges in the darkness and the storm, however, the tugs were not sighted and the three dashed against the breakwall. By morning they had been reduced to matchwood.

The storm raged all day with the wind diminishing only slightly and all boats scheduled to sail remained in port.

The average back yard by any other name would not inspire a landscape painter.

TO BAR STATEMENTS MADE BY OLYMPIA MACRI

LITCHFIELD, Nov. 16—(A. P.)—Statements made by Olympia Macri while she was being led from in front of the Palace theatre in New Haven, where she killed John Bagnano, to the police station on February 26 will not be heard by the jury which is sitting at her second trial on a charge of murder.

Judge George E. Hinman ruled this afternoon that only "spontaneous declarations" would be admitted in the evidence at the re-trial which entered its third week in the Litchfield county superior court here today.

Argument over the admissibility of her statements to police officers and her subsequent statements to Coroner Eli Mix was heard by Judge Hinman in the absence of the jury which was not in court today because of the illness of Mott Darling, 74, one of the jurors. He is expected to be able to resume his part of the trial tomorrow morning at 9:30.

During the examination of Sergeant John G. Schmitt, of New Haven last Friday, Joseph Koletsky, counsel for the defense, objected to his testifying as to what the girl said immediately after she shot Bagnano. The jury was dismissed while counsel argued the point.

When court opened today without the jury, the state called nine witnesses who testified concerning the girl's condition as she made her statements to police officers and to the coroner and during her trial in New Haven last spring.

Sergeant Schmitt re-testified that the girl, as she was being taken away from the scene of the shooting, said: "I'm not a bit sorry for what I done, I'm damn glad I done it."

On the way to the police station in custody of Schmitt and Sergeant Thomas F. Reynolds she made other statements such as "he did enough to me" and "I'm not a bit sorry."

It was during the cross examination of Reynolds, called after a short afternoon recess, that Judge Hinman announced his ruling on these statements. Mr. Koletsky was pressing the witness for a definite declaration as to the girl's appearance when the court interrupted.

"I'm not going to admit the declarations to this witness or to Schmitt on the way to the station house," Judge Hinman informed Mr. Koletsky, adding that he was going to admit Schmitt's testimony as to the girl's statement on the moment at the proper time. These the court termed "spontaneous declarations."

FIRE IN BRIDGEPORT REVEALS TWO STILLS

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 16—(A. P.)—Two unopened letters found by firemen after a fire today, lying on a table in a cellar room which police believe was used as a rendezvous for a gang of bootleggers who manufactured their own liquor in a vacant house at 1058 Capitol avenue, are being used as clues upon which the police hope to fasten the ownership of two stills and apprehend the manufacturers of the large source of supply of the liquor that had been coming from that house for the past few weeks. It is expected that the investigation will have been completed tomorrow night.

When the firemen answered the alarm at nine o'clock this morning, sent in from box 291 by a passerby who noticed smoke curling from the building, they found the cellar of the building in flames. The blaze, according to Chief Daniel E. Johnson, started from an explosion of a gas heater which was used in running two stills. The fire was extinguished before any real damage could be done to the building and the circumstances of the fire were reported to the police.

A large quantity of liquor and the stills were seized by the police. The seized goods were taken to police headquarters in two trucks. It is understood that all kinds of beverages were found in the cellar.

PONTOONS IN PLACE UNDER WRECK OF S-51

NEW LONDON, Conn., Nov. 16—(A. P.)—Work on the S-51 which was sunk with 33 of its crew by the steamer City of Rome on September 25, off Block Island, is progressing daily and the pontoons taken to the wreck are now in place. The hull of the submarine is being sealed preparatory to pumping it out at the same time the pontoons are emptied. It is expected that the actual lifting of the submarine will come within the next fortnight.

DROP IN STOCK PRICES

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(By the A. P.)—Speculation for the advance came to an abrupt halt in today's stock market, despite several favorable dividend developments, and prices plunged downward under heavy selling for both accounts. Trading was again in large volume, the day's sales running over two and one half million shares.

Out of town banks are reported to have called about $25,000,000 in loans which, together with the absence of strong buying support for the motor shares, probably precipitated the selling movement. Sporadic attempts were made to rally the list by bidding up selected oils, rails and specialties, but they failed to make much of an impression.

Motors broke wide open under the hammering of bear traders. Chrysler dropped nearly 18 points to 200 and then rallied to 203 3-4; Hudson dropped 9 points to 101; Jordan fell over 7 points to 44 1-4 and Chandler, Dodge Brothers "A", Mack Truck, Moon, Packard, Nash, the Pierce Arrow issues, Willys-Overland, White and Yellow Truck declined 3 1-2 to 5 points.

Rubber and motor accessory shares also were hard hit. Fisher Body collapsed 15 1-2 points to 100; U. S. Rubber showed a decline of 4 1-2 points at 38 3-4 and Goodrich, Kelsey Wheel and Stewart Warner yielded 2 to 4 points. DuPont failed to respond to the announcement of a $5 extra cash dividend, breaking 21 points to 226 and then rallying to 228. Raising of the annual dividend on Kennecott Copper from $3 to $4 also failed to benefit that stock, which closed over a point lower at 58 7-8.

Oils developed a temporary burst of strength early in the session under the leadership of Standard Oil of N. J., which touched 46 1-4, but fell back later to 44 5-8, on the official denial of rumors that the company planned to retire its preferred stock. Rails also failed to follow up their recent advance although an opening display of strength in the Van Sweringen issues sent Chesapeake and Ohio and "Nickel Plate" common to new high records. Such popular issues as Baltimore and Ohio, Atchison, New York Central, Lackawanna, Lehigh Valley, "Katy" common, Reading, Southern Pacific and Southern Railway showed net losses of one to two points.

There were a few independent strong spots. Foundation company was bid up 3 points to a new record high at 179 and the "rights" to subscribe to the stock of the new foreign subsidiary were quickly run up from 15 to 24 1-2, closing within a point of the top. International Nickel also attained a new peak at 43 3-8. Associated Drygoods, Ingersoll Rand (new stock), R. S. Schulte and Van Raalte first preferred, are among the few other issues successfully to withstand selling pressure.

Marking up of the call money rate from 4 1-2 to 5 per cent. was somewhat of a surprise in view of the huge excess reserves shown in last Saturday's clearing house statement, but it was explained by the calling of loans by interior institutions in preparation for the withdrawal of government funds to meet Liberty loan interest payments. An advance in the Cleveland federal reserve re-discount rate was announced after the market closed. Time money and commercial paper rates held firm.

Foreign exchanges moved within rather narrow and irregular limits. Demand sterling and French francs held relatively steady at $4.84 3-8 and 4.01 1-2 cents, respectively.

GREENEVILLE

The Ladies' Aid of the Third Baptist church held a successful variety supper in their chapel last Friday evening. The menu consisted of scalloped potatoes and baked beans and brown bread, cabbage salad, pickles, rolls, cake and coffee. They are also planning to hold a meat pie supper, with all the "fixins" in the near future, in connection with their Christmas sale of fancy work, aprons, food, home-made candy, etc.

The Community Workers met recently at the home of Mrs. William A. Lund. On account of illness some of the members were unable to attend, and the Workers are sorry to report the loss by death, of one of their valued members, Mrs. John Scott. Mrs. Chas. F. Sears had charge of the meeting and several matters of business was brought up. The Workers held two special meetings in October, for the purpose of tying quilts and they have more to be done. The regular social meeting for the month of October was held at the home of Mrs. William Brome of Fourth street with Miss Nellie Hayes as hostess and a delightful afternoon was spent. Two of the members' birthdays were celebrated at that time and after a dainty luncheon served by Miss Hayes and Mrs. Brome, two birthday cakes were cut and served. Mrs. Boyden is acting as secretary and treasurer pro tem as Mrs. John McNeely who holds that office has been confined to her home for several weeks with a severe case of pneumonia. She is now reported as on the gain daily and the Workers will be glad to welcome her back again after her complete recovery. Mrs. Lund served dainty refreshments at the close of the meeting and it was decided to hold a special meeting the following week to work on patch work and quilts.

The Ladies' Guild of St. Andrew's church are making plans for a sale and supper to be held some time soon.

The Ladies' Mission Circle of the Baptist church will meet with Mrs. Albert Haydon of Margerie street on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Elmer Mulkin is to be the leader and the subject for this meeting will be Japan. The circle is packing a barrel with clothing which is to be sent to Mather School, Beaufort, S. Carolina and they are also entering the reading contest again this year. The World Wide Guild, a mission circle of the young women of the church, met recently with Miss Minnie Quinley. During the evening much sewing was accomplished and a substantial sum was reported added to the treasury as a result of their Hallowe'en social. The treasurer reported a goodly sum in the treasury which will be used for missionary purposes.

Mr. and Mrs. William Sweet of Central avenue spent the week-end in Springfield, Mass., as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Orell.

GROTON MAN MARRIES NEW ROCHELLE NURSE

The marriage of Loren C. Trask of Groton and Miss Florence S. Quulman of New Rochelle, N. Y., took place at the Evangelical Lutheran church of New Rochelle, Saturday morning. Mr. Trask is employed with a New London firm as service manager. Mrs. Trask was a member of the navy nurse corps. After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Trask will make their home at 41 Rogers street, New London.

The woman who could refrain from talking when she had nothing to say would be unusual.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. I have since passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell but will gladly tell information about how you may find a complete cure without operation if you write to me. Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 239 M Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

BUS LINES THROUGH WILLIMANTIC AND PUTNAM MEET OPPOSITION

Four more applications of the New England Transportation company for bus lines between Hartford and the Rhode Island state line by different routes were heard Monday by the public utilities commission at the state capitol, at Hartford. The Hartford-Willimantic Bus company, represented by former Attorney General W. A. King, and the Blue Ribbon company, led the opposition by the existing independent bus companies. E. J. Kelly represented the Interstate Busses corporation. Patrick Healey, the Connecticut Motor Stage association, Arthur L. Shipman is special council for the bus companies.

The applications follow:

Interstate Busses corporation, a route between Hartford and the Rhode Island state line at East Killingly en route to Providence; the New England Transportation company, from Hartford to the Rhode Island state line by way of Willimantic, Abington, Pomfret, Putnam, Thompson, North Grosvenordale en route to Worcester; New England Transportation company, from Hartford to Rhode Island state line by way of Willimantic, Hampton, South Killingly en route to Providence; New England Transportation company, Hartford to Rhode Island state line, by way of Manchester, Willimantic, Plainfield, Moosup, Sterling en route to Providence; and the New England Transportation company, from Hartford to Rhode Island state line, by way of Willimantic, Putnam en route to Boston.

Three of the four New Haven road's applications were opposed by existing bus companies who are affected. The fourth, the route by way of Manchester, is unopposed. The three applications were heard together.

Judge Edward M. Yeomans of Andover spoke in favor of the applications as did Mayor Hickey of Willimantic and Secretary De Coudres of the Putnam Chamber of Commerce.

Albert S. Price, traffic manager of the New England Transportation company, explained in detail the bus and fare schedule proposed, the fares based upon present rail fares.

The New Haven road is prepared to substitute busses whenever it is found necessary to discontinue trains, Mr. Price said. He declared the mixed train leaving Putnam at 8.30 a. m. for Willimantic may be discontinued and a bus may run in its place if this happens, holders of commutation tickets and pupil tickets will be allowed to use them in the bus, which will accept railroad tickets as fare. Arrangements are being made also to handle through baggage by motor coach as is done on trains.

Passengers will be carried by coach from the Willimantic railroad station to the Hartford railroad station.

The Hartford-Boston route takes in the following places: Manchester, Bolton, Andover, Hop River, Willimantic, North Windham, Chaplin, Phoenixville, Abington, Pomfret, Putnam and into Rhode Island to Boston. However, stops will not be made between these points.

Mr. Price explained in detail the plans of co-ordination of existing rail and the proposed bus service, and announced that forty more motor coaches are ready to be launched into service and sixty operators, all present employes of the New Haven road, are prepared to go to the wheel if the applications are granted.

Thirty witnesses were present to testify for the New Haven road.

FALL OF JERUSALEM SHOWN IN PICTURES

Practically every chair was occupied in the large gymnasium of the local Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon when the feature moving picture "The Fall of Jerusalem" was shown in six reels. The meeting was opened with the singing of "Nearer my God to Thee," after which the scripture was read from the book of Joshua, and prayer was offered.

The picture was very realistic, and true to the Bible parrative, showing as it did the weakness of King Zedekiah, controlled by his heathen wife, who with pulls to have the prophet of Jehovah, Jeremiah, slain without success, for God evidently shielded his servant. Jeremiah again warned King Zedekiah of impending doom unless he and his people repented. Finally after a time the treachery of Zedekiah was discovered, and Jerusalem was doomed and finally was overcome, and thus began the seventy years of captivity. Between the reels Secretary Edwin Hill made remarks relative to the historic picture, especially emphasizing the faithfulness and compassion of the prophet, Jeremiah, who, though opposed and threatened nevertheless remained true to God's purpose for him and his people; he urged all present to be compassionate to those who were less fortunate than we are, for many need our compassion.

Hugh Kinder furnished the music and Mr. Danforth of New London operated the machine.

LEFFINGWELL SOCIETY HOLD SALE AND SUPPER

From 5 to 7 Saturday evening the Ladies' Society of the Leffingwell church held a successful supper and sale at the Buckingham. Mrs. S. Clinton Rogers and Mrs. O. B. Leffingwell were in charge of the sale of fancy articles, aprons, Bozrah Balm, jelly and home made candy.

The supper was in charge of Mrs. C. Emil Geoffrey and Miss Ruth J. Ellis. The menu consisted of baked beans ham, potato and cabbage salad, brown bread, rolls, cake and coffee. The waitresses were Mrs. George Wilson and Misses Mildred and Lois Leffingwell, Elsie Beard, Zelda Mowry and Carolyn Beck assisted by Fred and Thomas Leffingwell and Sherman and Eugene Rogers.

Those serving were Mrs. A. H Beebe, Mrs. White and Mrs. Ellis. Mrs. Roy L. Beard sold tickets. The kitchen was in charge of Mrs. N. E. Whiting with the following helpers: Mrs. F. C. Leffingwell, S. W. and F. C. Leffingwell, and N. E. Whiting.

A good sum was realized for the church treasury.

SATISFIED COURT ABOUT HIS AUTOMOBILE REGISTRATION

In the city court Monday morning, a case of violation of the motor vehicle laws against William Lowe, a petty officer stationed at the Coast Guard headquarters, New London, was nolled. Lowe was arrested after he figured in a collision with a machine operated by Herbert Campbell of No. 16 Germania street. The machine bore Pennsylvania markers, and it was thought that it was not properly registered and that Lowe did not have an operator's license. In court Monday Lowe proved that the car was registered and that he has an operator's license. He stated that he has been in this state for about 10 days.

A breach of the peace charge against Joseph Seneski, 38, of this city, was continued for six months. He had trouble with his wife at their home which resulted in his arrest. Three men were fined for intoxication and paid their fine.

Disturbance in a Local Theatre

The patrons of a local show house were very much disturbed and annoyed by the continuous coughing of a person in the audience. Don't be a nuisance because you have a cough or cold. A few doses of FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND taken promptly will bring speedy relief from coughs, colds and hoarseness. Mrs. W. T. Clary, White Plains, Va., writes: "We have used FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND for colds and bad coughs with splendid results." Lee & Osgood Co.

TOY DEPARTMENT OPENED BY THE CRANSTON CO.

The opening of the new toy department by The Cranston company marks an advance move by this progressive business house. The department is located in a room recently fitted up on the lower floor of their store at 25 Broadway. The approach is an easy stairway leading from the main floor at the front. The room is finished to harmonize with the main store and is thoroughly lighted, giving it a most cheerful atmosphere. The purpose of the management is to carry at all times a well assorted stock of toys and shelves and tables give evidence that the public will be well served as the variety is most attractive. The response of the public at the opening on Saturday gave evidence of their appreciation of this move to give Norwich a real all the year round toy store.

The window display for the opening is one of the most artistic and attractive displays ever made in this city and represents "The old woman who lived in a shoe and had so many children she did not know what to do." The scheme is carried out with a huge shoe and a large variety of character dolls. The whole is backed with palms and the hangings of a new crepe paper scheme making a very unusual and most pleasing effect. The window decoration was done by Charles A. Dowsett.

The opening of this new department by this house occurs in the 35th year of its history as the business was established in 1840 by Morgan Safford who as a young man served as post rider carrying periodicals on horseback through New London and Windham counties and conducted the store in his building on Main street now occupied by The Plasmic Co. In the store of Mr. Safford the first office of The Adams Express Co. was located as this company was started in Norwich at the suggestion of Captain Coit to his friend Alfred Adams.

For seventy six years this was the home of the business started by Mr. Safford and the business was kept continuously in his family until the passing of the last member, William B. L. Cranston, in March of this year. Soon after the Civil War Mr. Safford associated with his son-in-law, B. T. Cranston and the firm became M. Safford & Co. to be succeeded at the death of Mr. Safford by Cranston & Co. consisting of B. T. Cranston and his two sons, William B. L. and Thomas H.

In 1914 after the death of his father and brother, William B. L. Cranston associated with him C. "SHORELINERS" ARE OLDEST TRAINS ON NEW HAVEN

The New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad has two through trains between Boston and New York which have been in continuous operation daily almost 66 years. These are known as "The Shoreliner" in each direction. Says Along the Line, a New Haven road publication:

Oldest Trains Running

The "Shoreliner" Nos. 19 and 20, leaving Boston at 12:05 p. m., eastern standard time, due New York at 5:45 p. m. and leaving New York at 12:03 p. m. due Boston 5:45 p. m., are the oldest trains running on the Shore line today. Their first trip was on Monday, December 15, 1859. The story of 19 and 20 is in reality the story of the Shore Line.

The beginning of the present Shore line, originally comprising five railroads, was the Boston and Providence, which was opened from Boston to Readville, June 4, 1834.

The Boston and Providence was extended to Providence in 1835. The present branch from East Junction to India Point being part of the original line. The line from East Junction to Boston switch not being opened until 1848.

Providence to Stonington

The second link in the Shore line was the New York, Providence and Boston, opened from Providence to Stonington in 1837.

In 1848 the gap in Providence between the Boston and Providence and the New York, Providence and Boston roads was closed by the opening of the first union station, thus making a through all rail line from Boston to Stonington.

Third Link

The third link in the Shore line was the New York and New Haven railroad from New Haven to New York. The New York and New Haven railroad was chartered June 10, 1844. Surveys were commenced in September, 1844 Construction began in May, 1847, and the road was opened from New Haven to Williamsbridge, N. Y., then a town in Westchester county, on December 29, 1848. The first offices of the company were at 1 Hanover street, New York, and the first station was at 29 Canal street, near Broadway. By an agreement dated March 17, 1846, the Harlem railroad tracks were to be used into the city of New York. The first agreement with the Harlem road has been modified in the course of years by four supplementary agreements dated December 31, 1886, July 14, 1897, August 17, 1898, and March 23, 1899, but all are based on the original contract of March 17, 1846.

Business on the New York and New Haven increased so rapidly that a second track was begun in October, 1850, and finished in March, 1853. On July 15, 1857 the road moved from 29 Canal street to a joint station with the Harlem road at Fourth avenue and 27th street, and it was from this station that the first through train left for Boston via Shore line, which is today No. 20 The New Haven first entered the Grand Central on November 21, 1872.

Link to New London

The next link in the Shore line was the New Haven and New London railroad opened from New Haven to Connecticut river station in Saybrook July 6, 1852, and through to New London on July 22, 1852.

The name of this road was changed to New Haven, New London and Stonington in 1856 and in an old time table of 1858 the announcement is made that a "steamer runs daily between New London, Stonington and Mystic, to and from mid-day trains, connecting with trains from Stonington to Providence."

Much Changing Cars

Thus by 1858 it was possible to ride over the Shore line from New York to Boston by changing cars at New Haven, New London, Stonington and Providence, with the boat ride from New London to Stonington thrown in for good measure.

The last gap of 12 miles from New London to Stonington was closed in 1859 by the opening of the New London and Stonington railroad, which was operated by the New York, Providence and Boston. At that time the stations between Providence and New London were: Warwick, Greenwich, Wickford, Kingston, Carolina, Richmond Switch, Charlestown, Westerly, Stonington, Mystic, West Mystic, Groton and New London (by ferry). With the closing of the last gap in the Shore line came the first through train that is today 19 and 20.

First Conductors

Ira R. Philbrick was the first conductor between Boston and Providence. On Aug. 17, 1861, another through train, known as the night mail, was put on, which is now the "Owl." George W. Sweet was the first conductor of this train out of Boston.

The mid-day express left Boston at 11:10 a. m. until 1874 when the time was changed to 11:45 a. m. The first trip out of Boston at 1 p. m. of what is now No. 19 was on Nov. 1, 1875, due in New York at 5:15 p. m. The first trip out of New York at 1 p. m. of what is now No. 20 was on May 10, 1873; previous to that it had left on the original schedule at 12:15 p. m.

David O. Clark became conductor of the train in October, 1865, succeeding Ira R. Philbrick, and ran it between Boston and Providence for many years. He was one of the best known conductors on the old Boston and Providence railroad, and pensioned. Conductor Thomas J. Ambrose, one of his brakemen years ago, speaks of him in the highest terms.

Name Becomes Shore Line

June 1, 1866, the name New Haven, New London and Stonington railroad was changed to Shore Line railway, and on Nov. 1, 1870, this road was leased to the New York and New Haven. July 24, 1872, the New York and New Haven, and the Hartford and New Haven roads entered into an agreement for the merger and consolidation of the two companies as the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. This agreement was duly ratified by the stockholders of both companies and was finally effected on Aug. 6, 1872.

Schedule Reduced

Throughout all these changes the schedule of what is now 19 and 20 never varied. In the early 80's the time out of New York was changed to 3 p. m. and for several years the train left New York at that time. In 1888 the Boston and Providence became the Providence division of the Old Colony. In 1889 there were three important changes affecting the train, the Thames river bridge was completed, the schedule was reduced to six hours and a half, and a dining car was placed in service between Boston and New London. This was the second train on the Shore line to have a diner. The first was the Gilt Edge.

In 1893 the New Haven acquired the New York, Providence and Boston, and in the following year leased the Old Colony, giving to the New Haven system the entire Shore line route. In October, 1895, the Air line limited was placed in service leaving Boston (Park Square station) at 1 p. m. and the time of the "Shoreliner" (called then the "Afternoon Express") was changed to 1:08 p. m. As was the case with the Gilt Edge, despite the fact that a fast limited train ran only three minutes ahead of it, the "Shoreliner's" popularity never waned, and after more than half a century of service it is still rated as one of the heaviest trains on the Shore line. It was changed from the Park square to the South station Sept. 10, 1899. The Air line limited was succeeded by the Knickerbocker in 1902.

June 7, 1914, the time of the "Shoreline" from Boston was changed to 1:05 p. m.

Nine Steel Cars

Today it is a nine car solid steel train composed of a baggage car, smoker, three coaches, three parlor cars, and a diner from Boston to New London. Eastbound a diner from New York to New Haven which runs to New London, on Sundays. On Sundays also there is an extra parlor car out of Boston.

The present conductors of 19 and 20 are Charles W. Merrill and D. J. Shea.

GIVES EXPERIENCES IN COMMUNITY CHEST DRIVES

In view of the preliminary discussions that have been begun in Norwich along the line of a community chest, a bulletin from the American Association for Community Organization, which gives the result of Community Chest campaigns in September and October, will be of interest.

Springfield, Mass., with a population of 148,000 went out for a campaign goal of $306,000 and raised $315,000; Duluth, Minn., with a population of 103,000 went out for a campaign goal of $236,655 and raised $215,089; Fort Wayne, Ind., with a population of 87,000 went out for a campaign goal of $189,563 and raised $202,732; Lansing, Mich., with a population of 59,000 went out for a campaign goal of, $146,000 and raised $146,000; Colorado Springs, Col., with a population of 30,000 went out for a campaign goal of $100,000 and raised $100,000; Raleigh, N. C., with a population of 24,000 went out for a campaign goal of $52,800 and raised $54,000.

Necessary Steps

Describing the steps found necessary by the actual experience of these and other Community Chest cities to insure a successful first Community Chest campaign, the bulletin says:

"The deciding factor will always be the extent to which the proper community spirit exists in the particular community considering the community chest plan. The Community Chest cannot succeed unless it can command the hearty support, both of the social workers (ie. those who, either as volunteers or paid workers, are heading up the social work of your community) and the leading rivers in the community. Since in most places, nearly half of the total community fund must come from persons giving large gifts, it is evident that the success of the money-raising campaign depends upon the extent to which a couple of hundred influential givers agree to support the Community Chest.

"An interval of three or four months if possible, should elapse between the formal organization of the community chest board of directors and the starting of the first campaign for funds. This time will be needed to get financial data from the participating organizations, to assemble the figures on proper budget forms, to have the budgets reviewed by the Community Chest budget committee, to organize the necessary educational publicity and to make the necessary arrangements for the permanent executive staff of the new Community Chest as well as for the first campaign organization.

"If the various steps are taken in the above order, it will probably be found that the influential people in the community come to have an adequate understanding of the principles and methods of the Community Chest and will give it moral and financial support sufficient to assure a successful first campaign—on which all future developments must depend."

INEBRIATES MUST BE SENT TO NORWICH FARM

HARTFORD, Nov. 15—(A. P.)—Inebriates cannot be sentenced to or confined in the Connecticut state hospital for the insane at Middletown and under an opinion to this effect from Attorney General Healy, Mrs. Anna Breslin, of Bridgeport, who was committed nearly a year ago for three years by the Stratford probate court, will be released Wednesday.

The attorney general says that on original commitments of this character, the inebriate farm at the Norwich state hospital is the only place provided in this state for such persons. Under his opinion, he says Mrs. Breslin is illegally confined and should be discharged.

Rev. Mr. Edwards who is reputed to be a gifted speaker, gave an excellent description of his work in the far west, especially Washington, Oregon, and Idaho. Mention was made of the Pioneer workers but much emphasis was laid on the work being accomplished by the workers of today. Young men and women from colleges engaged in the work, they being sent out by Rev. Mr. Edwards to broaden the work and do good in various communities where needed along the line of Sunday schools, social work, etc. This extends as far as lumber camps, frontier fields, as well as having its affects on city suburbs. A Simple Way to lighten cloudy teeth

This remarkable new way, urged by dental authorities, also Firms the Gums... removes the grimy film that clouds and hides the natural beauty of your teeth.

THAT dull, "off-color" teeth can be lightened amazingly, even given dazzling whiteness, now is an accepted dental fact. You can work a transformation in your mouth.

Leading dentists now tell us how to clear grimy teeth, and, at the same time, give firmness and healthy color to delicate gums. A new method that supplants old-type dentifrices. It removes the grimy film that covers teeth and hides their natural beauty.

Just run your tongue across your teeth. And you will feel that film. It is the great enemy of pretty teeth and healthy gums.

It clings to the teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It forms a breeding place for germs. It lays your gums open to bacterial attack, your teeth open to decay. Those germs, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Old-time methods failed in successfully fighting film. So ugly teeth were common. You must remove it. Ordinary brushing won't do it satisfactorily. Under it are the clear, whiter teeth you envy in others.

Now modern science has perfected an effective film combatant, called Pepsodent. It acts to curdle film, then removes it—no harsh grit dangerous to enamel. It firms and protects gums; beautifies teeth quickly and correctly.

Mail coupon for full 10-day tube to try. Or purchase large tube at any drug store. Note the amazing difference in your teeth... in your whole appearance.

BINGHAM FOR SELF-RELIANCE RATHER THAN PATERNALISM

Voicing His Ideas of the Province of Congress, the Senator Declared the States Are Better Qualified Than the Federal Government to Handle Many Problems Now Placed For Solution in Washington—Would Encourage Self-Reliance in Citizens Rather Sanction Acts of Paternalism—Quotes Principles Set Forth by President Coolidge For Guidance of Congress.

HUNTINGTON, Nov. 17—Before the Huntington Republican club here tonight Senator Hiram Bingham gave his conception of the duties of congress, particularly advocating the Connecticut idea of representative government. Senator Bingham said in part:

In a short time now the 69th Congress will convene. Already programs are being discussed. It is evident that the first thing to be done is the passage of the revenue bill. I hope that this new bill will not only reduce the burden of taxation, but will also eliminate some of the unfair and unscientific features of the present law. The spirit in which the new law will be drawn ought to reflect the reaction of the voters in the last presidential election in favor of the Coolidge-Mellon tax program and in opposition to those who through prejudice or ignorance or radical socialistic principles desired a tax program which was intended to hurt capital and capitalists. Everyone who has money in the savings bank or who owns a bond or a few shares of stocks is a capitalist and is interested personally in the economic welfare of the country. Too much of the tax legislation of the past twelve years has been written with the idea that the small capitalist can be benefited by hurting the big capitalist.

Principles of Coolidge.

I trust that the next congress will be guided by the principles set forth by President Coolidge when he said, "The welfare of the weakest and the welfare of the most powerful are inseparably bound together." "The suspension of one man's dividends is the suspension of another man's pay envelope." "Property rights and personal rights are the same thing. The one cannot be preserved if the other be violated. Each man is entitled to his rights and the reward of his service, be they ever so large or ever so small." "Do the day's work. If it be to protect the rights of the weak, do it; if it be to help and benefit a corporation better to serve the people, whatever the opposition, do that."—"Do not expect to build up the weak by pulling down the strong." "We need a broader, firmer faith in the people—a faith that men desire to do right."

It is a great thing to have a leader who is not afraid to be called a standpatter and a reactionary. It is a great thing to realize that at the head of our government today there is a great statesman striving to minister to the welfare of America, striving to represent the deep, silent and abiding convictions of the American people.

Encourage Self-Reliance

It is also my hope that the measures passed in the coming congress may tend to encourage self-reliance in the individual citizen, rather than to strengthen the hands of paternalism. We do not want a paternalistic government. We do not want a benevolent despotism. We do not want to purchase efficiency at the price of freedom. Scientific government of the United States is too expensive when it involves the permanent loss of state sovereignty or state responsibility.

Representative government has been attacked during the past generation by exponents of pure democracy. They favor the Wisconsin idea of government. It is time for us to defend our belief in the "Connecticut idea." namely representative government. It may fairly be called the "Connecticut idea" because it was from Connecticut in the days of Thomas Hooker that free representative government was first established in America. It is fair to speak of it as the "Connecticut idea" because nearly three hundred years ago the people of Connecticut began to live under the first written constitution, which established a complete form of representative government.

I believe that the laws which will be passed will facilitate the swift and powerful administration of justice, not only on the mainland, but in our territorial and insular possessions as well. I do not see any reasons why we are not going to have our individual liberty safeguarded by law and government, as I believe this to be the best way to secure justice and a square deal.

It has been well said that too many laws have been passed and that we are hedged about by law. It has been said that there is too much indiscriminate recourse to legislation. Nearly everyone agrees with this and yet the Washington representatives of many national societies, to which some of us belong, are constantly urged new federal legislation to cure ills which might more properly be attended to by the states. The federal government is literally overloaded with bureaus striving earnestly to carry out legislation in regard to matters which are not properly the concern of the federal government. This has been due largely to our impatience with the slow growth of public opinion in certain parts of the country. Well organized minorities have succeeded by placing their ideas in the statute books while the great mass of the people, busy with their own affairs, have scarcely realized the extent of the pressure which was being brought to bear on their senators and representatives. We have too many laws already. What we need is not more legislation, but more personal development of the religious and spiritual life of the people.

States Should Handle Problems

The states are better qualified than the federal government to handle many problems which are now placed for solution in Washington. Government by the people can only succeed when the people are obliged to take a considerable part in the administration of their public affairs. If they shift the responsibility to the employees of the federal government they are likely to see their power to do things for themselves, if we would keep alive the sturdy Americanism which has made our country great, we must hold fast to the privileges and responsibilities of state sovereignty and state responsibility. We must promote a process of decentralization. We must see to it that the federal government exercises only those powers which are necessary for the existence and proper functioning of our nation and keeps its hand off those measures by which it might, like a benevolent despot, give us better institutions and a more comfortable and luxurious atmosphere. Paternalism produces results which are easily seen to be attractive and desirable. The evil results are more deep seated and less apparent and less conspicuous. The destruction of self-reliance, the stifling of independent thought and action, the dashing of individual initiative and inventiveness, these things are like the waters in the last presidential election in favor of the Coolidge-Mellon tax program and in opposition to those who through prejudice or ignorance or radical socialistic principles desired a tax program which was intended to hurt capital and capitalists. Everyone who has money in the savings bank or who owns a bond or a few shares of stocks is a capitalist and is interested personally in the economic welfare of the country. I trust that the next congress will be guided by the principles set forth by President Coolidge when he said, "The welfare of the weakest and the welfare of the most powerful are inseparably bound together." "The suspension of one man's dividends is the suspension of another man's pay envelope." "Property rights and personal rights are the same thing. The one cannot be preserved if the other be violated. Each man is entitled to his rights and the reward of his service, be they ever so large or ever so small." "Do the day's work. If it be to protect the rights of the weak, do it; if it be to help and benefit a corporation better to serve the people, whatever the opposition, do that."—"Do not expect to build up the weak by pulling down the strong." "We need a broader, firmer faith in the people—a faith that men desire to do right."

It is a great thing to have a leader who is not afraid to be called a standpatter and a reactionary. It is a great thing to realize that at the head of our government today there is a great statesman striving to minister to the welfare of America, striving to represent the deep, silent and abiding convictions of the American people.

Encourage Self-Reliance

It is also my hope that the measures passed in the coming congress may tend to encourage self-reliance in the individual citizen, rather than to strengthen the hands of paternalism. We do not want a paternalistic government. We do not want a benevolent despotism. We do not want to purchase efficiency at the price of freedom. Scientific government of the United States is too expensive when it involves the permanent loss of state sovereignty or state responsibility.

Representative government has been attacked during the past generation by exponents of pure democracy. They favor the Wisconsin idea of government. It is time for us to defend our belief in the "Connecticut idea." namely representative government. It may fairly be called the "Connecticut idea" because it was from Connecticut in the days of Thomas Hooker that free representative government was first established in America. It is fair to speak of it as the "Connecticut idea" because nearly three hundred years ago the people of Connecticut began to live under the first written constitution, which established a complete form of representative government.

I believe that the laws which will be passed will facilitate the swift and powerful administration of justice, not only on the mainland, but in our territorial and insular possessions as well. I do not see any reasons why we are not going to have our individual liberty safeguarded by law and government, as I believe this to be the best way to secure justice and a square deal.

It has been well said that too many laws have been passed and that we are hedged about by law. It has been said that there is too much indiscriminate recourse to legislation. Nearly everyone agrees with this and yet the Washington representatives of many national societies, to which some of us belong, are constantly urged new federal legislation to cure ills which might more properly be attended to by the states. The federal government is literally overloaded with bureaus striving earnestly to carry out legislation in regard to matters which are not properly the concern of the federal government. This has been due largely to our impatience with the slow growth of public opinion in certain parts of the country. Well organized minorities have succeeded by placing their ideas in the statute books while the great mass of the people, busy with their own affairs, have scarcely realized the extent of the pressure which was being brought to bear on their senators and representatives. We have too many laws already. What we need is not more legislation, but more personal development of the religious and spiritual life of the people.

States Should Handle Problems

The states are better qualified than the federal government to handle many problems which are now placed for solution in Washington. Government by the people can only succeed when the people are obliged to take a considerable part in the administration of their public affairs. If they shift the responsibility to the employees of the federal government they are likely to see their power to do things for themselves, if we would keep alive the sturdy Americanism which has made our country great, we must hold fast to the privileges and responsibilities of state sovereignty and state responsibility. We must promote a process of decentralization. We must see to it that the federal government exercises only those powers which are necessary for the existence and proper functioning of our nation and keeps its hand off those measures by which it might, like a benevolent despot, give us better institutions and a more comfortable and luxurious atmosphere. Paternalism produces results which are easily seen to be attractive and desirable. The evil results are more deep seated and less apparent and less conspicuous. The destruction of self-reliance, the stifling of independent thought and action, the dashing of individual initiative and inventiveness, these things are like the

MINE WORKERS READY TO NEGOTIATE CONTRACT

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—The anthracite mine workers stand ready to negotiate a new wage contract "in a spirit of compromise and give and take," said John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers, in a statement tonight. They also stand ready, he said, to meet the operators "in amicable negotiations to work out a contract for from one to five years continuous operation of the mines."

Mr. Lewis' statement, described by him as a clarifying statement of the miners' position, was issued, he said, in reply to various statements made by the operators. In the statement, Mr. Lewis said that the operators now propose to scrap the principle of collective bargaining and have the miners agree blindly to work at wage rates to be fixed by other persons to be called by the catchy phrase of "arbitration board."

"The reason for suspension of anthracite mining since September 1st is not correctly or truly stated in the public statements of the operators. The truth is that the miners presented on July 9th their proposals as the basis of a new contract to be effective for continuous mining after September 1st. The operators declined all of these proposals and proposed an arbitration of the rate of wages to be paid the man, coupled with a proposal that the men continue at the then wages until the arbitration was concluded.

"The miners replied that there was plenty of time to negotiate a contract in a spirit of give and take and compromise. This proposal was declined by the operators and since that the operators have declined, and still decline, to negotiate with the miners for the purpose of making a contract by mutual concessions.

"Both sides to the controversy have always proceeded by collective bargaining to work out a contract and the miners insist that this is their only safety in dealing with their collective employers.

"Whenever the representatives of the operators are willing to meet the representatives of the miners in amicable negotiations to work out a contract for from one to five years' continuous operation of the mines, the miners stand now and have been prepared to meet them."

CLYDE LINE STEAMER LENAPE AFIRE OFF NEW JERSEY COAST

Old Dominion Liner Hamilton and Coast Guard Cutter Seneca are Speeding to Rescue—Lenape Speeding For Delaware Breakwater.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17—Speeding toward land and safety with about 200 passengers aboard the steel steamer Lenape, fifth of the Clyde line to be menaced by fire within recent years, was ablaze tonight eight miles southeast of Five Fathom light.

The Lenape was reported heading toward Delaware breakwater in a race for life and half a dozen ships within a radius of 100 miles were converging towards her in a concerted effort to prevent a recurrence of the fire a month ago in which the Commanche, another Clyde liner, was burned to the water line.

Early reports told that at the time the Lenape sent out its S. O. S. calls, the Old Dominion liner Hamilton was only fourteen miles from the scene of the fire. The coast guard cutter Seneca was thirty miles away and several other ships were reported heading toward the Lenape from varying distances.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Nov. 17—D. C. Stephenson sentenced Monday to life imprisonment for the murder of Miss Madge Oberholtzer of Indianapolis, may be taken to the state prison at Michigan City tomorrow, it was said at the sheriff's office today.

Stephenson was still cheerful and confident that he would gain a new trial and subsequently be freed. Miss Oberholtzer swallowed poison after an alleged abduction and attack last March. Stephenson was held responsible for her act.

Earl Klenck and Early Gentry, co-defendants with Stephenson, who were acquitted for the murder charge and arrested on indictments charging conspiracy to commit a felony, were taken to Indianapolis last night by Otner Hawkins, Marion county sheriff. The indictments grew out of the burning of Stephenson's suburban home at Indianapolis last April. Attorneys took steps to raise $10,000 bond for each man.

Story of Plot For Revolution in Italy

Fascist Journals Allege That Garribaldi Had Made Preparations For a Military Coup.

VIENNA, Nov. 17—Garibaldian legions were to have landed in Tuscany from Corsica upon the receipt of news of Premier Mussolini's assassination and would have had the support of Italians under Colonel Ricciotti Garibaldi who were training somewhere near the Italian border—such is the fascist version of how the movement against Premier Mussolini would have been carried out if former Deputy Zaniboni's plan to shoot the premier had not been frustrated.

Opposition newspapers in Italy have been generally suppressed, and even the fascist papers have published comparatively few official statements of the world wide plot which they alleged had been concocted for the purpose of upsetting both the italian and Spanish governments, but a responsible traveler who has reached Vienna from Italy has made known much concerning such a plot that apparently is general knowledge in Italy.

This traveller says that the fascist journals allege that Ricciotti Garibaldi had the assistance of his brother Santo in making military preparations for such a coup, and that General Peppino Garibaldi, another brother, was interested originally in their plans but became tired of political intrigue last May and went to the United States. A fourth Garibaldi brother, Ezio, is an ardent supporter of Mussolini and seems destined to attain high office in his regime.

The traveller says that the former socialist deputy, Alceste de Ambris, is charged by the fascists with being the soul of a plot directed from Paris and supported by funds raised by General Luigi Capello, arrested at the same time as Zaniboni. General Capello is alleged to have held frequent interviews with Domizio Torrigiana, grand master of the Masonic order in Italy. The fascist newspapers say that Zaniboni was only an intermediary between the domestic opposition to Premier Mussolini and the Italian exiles in Paris.

The fascists, according to the traveler's accounts are still continuing their searches of Masonic lodge rooms in Italy and the Italian colonies and even searching the homes of prominent members of the order.

MRS. LANSDOWNE WAS AN UNWILLING WITNESS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Driving along a storm swept course, the Shenandoah naval court of inquiry got under way today on investigation into the charge that its original judge advocate, Captain Paul Foley, had sought to sway the testimony of one of its witnesses.

Before it won to smooth waters, Joseph E. Davies, counsel for Mrs. Margaret Rose Lansdowne, widow of the Shenandoah commander and the witness in question, twice had been forcibly ejected from the room by a marine guard when he insisted on being heard, and Mrs. Lansdowne herself had refused to testify concerning her charge against Captain Foley, made before the Mitchell court martial.

After the court had ignored her refusal, she proceeded to answer questions, and was on the stand for more than three hours. In that time, she renewed some of her charges, denied many of the statements attributed to her in published interviews, and insisted that Commander Zachary Lansdowne, his husband, had protested against using the Shenandoah on what proved to be its fatal flight.

Meanwhile Captain Foley had formally been made a party defendant before the court and had taken his place at the bar with his counsel, James S. Easby-Smith. He expects to take the stand tomorrow to give his version of his interview with Mrs. Lansdowne and the circumstances of his preparing and sending to her the celebrated statement she was to make to the Shenandoah court. It was these incidents which formed the basis of her charge.

WARNS BUSINESS AGAINST SPECULATION AND INFLATION

BOSTON, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—America's healthy business condition stands in danger of being transformed into one of speculation and inflation, A. C. Miller, federal reserve board member and widely known economist, declared here tonight, with a warning that the time has come to apply conservatism to business plans.

Speaking before New England's banking and industrial leaders at the Commerce club, he asserted that never before had such a surplus of floating credit been available in excess of the requirements of commerce, agriculture and industry. In this situation, he saw potential difficulties and declared that the federal reserve banks now should hold true to the course plotted for them and refuse to stand as life preservers for speculators.

Asserting that a considerable volume of credit had been absorbed in land speculation in some parts of the country and speculative building operations in others, he described these as some of the dangerous spots in the present situation.

HOOD BELIEVED WIFE'S MIND WAS UNBALANCED

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Walter M. Hood, Birmingham lawyer and husband of Mrs. Florence Manly Hood today expressed the belief that his wife's mind was unbalanced when she swallowed poison here early Sunday morning.

Mrs. Hood came to Chicago and registered at a hotel with John O. Cashin of Chicago as Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hood. She died from poisoning after a liquor party with Cashin and the husband said he believed she had swallowed poison while under the influence of liquor.

Hood said he did not desire to make any charges against Cashin and expressed the opinion that there was no impropriety in the relations of Cashin and his wife. The latter had come here to obtain an apartment pending the removal of the Hood family to Chicago. Hood said his family life had been happy and that his wife had always been of a cheerful disposition and was very much attached to an eight year old daughter by former marriage. Hood's statement was made to assistant state's attorneys with whom he conferred.

To Facilitate the Shipment of Coal

New England Shippers' Advisory Board Appeals For Quick Release of Open-Top Coal Cars.

BOSTON, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—An urgent appeal for the quick release of open top coal cars in order that an adequate supply of cars may be furnished the bituminous coal fields for the shipment of soft coal to New England will be sent to coal dealers and consumers in all parts of New England by the coal and coke committee of the New England Shippers' advisory board, the committee announced today.

The committee, in calling upon carriers and consignees to handle coal cars without delay, said: "We cannot too strongly emphasize the necessity for prompt release of this equipment if the uninterrupted car supply is to be maintained in the bituminous field."

At the same time it was announced that the car service division of the American Railway association has asked the New England railroads to give special attention to the movement of open top cars and has requested that a daily report be made to their district manager in Boston of any cars held at destination in excess of 48 hours for any consignee. As a result of the anthracite shortage there has been an increasing volume of bituminous coal into New England since September 1, all rail. Because the length of haul on this coal to New England is greater than on anthracite, the committee said, a considerably greater number of cars are required to move the same volume.

SPEEDING PROCEEDINGS OF MITCHELL COURTMARTIAL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—Termination of the Mitchell court-martial trial early in December was predicted today by counsel for the defense and prosecution. Both informed the court that they expected to conclude presentation of their cases by that time, and the speed with which the trial went forward today after a three-day recess indicated real desire to carry out that plan.

Five witnesses were heard and excused, three more than were disposed of at the tribunal's last session and comparing favorably with the progress that marked the earlier stages of the trial. Each of the witnesses, Lieutenant Donald G. Duke, air service headquarters; Reed G. Landis, of Chicago; Lieutenant Victor E. Bertrandie, McCook Field, Dayton, Ohio, and Captain Willis H. Hale and Major H. M. Hickam, of Langley Field, Va., testified in support of the general published charges. Colonel William Mitchell has made against the air service administrations, some of which form the basis of his trial, for insubordination.

Colonel Sherman Moreland, chief prosecutor, had his staff reinforced today, Major Frank R. Wilby, of the general staff, war department, and Major Allen Guillion, of the judge advocate general's office, were designated assistant trial judge advocates. Colonel Moreland yielding the main part of the cross examination to Major Wilby and to Lieutenant Colonel Joseph McMullen, his first assistant.

The proceedings threatened several times to lead to a forced decision by the court on the question of evidence. The court itself manifested a desire to settle the question and asked through its law member, Colonel Blanton Winship, for a decision on that point.

Representative Frank R. Reid, protested in behalf of his client each time, however, saying that the appropriate time for a ruling on evidence had not arrived but could be properly taken up when the evidence in rebuttal was started, and his opinion prevailed.

HEARING ON CHAPMAN HABEAS CORPUS NOV. 25

HARTFORD, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—United States District court will be held at the state prison at Wethersfield on November 25 by Federal Judge Edwin S. Thomas for the hearing on the petition of Gerald Chapman for a writ of habeas corpus, if the motion which state's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn intends to make before Judge Thomas, Thursday is successful. This was revealed today when a rumor to that effect in Hartford was confirmed by Mr. Alcorn.

The purpose of the motion is to obviate the necessity of bringing Chapman from the state prison in Wethersfield to the federal building in the center of Hartford, and to eliminate the probability that a great crowd would be on hand to see the notorious bandit. A further purpose is to minimize the danger of escape of the bandit, who now stands within sixteen days of the execution of the death sentence for the murder of a New Britain policeman.

Counsel for Chapman intend to make application to Judge Thomas, Thursday for the production of Chapman for the issuance of a writ of habeas corpus for the hearing on November 25. Though the required eight days will not have elapsed between the time of the application and the hearing, this requirement will be waived by the state.

The hearing will test out whether Chapman must serve out the twenty-five year sentence imposed on him by a federal court for the mail robbery in New York in 1921, or whether the state can proceed to execute him for the New Britain murder. It will be held in the room used by the board of pardons if Mr. Alcorn's motion is granted.

NO CHARTER FOR ANY ELKS LODGE THAT VIOLATES LAW

Declaration Made by Grand Exalted Ruler Atwell—Believes That the Small Percentage of Lodges That Have Failed to Observe Laws Are Now Discontinuing All Acts That Are Improper—Comment Made About Rumor That Every Elk Sign a Pledge to Refrain From Taking Liquor to Lodge Property.

WICHITA FALLS, Texas, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Violation of any law will prevent an Elks' Lodge in the United States having a charter, Judge William H. Atwell to the North Texas United States' court and grand exalted ruler of the lodge said today. Judge Atwell was commenting about a report that a movement was on foot demanding that every member of the order sign a pledge to refrain from taking liquor to lodge property or drop membership.

"No Elks' lodge in the United States which violates any law, not necessarily the national prohibition act, can have a charter during my term of office," Judge Atwell said.

The grand ruler said he believed that fully ninety five per cent of the 1,482 lodges are lay abiding in every sense, and added:

"I further believe that the small percentage of lodges that have thoughtlessly failed to observe the laws are now discounting any acts that are improper."

Judge Atwell said he was keeping in touch with an incident in which it was reported the district attorney's office had been instrumental in having a padlock placed on a portion of a lodge quarters in New York and reserved action until he was advised fully.

EASTERN REGIONAL CONFERENCE OF Y. M. C. A.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Forty seven delegates, most of them Young Men's Christian association physical directors or industrial secretaries this afternoon, gathered in the living room of the Lapham Field house near the Yale bowl for the opening session of the association's eastern regional conference on industrial health and recreation.

"The industrial field," was the general topic considered at the afternoon session, which was presided over by F. J. Kingsbury, chairman of the association's Connecticut state industrial committee and a New Haven manufacturer.

R. R. Rhodes, industrial secretary of the New Haven Y. M. C. A., sounded the keynote by outlining briefly the health and recreational problem of industry.

He was followed by Dr. H. T. Foster, of the Brooklyn central, the largest Y. M. C. A. in the United States. Dr. Foster, emphasized its necessity for recreation if industrial workers were to keep well, happy andefficient.

"They don't know how to play," he said was what an observer wrote a few years ago, following a trip through the mining and factory towns in the coal region. "What an indictment that is," he said, adding that now, thanks to the industrial work of the Y. M. C. A., conditions have changed, so that the traveler sees volley ball nets in the mill towns and even far back among the mountains.

Pointing to the fact that latest census returns show that more than 50 per cent. of the country's population is classed as industrial, he told his hearers that 160,000 of the association's 1,000,000 members came from the industries. Through its extension work, it reached hundreds of thousands of non-members.

FOR THOSE WHO CARE WHAT THEIR MONEY BUYS

Dodge Brothers, Inc. have always built a good, sound, long-lived product.

They have never built "yearly models" and never will.

They do not make frequent expensive changes simply to catch the whim of the hour.

On the contrary, they devote themselves steadfastly to the improvement of a car that has been good from the very beginning.

This process of improvement has now been going on for 11 years.

Its influence on the car's appearance and performance has been nothing short of remarkable.

Always eminently dependable, it is now also an exceptionally easy riding car.

Always up-to-date, it is now strikingly attractive.

Style and smartness stand out in every line.

Sheer logic never made the choice more obvious—

DANIELSON

JOHN FARRAGUT, BROOKLYN, HAD PICTURESQUE CAREER
(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 17—John Farragut is sleeping his last sleep. Bearer of an illustrious name in the naval annals of the United States, John was born of slave parents at Norfolk, Va., and was believed to have been about 85. He died during Monday night in Brooklyn, where he has lived since the close of the Civil war. The body was brought to the undertaking rooms of E. E. Kennedy in Danielson.

Mr. Farragut was a figure in the community life of Brooklyn. No celebration in that historic township was complete, were there a parade with drum corps or band, unless John, as he was familiarly known to everyone, was in the midst of it, beating his drum. He was a hewer of wood or a carrier of water as occasion offered, and ever and always a trustworthy and trusted worker. All who knew him had a kindly feeling toward him and he was deserving of the deference shown him.

Mr. Farragut often related that he was born in what he described as the old Indian Queen house at Norfolk. He was a youth at the outbreak of the Civil war and as soon as opportunity offered attached himself to the Union army, serving Colonel T. J. Burpee of Connecticut as a personal orderly. He was with Colonel Burpee when the latter was shot at Cold Harbor.

Later when Captain George Shepherd, of Central Village, was allowed a leave of absence to recover from illness, John Farragut came north to care for him. He returned to service as an orderly with the Union army in the south, remaining in that capacity until the close of the war.

The end of the fighting found John Farragut headed north again. He located in Brooklyn, finding much to do and applying himself to his work. After seven years he went south and brought his mother to Brooklyn, caring for her until she died.

For a number of years Mr. Farragut drove a mail stage between Brooklyn and Pomfret. He could neither read nor write, never having had an opportunity to learn before he grew to manhood, but letters handed to him in a given order for delivery to persons along the mail route never failed to reach the proper person. He had an uncanny memory for such matters.

Mr. Farragut regularly attended the Baptist church in Brooklyn. Rev. Geo. F. Genung, one time pastor of a church and incidentally a clever artist, painted a portrait of Mr. Farragut, who died respected by those who had known him all the years of his residence in Brooklyn. An evidence of the esteem in which he was held was noted Tuesday, when a beautiful floral piece came for his casket from a woman who had known him in Brooklyn for many years.

WINDHAM CO. AGL. SOCIETY BEGINS YEAR WITH BALANCE
(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 17—Once again the Windham county Agricultural society has elected its officers for another year. The organization is the financial efficient one. The new officers entered on the duties of their office with a balance of $1901.54 in the treasury, which will be increased by $500 allowed the agricultural society for the above ensuing a total surplus of upwards of $2400.

The new officers are: President, Arthur H. Gallup, Scotland; first vice president, Earl Andrews, Woodstock; second vice president, Lester Wilson, Brooklyn; third vice president, F. W. Page, Killingly; treasurer, Walter Potter, Brooklyn; secretary, Marshall J. Frink, Brooklyn; auditors, Oscar F. Atwood, R. B. Witter, F. E. Mowry, all of Brooklyn; executive committee, Brooklyn, Charles E. Hyde, Scotland, Harry P. Chesbro, Pomfret, F. W. Cunningham, Canterbury, Christian Kerr, Chaplin, W. B. Gallup, Eastford, Orlo E. Carpenter, Windham, George A. Cook, Plainfield, Walter Lathrop, Killingly, Rev. C. A. Downs, Putnam, Luther M. Keith, Sterling, George H. Gallup, Woodstock, W. C. Child, Thompson, Chas Whiting, Ashford, Fred Wright.

Officers in the women's department are: President, Mrs. Earl Andrews, Woodstock; first vice president, Mrs. H. B. Covell, Pomfret; third vice president, Mrs. J. Dyer Potter, Brooklyn; secretary, Mrs. A. E. Williams, Brooklyn; executive committee, Miss Helen L. Witter, Brooklyn; Mrs. Hiram Hawes, Canterbury; Mrs. Winslow Gallup, Chaplin; Mrs. William Gardner, Plainfield; Mrs. S. P. Humphrey, Killingly; Mrs. N. C. Cleveland, Hampton; Mrs. Archie Gallup, Scotland; Mrs. John O. Fox, Putnam; Mrs. Mary Gallup, Sterling; Mrs. E. P. White, Pomfret; Mrs. C. F. Whiting, Thompson; Mrs. Frank Martin, Windham; superintendents of buildings, Mrs. Scott Tripp, Killingly, Mrs. George Witter, Brooklyn; entry clerks Mrs. C. S. Hyde, Mrs. A. E. Williams, Brooklyn.

Frank W. Martin, Scotland, who has been president of the Agricultural society the past three years, was re-elected at the annual meeting, but declined to serve. It was with regret that the association accepted his declination to serve, as he has been an excellent president and the society has held uniformly successful fairs and prospered during the years that he has been in the presidency.

The annual meeting voted to present as a special bonus $35 in addition to their premiums to each grange that had an exhibit at the annual fair of the society in September, also voted to give each Ladies' Aid society that exhibited at the September fair a bonus of $10 in addition to the regular premiums. Incidentally, the premiums this year amounted to $300 more than the premiums at the fair in 1924, this indicating a greater number of exhibits, filling all departments of the show. The premiums this year outside the speed classes amounted to $1767.45. There were 32 horses on the fair grounds for the speed classes this year, while the cattle show attracted 150 head.

The annual reports show that a considerable amount was expended the past year for permanent improvements at the fairgrounds. An expenditure of $1832.47 represents improvements made to the buildings, installing an electric lighting system and work on the fence around the grounds. Further improvements are contemplated during the coming year.

The fair association is pointing toward having a larger exhibition each year. This is entirely possible, as the Brooklyn fair grounds is in an ideal location to attract a much larger attendance than the crowds that have already made it one of the favorite fairs of southern New England.

Windham county is constantly becoming more and more important agriculturally. Its dairy interests, and its poultry interests are big assets. All of these things have served to interest the society in having a larger fair and attracting more people than have yet attended an exhibition there. It is a foregone conclusion that this can be done.

At the home of his son, Wallace Pond, President Avenue, Providence, Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock, funeral services were conducted by Rev. Clarence M. Gallup, D. D., for Theodore D. Pond, for many years a resident of Brooklyn. The body was brought to the South cemetery in Brooklyn for burial. The bearers were Wallace L. Theodore H. and William Pond and Ralph P. Bennett. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Another well pleased audience saw the second and final presentation of All Aboard, under the auspices of the American legion at the Orpheum theatre Tuesday evening. Indications Tuesday were that all of the forms will have been built, the metal re-enforcing material in place and everything ready at the new bridge which the state is building over the Assawaga river in Main street so that the concrete pouring can be done either Thursday or Friday of this week. The entire structure will be poured in one day if good luck is experienced and there are no unlooked for delays. After the new concrete has been allowed to set for two or three days the railing, of concrete, on the north side will be built and the southly side also built up. There is to be only one sidewalk on the bridge, this along the north side. The new bridge will have a considerable wider roadway than the one it has replaced.

It was indicated Tuesday that the N. H. & H. and H. R. R. company is to operate bus lines through Danielson on the route between Providence, Brooklyn, Willimantic and Hartford. Name Not a Guarantee

Do not be misled by the name on a violin, as it frequently happens that it is not the maker's name. If it is a well-known violin maker's name, it implies that the instrument is a model of his, made in the same style, but the name is not a guarantee that the fiddle is one of his own make.

"SILPH" New Chewing Gum REDUCES FAT

SAFELY AND EASILY

"Chew Silph and be Sylph-Like"

Lulu McConnell, famous Broadway star, says "Silph is just the thing to get that slender figure"

IS NEW YORK'S LATEST SLOGAN

That a group of medical men have at last found a remarkable way to reduce fat people is admitted by those who have tried Silph Reducing Gum — to be able to take off several pounds a week by simply chewing two or three pieces a day of a pleasant, refreshing gum is conceded to be a miracle of science — Long ago it was discovered that certain sea plants and vegetable extracts had a wonderful and absolutely safe effect to do away with fatty tissues and relieve stomach and intestinal troubles, but until recently only limited quantities of these extracts were available — It took the combined efforts of a group of scientists to work out a satisfactory formula incorporating these extracts in a pleasant chewing gum to satisfy a public demand, at last they have succeeded and Silph is the only chewing gum we know of which contains the extracts of these plants and is now offered to every fat man or woman at a price within the reach of all.

If you are too FAT you want to reduce but you want to do it in a safe way and not injure your health—Silph is guaranteed not to contain any dangerous drugs of chemicals—no thyroid—It is made up from vegetable and sea plant extract which are assimilated by the system through the flow of saliva—all you need to do to take off those excess pounds is to chew two or three pieces of this most delicious and refreshing chewing gum every day for a little while and you will soon notice a new beauty and slenderness in your figure. Not only will Silph reduce you but it is the greatest health tonic we can recommend—Fills you with PEP and ENERGY! Silph Reducing Gum sells for 50c. a box; if your druggist cannot supply you you can buy it direct from the Silph Medical Company, 9 West 60th St., New York City—If you send in a dollar we will send you Prepaid a two full weeks supply—It's enough to see wonderful results.

INSTRUCTIONS ABOUT SUBSTITUTES

The president of the coal miners is going to be greatly disappointed unless the coal consumers receive the awakening which they have been promised by him. He is not going to be satisfied unless they experience the hardships that go with a shortage of coal, a shortage which he seems to take pride in contributing to and which he gleats over as being inevitable. His stand in this respect is for the purpose of getting public sentiment to cry out in behalf of the miners.

In one of his latest statements, he is endeavoring to frighten the public away from the use of bituminous coal as a substitute for anthracite, by telling them that it is dangerous.

It is certain that there is not sufficient hard coal available to meet all the requirements of the coal consumers this winter. Substitutes have got to be used and substitutes are available. There are the very small sizes in anthracite, oil, coke and bituminous. The low volatile type of which coal is available in sufficient quantities to meet all public requirements and can be used in the same stoves and heaters as anthracite. If the coal consumers resort to this bituminous it will not help the coal strike, so the miners' president has endeavored to frighten those who have contemplated its use by pointing out its dangers. Because of the position in which this might place coal consumers who were disposed to heed biased advice of this character the bureau of mines has declared the warnings is unwarranted and it points to the almost exclusive use of bituminous in the middle west and beyond.

In a number of cities special attention is being given to the instruction of householders in the use of bituminous coal, and there are not a few instances where dealers and others are carrying on demonstrations for the benefit of the uninformed. This is a most commendable step and inasmuch as it seems inevitable that substitutes of some kind must be used in practically all the cities of the east it is a fitting time for a display of such products and a demonstration of just how they can be employed for the best results. Instructions upon this question are no more than the situation calls for.

AIDED BY DISASTERS

In the movement to bring about the elimination of the submarine it is to be realized that while the Vicountess Astor has the chance to crystalize the sentiment against such a branch of the navy in England at this particular time when a large underwater boat has only recently gone to the bottom it will be necessary to extend the efforts in that direction to all the leading nations of the world.

The United States, Italy and Great Britain are fertile territory just at the present time for advocating an agreement among nations for the abolition of submarines. To this number might also be added Japan, for it has lost more than one submarine within recent months, and it is after such disasters that it is much easier to get thought concentrated upon such a restrictive measure. It can be appreciated that the elimination of submarines by all nations would work no hardship. All nations would stand in the same relative position as to naval strength. It could not be expected that Great Britain, for instance, would agree to build no more unless the same agreement was approved by the others. Neither would any one of the nations be willing to scrap its existing submarines unless the others took a similar stand. It is a case where all must stand on common ground as they did at the Washington conference. Then strong efforts were made to give up the use of underwater boats for war purposes but it was impossible to get an agreement to that effect.

Developments have since taken place which make this a most favorable time for extending the disarmament treaty between the nations. The recent agreement at Locarno demonstrates a different attitude on the part of European nations toward each other and conditions have changed and with this change it is not impossible to believe that those who opposed the abolition of the submarine a few years ago have not changed their minds upon that point also.

From whatever direction it comes the movement for the ending of the submarine as well as other agencies of war is bound to obtain generous support. Disasters have given encouragement to such a movement.

RELIEVE THE INJUSTICES

While there are countries which have complained because their people were excluded from this country under the provisions of our immigration laws which set up quotas for the various countries, there are others which have not sent as many as would be admitted. That means that because some of the quotas were not filled we have not received as many immigrants as we were willing to under the provisions of the restrictive law. There has been a failure to reach the limit by about 4000.

In a study of the immigration situation and the problems arising therefrom Second Assistant Secretary W. W. Husband of the department of labor has come forth with the recommendation to the effect that the immigration authorities be allowed to make use of such leeway in dealing with cases which deserve to be made exceptions to the rule. There are for instance those cases where it becomes necessary to break up families in order to abide by the quotas, or to go through a lot of red tape in order to have these particular matters ruled upon. It is the suggestion of the assistant secretary that the immigration authorities be given the right to make use of the annual shortage in relieving cases which mean hardship. Instead of forcing part of a family to return to Europe, for no other reason than that the quota is exhausted, he would permit such persons to enter and charge them up to the shortage in the quotas of other countries, provided of course that they were able to meet the immigration requirements otherwise. That would result in no more coming in than was intended and would eliminate many of those cases which bring forth much criticism because the letter rather than the spirit of the law seems to be carried out. It would behoove the authorities to see that those seeking admission did not seek to take improper advantage of such a situation, but otherwise the arrangement would appear to be entirely justified and the means of overcoming conditions which the authorities themselves must recognize as deserving of relief through such a step as suggested.

BROADCASTING STATIONS

There are radio fans of long and short standing. There are those who have become familiar with many of the broadcasting stations and who recognize that there are those who provide nothing but the best programmes while there are others of a mediocre character. This is probably better understood by those who have been indulging in radio for some time or who are more discriminating than others, but there's no doubt that most of those who listen in will sympathize with the position taken by Secretary Hoover when, in the recent radio conference, he opposed the useless broadcasting and urged fewer stations and better programmes.

It is the belief of the secretary of commerce that stations which furnish meritorious programmes should be given permits to broadcast but all others should be eliminated. The situation at the present time is indicated by the 578 authorized broadcasting stations and the petitions of 175 more to enter the field.

If all stations were putting forth first class talent there would be difficulty in reducing the number. But they are not. It would not be difficult for the radio fans to pick out those which, because of their programmes, should be allowed to continue and designate those who provide inferior entertainers and whose places should be given up to others who are prepared to furnish first class talent.

It is unfortunate if the best must stand aside for poorer programmes, or if the overcrowded condition with the good and the bad must go on indefinitely. Those who are devoted to radio will naturally feel that for the satisfaction of the greatest number there should be a weeding out and that the air should not be cluttered up with the poor when the best would be available. Too many and too poor cooks spoil the broth.

WASTEFUL PRACTICE

When a speaker before the Safety of Automotive Engineers at Chicago declared that people neglect their automobiles to such an extent that there is an annual waste of $400,000,000 in this country and Canada it is perhaps not surprising, for waste goes on in all directions. It is unfortunate that we are not more mindful of the opportunities of preventing just such waste.

It exists with property, it is daily being shown in regard to money, it is found in household expenses, it is a situation which prevails in regard to farm machinery, it is prevalent in business, it is a characteristic of governments. Perhaps it is too much to expect that the owners of automobiles would devote any greater attention to the checking of waste in regard to their motor vehicle than they would in regard to their other possessions.

There are those who are constantly giving thought and attention to the elimination of waste. This effort finds the automobile owner caring for his car, seeing that it is carefully greased and oiled, that it is kept in good condition and given the benefit of protection against weather conditions so far as possible. Cutting down much of the waste simply means that it is not being neglected, that it is being properly operated and fairly treated. With so many automobiles in the country it is not surprising that it is estimated that so much automobile waste occurs each year. Though they don't seem to realize it such a practice makes good business for the garages and the auto manufacturers.

EDITORIAL NOTES

If we cannot have winter until the reservoirs are full, perhaps there'll be no winter.

These are the days when the roadside stands do a good business disposing of attractive farm produce.

The man on the corner says: Isn't it about time for someone to make a pleasant forecast for the winter?

If you are going to make Santa Claus of the mail carrier, you will have to do it before Christmas day.

Those who are in a position to should do their utmost in lending their cooperation to the fighting of the disease which is raising such havoc among the ruffled grouse.

WHAT THEY SAVE

"The next time I build a house," stated the Hyde Park man with cold finality, "it shall have neither an attic nor a basement. Not a sign of one."

"Cross off the furnace, the guest room and the coat cupboard while you are about it, too," advised the Woodlawn man fervently. "All of them are disrupters of a happy home. Whenever our guests use the coat cupboard, which was our pride and joy when we took the flat, we are up most of the night answering the telephone and doing detective work. If the careless guest hasn't worn away the new overcoat of the pernickety guest he at least has taken one of his overshoes."

"The real gas bomb of the home is the attic," declared the Hyde Park man feelingly, as he sidestepped two giggling flappers. "No matter how many times a year it is cleaned one's wife is in a constant state of exasperation because she goes around saying she positively must clean the attic before the week is out and how is she going to do it when the cleaning woman can't come. Cleaning women never can come when it is the attic they are wanted to clean and thereby they show their good sense.

"Several times I have told Imogene that there was no sense in having nine-tenths of the stuff around that she has in our attic and with malignant sweetness she has said she would be so glad of my advice and help in the matter. No those trunks must stay—one of them has all the winter underwear and the heavy clothes we wear up in the woods in it; and the other belongs to Aunt Jennie, who is in Europe and boards at a hotel. Oh, that packing box over there with stuff dripping over the sides contains a lot of discarded clothes that maybe can be made over and pieces of goods left from ancient dresses. Anyhow, when she gets older she doubtless will want to piece quilts and she certainly is not going to dispose of it.

"Heavens, leave that pile of rolls of wall paper alone! What if a spot appears on that dining-room paper or somebody scrounges a piece out of it the hall where the furs is so narrow?

"Of course, she wants that ton of pasteboard boxes and that pile of wrapping paper! Just like a man! Don't I know that the most maddening thing is to want to wrap up a package and have nothing in the house to put it in or to tie it up with?

"Oh, those things hanging up are those three suits I used to give away—she is waiting to find a deserving case because she does not believe in false modesty. And those magazines—she can't go because she intends some time to make scrapbooks from the covers and the illustrations for children who just love them—no, she doesn't know what children, but she's going to do it anyhow. Those tied-up boxes? Well, she must go through 'em because she can't recall what is in them.

"When we have argued thus far I depart quickly to avoid progressing to a divorce and the next time I go up in the attic it has all those things and a few dozen more—and there never was an attic that didn't! Basements are as bad—I take pride in a shipshape basement and every time I descend into it and view the piles of wobbly newspapers, piles of old magazines, decrepit brooms which a basement always inherits, pails and mops and cases of ginger ale, extra glass cans, ironing boards and whatnot there is an upheaval in my soul. My point is that if there were no basement or attic and no place to put the rubbish there wouldn't be any rubbish. It would go instantly to the deserving who needed it and could use it—"

"Prune sauce!" sniffed the Woodlawn man with extreme cynicism. "Lack of space never stopped a woman from her jackdaw habit of stowing things away and saving unsavable items! Whenever I haul anything down or put anything away in our flat I start a glacial movement of tied-up boxes, bags and packages that grimly runs its inexorable course, completely covering the floor of any room it spills into, and, doggone it, m'wife makes me pick 'em all up an' hand 'em to her, so she can stow 'em away again! Why the minute those girls get to heaven the first question they'll ask is about closet room and is there an attic—it's hopeless!"

"Well, we're born to suffer," agreed his Hyde Park friend.—Chicago News.

From Small Beginnings

"Artemas Ward," the Great Humorist

One of the men who did more than most others to make people laugh was Charles Farrar Browne, who is better known by his pen-name of "Artemas Ward." In the rollicking humor of his pages there is no hint of the hard work that he had to carry on in his boyhood and youth, and no hint of the struggle against poverty and sickness that afflicted him in manhood. "Artemas Ward" was but 33 years old when he died, a victim of tuberculosis, but he left behind his books that have carried his spirit of happy laughter on to the people who came after him.

"Artemas Ward" was born in Waterford, Maine, on the hillside woods village, in 1834. At no time did he have opportunity to gain much education. His father died when the boy was only 13 years old, leaving the little, slender lad to make his own living. From that father, however, "Artemas Ward" inherited the love of the comic, and the ability to see through some of the shams of life, and to point out hypocrisy through the medium of humor. It was that gift that he used so well both in making a living and in establishing his fame.

The boy found work with the printer of a small country newspaper and there learned something of the fascination of type. From one office he drifted to another, doing all the work that is carried on in the office of a country newspaper and printing office. He joked with the patrons, wrote a little, and was seemingly no more likely to become famous than was any other of the wandering printers who worked with him.

In his wanderings he reached Ohio and there, being now about 24 years old and having had much experience on newspaper work, he became an editor of a small paper. At this time he began to write the exceedingly humorous sketches signed with the name of "Artemus Ward." They attracted attention far and wide and made him famous. He was called to New York to edit a humorous publication, wrote books, gave lectures and indulged in his desire to travel. By using to the full, in the little country papers, the gift of humor with which he was endowed, he lifted himself from being a printer's devil into being the Mark Twain of an earlier age.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, who at 82 is planning still larger activities for himself, including a food reform movement in behalf of expectant and nursing mothers, has done more, perhaps, than any other one man to protect the American people against adulterated or harmful food products. As chief of the Bureau of Chemistry in the U. S. Department of Agriculture for more than a quarter of a century he was the chief sponsor of the Federal Food and Drug Act. The oleomargarine law also was more or less the direct result of his efforts, while along other lines of achievements he accomplished much in the way of improving the grade and increasing the yield of a number of agricultural products. Dr. Wiley is a native of Indiana and before entering the federal service in 1884 he was a professor in Purdue university and state chemist of Indiana.

Stories That Recall Others

What's The Use?

Wearing a new dress for the first time carries a thrill all its own. A few days ago, Miss Blank came into the office garbed in a pretty, dark Canton crepe. Contrary to expectations, no one made a single comment. What could the matter be? Wasn't her dress really as pretty as she thought it was? Well, be that as it may, she had it, and she had to wear it, regardless of the taste of her associates.

The day wore on and then, during a lull in the afternoon, the girl at the next desk observed: "My, that dress certainly were! Well! Have you ever had to send it to the cleaners?"

Bits of Humor In Court

There are times when the tragic side of life in the court is for the time being eclipsed by the bits of humor.

An observing visitor has picked up the following:

A colored defendant protested that he had never been arrested in his life, never arrested or convicted he asserted, excepting those times when the police held him for "vacancy."

A woman was testifying that another woman had hit her. In her account of the fight she said she was struck in the head with a skillet so hard that "it knocked a hole in my hat, judge."

In another case the prisoner was defending his good standing in the community and answered to the question, "Do you have steady employment?" "Certainly; I am the custodian of the biggest apartment in this city."

PATIALA

The richest ruler in the world"—or so the Geneva shopkeepers assert—is the Maharajah of Patiala who has been visiting the city as one of the native delegates to the league of nations assembly.

"If one's only previous knowledge of Patiala has been that its ruler is reputed to be fabulously wealthy, he will probably expect to find the state huge and tremendously productive," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society. "The state is a little larger than Connecticut—by no means as extensive as others of the native states of India. It is subject to droughts, and, on their heels, famines. This situation has been bettered in recent years, however, by the construction of irrigation canals by the state, and by the digging of many wells.

"The state lies in the eastern plains of the Punjab, and Patiala town, the capital, is within 50 miles of Simla, India's summer capital. One will look in vain on many maps for this state of a modern Croesus. Its identity is lost by being merged into the 'Phulkian States,' of which the other two are Jind and Nabha. Patiala is the big brother, however, taking in five-sevenths of the combined area.

"Patiala is ruled by a Sikh house although these warrior religionists make up barely 22 per cent of the population. The Maharajah's local importance is great, since he is the leading Sikh ruler of the Punjab. His ancestors were loyal to the British during the Indian mutiny, and the state's territory has been increased several times since by British cessions.

"Overlying the government is no sinecure for Patiala. The country has whole tribes whose members are professional criminals. Further more they are specialists. One tribe will devote itself to cattle 'rustling,' another to horse-stealing and a third to highway robbery. The population is backward in education, only 2.4 per cent being literate."

A "pressure tester" has been invented, used much like a tire gauge to test the ripeness of apples. The purpose is to determine the length of time the fruit will keep in storage.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

With hunters 'round I'd rather be Most anywhere than up a tree.
—Buster Bear.

Buster Bear was up in a big tree. What he was up there for I don't know. Perhaps he had climbed up there just for fun. A great many things Buster does he appears to do just for fun. And he dearly likes to climb. Perhaps he had taken a path and had climbed up there to dry off in the sun and the wind. He does that occasionally. Perhaps he had climbed up there just to have a look around. Anyway, he was up in that tree.

Now, had Buster known that that very morning a hunter had started out with a terrible gun to look for him because of that big black fur coat of his, Buster wouldn't have done any tree climbing. No, sir, he would have climbed no trees that day. But he didn't know about that hunter. You see, he had lived so long in the Green Forest without being hunted that he really didn't think about being hunted. He knew that Farmer Brown's boy wouldn't hunt him and he didn't think that some one else might. On general principles he kept out of sight of those two-legged creatures called men. He was suspicious of them. He never could bring himself to trust them. So, whenever he discovered any in the Green Forest, he took care to keep out of sight.

But this morning Buster had climbed that tree without a thought that any of those two-legged creatures might be about. And after he had made himself comfortable up there he forgot that there was such a thing in all the Great World. I suspect that Buster must have dozed off. Anyway that hunter managed to get right under that tree without Buster knowing that he was anywhere about. You see, the leaves were damp from a rain the night before, so the hunter made no sound, for he took each step with the greatest care. All the time he kept looking this way and looking that way for a possible glimpse of Buster. He knew that he had no business to be hunting in that part of the Green Forest for Farmer Brown's boy had put up signs warning all hunters to keep away from there. But this hunter knew that Farmer Brown's boy had gone away this day, and so he had slipped over there hoping to get a shot at Buster Bear. But though he had walked as still as he could and had kept his eyes and his ears wide open he had seen and heard nothing of Buster Bear.

He was tired. He had walked and walked and he was tired. And he was discouraged.

"I guess that Bear probably is up in the Great Mountain," thought the hunter as he sat down under a tree to rest. "If he is anywhere in this part of the Green Forest I ought to have seen him or at least some fresh signs of him. Perhaps he is taking a nap somewhere. Anyway, it doesn't look as if I will have any luck today. I certainly would like to get a shot at him. That black fur coat of his would make a fine rug to put on the floor in front of the fireplace at home. It is queer how scared of Bears some folks are. If you understand them there is nothing to fear. They are just big bluffs. I would like to see the Black Bear that could really scare me."

It was just about then that Buster Bear discovered who was down beneath him. When Buster looked down and saw that hunter, saw the terrible gun in that hunter's hands, he was as badly scared as ever a Bear could be. He knew what that gun was and he knew that up in that tree he, Buster, hadn't a chance in the world.

"Oh dear! Oh dear!" whimpered Buster to himself without making a sound. "Whatever can I do now? I can't stay here and I can't get away. What did I climb this tree for? I couldn't be caught in a worse place. I can't get away from here without going right down where that hunter is with his terrible gun. There is no place to hide up here. Oh dear! Oh dear! Whatever shall I do?"

Now Buster wasn't doing any boasting to himself about not being afraid. He was afraid, and he wasn't ashamed of being afraid. He knew that he hadn't a chance in the world against that hunter as long as he had that terrible gun, and he knew, too, that he was fairly treed, and it wasn't possible to be in a worse situation. What to do? Buster wished that he knew.

The next story: "Buster Saves His Coat."

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!" whimpered Buster to himself without making a sound.

How Skinny Kids Gain Needed Weight

Weak, undernourished, underweight boys and girls who are peevish, fretful and sickly need McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound tablets.

Cod Liver Oil would do just as well, but what parent would be so cruel as to give them the horrible nasty tasting, ill smelling stuff, when sugar coated cod liver oil tablets made by McCoy's Laboratories of New York are as easy to take as candy and won't upset their delicate stomachs.

There's more vitamines of the first class in cod liver oil than in anything else and for that reason thin, scraggly, sickly children commence to liven up and take on good healthy flesh after McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets have been taken for just a few days.

Be sure and ask Lee & Osgood Co. or any druggist for McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Tablet, if you want your delicate children to become strong, robust and active.

For grown-ups they are just as wonderful—one woman gained 15 pounds in five weeks. 60 tablets 60 cents and if they don't put 5 pounds of good firm flesh on any thin man or woman in 30 days, your druggist is authorized to hand you back the money you paid for them.

PLAINTIFF IS MISSING; NON-SUIT IS GRANTED

Neither plaintiff nor witnesses appeared in the common pleas court at New London Tuesday morning when the case of Petrillo Co. vs. L. Markow, of New London, came up for trial, Judge C. H. Waller granted the motion for a non-suit that was made by Attorney Lubchansky, counsel for the defendant. Attorney Thomas E. PECK'S CORNER FIRE WITH SMALL DAMAGE

About 6.30 o'clock Tuesday evening the Yantic Fire Engine company was called to a fire at Peck's corner, Norwich Town. It was reported that the fire apparatus from the Central Fire station had responded to a call and extinguished the fire, which had not gained much headway, before the Yantic company arrived; hence the return of the Yantic firemen.

The old Fuller house was the location of the fire.

NORWICH AMATEURS DO BRILLIANT WORK IN AMERICAN LEGION PLAY

MABEL C. BUCKINGHAM
Princess Bonnie

Well over 1,000 people applauded the American Legion players at the Broadway theatre, Tuesday evening, when they scored another brilliant success in theatrical lines in their production of Princess Bonnie, a comic opera in two acts. Princess Bonnie was staged in professional style and it is not exaggerating to say that it ranks on an equal with many professional companies, that have been seen in Norwich from time to time. The stage settings were appropriate, the electrical effects attractive, the gowns and costumes elaborate and beautiful and the acting faultless. A splendid musical programme, excellently given, pleasing group dance numbers and original humor placed Princess Bonnie well ahead of previous productions given under the auspices of Fletcher Post, No. 4, American Legion.

It is safe to say that Princess Bonnie has seldom been equalled by any local amateur theatricals. The cast deserve all the applause showered on them and more too. They entered right into the spirit of the story they were enacting, all carrying their parts in their usual efficient manner. Some of those in the audience, witnessing the work of the Legion players for the first time, said after the show that they had not realized that there was such excellent talent in Norwich. Favorable comment was heard on all sides.

The story of the play is an interesting one. About 14 years before the opening of the play there was a ship wreck off the coast of Maine and a little girl was rescued by Captain Tarpaulin of the fishing smack Nancy. The child talked only in a foreign tongue and all that could be learned from her was that her name was Bonnie Bell. She grew up the adopted daughter of Captain Tarpaulin and his maiden sister, Auntie Crabbe. Subsequent events, as told in the play, resulted in her being identified as a wealthy Spanish princess.

J. WARREN KANE

She is claimed by her uncle and guardian and taken back to Spain, there to be married to a nobleman whom she had never seen up to the time of her betrothal. Her lover and a few of his friends followed her to her native country arriving just in time to prevent the marriage and to expose the treachery of the nobleman who is thrown into prison. As usual the play has a happy ending.

The first act is laid on the coast of Maine, near Bar Harbor and the second act is laid in the court yard of a Spanish palace. It would be extremely difficult to make a better choice for the role of Princess Bonnie than Mabel C. Buckingham. Her winsome manner and delightfully pleasing voice won instant favor with the large audience. Featuring her musical numbers were Dreaming of Love, Indian Love Call and Hear What I Say, I Implore You.

Mrs. Buckingham was excellently supported by J. Warren Kane in the role of Roy Sterling, her lover. Mr. Kane, who has appeared in leading roles of other Legion theatricals, was a happy choice for Princess Bonnie's lover. Well known as a vocalist of unusual talent, Mr. Kane, as usual, delighted the audience in his song numbers, especially in his rendition of Bonnie, My Queen.

Frank Crowell was excellent in the roll of Captain Tarpaulin. He not only acted the part but looked the part of the kindly, genial, bluff old sea captain. The role of Auntie Crabbe Tarpaulin, maiden sister of Captain Tarpaulin, was faultlessly carried by Myra F. Ward. Her number, Never, Never Fall In Love, was one of the features of the musical programme.

Eunice B. Taft, who has starred in other local stage productions, carried the role of Kitty Clover, the belle of the village, in a very commendable manner. Her duet with Shrimps, My Bark Canoe, won her well deserved applause.

And then there was Billy Mitchell, bubbling over with his usual mirth and good humor. He took the part of Shrimps, a back-woods jack of all trades. For original humor Billy is "there" for he kept the audience laughing all the time he was on the stage. Shrimps with Roy, brought down the house with their song number, You Never Lose a Little Fish. They got off several "local hits" that went big with the house and encores followed each other in quick succession. From the applause and laughter it seemed as though the audience would keep them on the stage for the remainder of the evening but they finally retired despite the insistent encores and the play went on.

Walter F. LaFontaine, another well known and popular singer, appeared to advantage in the role of the Count and Herbert McNeely was a splendid choice for the role of the pompous admiral, Bonnie's uncle and guardian George Madden, appeared as Salvador, the admiral's colored body guard. George pulled off some original comedy acting that got him a big hand. Sarah S. Batlow, as Armorita, gave a very pleasing Spanish dance number. The part of Captain Surf, a village fisherman, was well carried by Harry Bowers.

Princess Bonnie was staged under the direction of William H. McGreevy of the John E. Rogers company.

The cast of characters follows:

Captain Surf, a village fisherman, Harry Bowers.

Kitty Clover, the belle of the village, Eunice B. Taft.

MISS ELEANOR STARRING MAKES HIT IN PLAY

Former playmates of her mother at Norwich Town during summer seasons will find interest in the fact that a San Francisco society page features little Miss Eleanor Starring in a sketch and picture. The little girl is the daughter of Mason B. and Gertrude Lathrop Starring and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alanson P. Lathrop, now living at the Sleepy Hollow Country club, Tarrytown, N. Y. Alanson Lathrop is the New York light and traction magnate, a native of Norwich and brother of Miss Helen Marshall Lathrop. The society writer says: "True to her name, little Miss Starring starred as 'Rip, Jr.,' in a recent open air production of Rip Van Winkle, in the heart of the Washington Irving country, New York. Every child is or should be familiar with the story of Rip Van Winkle and his dog, Wolf, and his young son, Rip, Jr.; but of all the millions of children who know and love the immortal history of poor old Rip, only one has ever taken an actual part in the staging of the drama of life at the very spot chosen by Washington Irving as the scene of his tale. This fortunate child is little Miss Eleanor Starring, six and a-half year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mason B. Starring, Jr., and granddaughter of Mason B. Starring, of San Francisco, president of the Market Street Railway Company. The play, as given by the Sleepy Hollow Country club, in the heart of the Washington Irving country, was in three scenes. The production was presented by residents of Scarsborough and Briarcliff, where reside some of the first families of New York. The little girl instinctively grasped the idea of the drama of Rip's life with precocious historic ability, giving the performance a life-like quality which earned her an ovation. In an epilogue which followed Rip Van Winkle, and was entitled 'The Works of Washington Irving,' Mrs. Mason B. Starring, mother of the inimitable little Miss Eleanor took part in a scene. 'Moonlight at Sunnyside,' which would serve to indicate that perhaps the daughter inherits her art from her mother. Sunnyside, it may be explained, was Washington Irving's birthplace."

STOLE PRIVATE PAPERS OF WILLIAM E. D. STOKES

NEW YORK, Nov. 17—J. S. Mosby, former negro butler of William E. D. Stokes who was prominent in Stokes' unsuccessful divorce proceedings against his wife, today testified that he stole private papers of Stokes and turned them over to Stokes' former attorneys, Daniels E. and John F. Nugent.

His statements were made at a hearing before Herman Hoffman, sitting as referee, to determine whether the Nugents have in their possession papers which they refused to return to Stokes after Mrs. Stokes was granted a separation and the Nugents caused to represent the multi-millionaire hotel man.

The Nugents last year brought suit for $61,000 against Stokes for alleged unpaid legal fees. Later Stokes was said to have charged that the Nugents stole papers from him while they were representing him and they sued him for slander.

LIVELY BOXING BOUTS AND SNAPPY ENTERTAINMENT AT K. OF P. SMOKER

Action, and plenty of it, featured the boxing bouts and entertainment programme at the Smoker of Wauregan Lodge No. 6, Knights of Pythias held Tuesday evening in Roseland hall. The Knights put on one of the snappiest programmes of boxing seen in Norwich in many a moon, not that it was a jam-bang affair for blood, but there was same fast work and plenty of fast stepping. The boys worked hard and their efforts were thoroughly appreciated.

The two feature bouts of the evening were the opening and closing bouts, the first being a bout between two youngsters, billed as Firpo and Willis. The final bout was between ex-state champion flyweight, Young Coulon of Taftville, and his big brother, Minneau Beauregard. There was no brotherly love shown in this bout for the ex-champ hit Minneau with everything but the water bucket and when the bout ended Big Brother was pretty much battered and spitting blood. Minneau outweighed Young Coulon by about 50 pounds but that meant nothing in the youngster's young life for he tore into the big boy with rights and lefts, working a deceptive shift that fooled even Minneau who has been the kid's sparring partner for several years. Young Coulon demonstrated that he is on the road to high pugilistic honors and it will not be long before the state flyweight crown will again rest on his brow.

The opening bout was between two pin-weights who fought with all the vim and vigor of professionals and their earnest efforts brought forth well merited applause from the gallery. These two kids went at it hammer and tongs and for three rounds pummelled each other about the ring.

The second bout was of four rounds between Young Barney and Kid Butova. The Kid had the edge on Barney who paid more attention to his raven locks than he did to his boxing. Butova looked good but so far outclassed his opponent that he did not have to work.

The third bout was fast and some good boxing resulted. Young Brusso boxed Young Falcone to a fast draw in a clever exhibition of boxing. Brusso showed the results of constant training and his speed and foot work were exceptionally good.

Young McCarthy, who entered the professional ranks a few months ago at the Duvell A. C. shown, boxed four fast rounds with Young Bergeron, a youngster who gives promise of becoming a real menace to the boys in the 126 pound division.

Irish Billy Glynn outpoxed his heavier opponent, Pete Boyce in four rounds. Boyce was slow and was a target for Glynn's faster punch. However there was plenty of action and Boyce showed up well at close range.

Going from the manly art of self defense to the more genteel art of dancing the guests of the lodge were treated to some exceptionally fine numbers by Clements' Chic Revue of Hartford, a professional dancing troupe with an exceptionally fine repertoire of dance numbers. These entertainers gave a lengthy programme and snappy and bright song and dance numbers which appealed to the audience. There were several specialty numbers in which Tex Callahan was called upon to assist and the local boxing commissioner was equal to the occasion. Tex also assisted in a Charleston number with Harry Schwartz, chairman of the committee in charge and master of ceremonies.

Two local boys, Hooker and Cassano, put on a neat black-face act in which Mr. "Hooker's specialty numbers were exceptionally good.

Dan Sellman favored with eccentric dancing and Harry Goldstein was heard in several pleasing song numbers.

During the evening D'Atri's Waureau Hotel orchestra rendered a snappy musical programme playing as their features, Wait 'Til Tomorrow Night, You Told Me To Go, Bam, Bam, Mammy Shore, One Smile, and Freshie.

Jackie Wilson was the referee for the boxing bouts.

During the evening sandwiches and soda were served and Fatima cigarettes were furnished through the courtesy of the company. Old fashioned corn-cob pipes and cigars were also given the guests.

ACADEMY JUNIORS LOSE TO WHEELER HIGH AGAIN

Tuesday afternoon on the Academy campus the N. F. A. Juniors for the second time this season lost to the Wheeler High school football team by the score of 6 to 0. In their last contest a week ago the Juniors lost by the score of 59 to 0. Both teams battled furiously through the first two quarters and Wheeler was not able to gain any ground until the third period, when they sent Whitelaw around end for a long run and the lone score of the entire game. The try for point after touchdown was blocked.

The local team played a fine game but still show up green and inexperienced. Outstanding in the game was the playing of Aldrich, Kopteino, and Al Francis for the Juniors. George Whitelaw, was the only man on the Wheeler team who was able to gain ground consistently. Ans Tombari, for the Juniors with the wind against him got away some pretty punts.

The local boys are booked to play again next week but no definite team has been decided upon yet. The lineup for the Juniors in Tuesday's game was: Ends, Johnson, Robertson, and Brewer; tackles, Sechter, Keenen, and Perkins; guards, McCarthy, J. Fox and Jarnowski, center, Navick. Quarterback, Brock; left half backs, Francis, and Tombari, right half backs, Robertson and Kopteino; full-back, Aldrich (Capt.).

The officials were: Referee, Parkhurst of the Jewett City Speedboys, umpire, Winters; head linesman, Goldsmith; timers, Mitchell and Fisher. Score: Wheeler 0-0-6-0.

LITTLE BROWN JUG IS EMBLEMATICAL OF VICTORY

CHICAGO, Nov. 17—A little brown jug, subject of a dispute between Michigan and Minnesota since 1903, is the cage of battle in this week's meeting of the teams, which ends the western conference campaign and may decide the title holder.

Originally only a lowly water container, the little brown jug is a symbol of victory for the Wolverines and Gophers. On its sides, painted in the colors of the schools, are the records of eight games, seven of them Wolverine victories.

In 1903 Coach Fielding M. Yost took a Michigan team to Minnesota to end a most successful season. The game was a 6-6 tie.

After it was over Michigan missed one of its water jugs. It was found broken, "Doc" Williams, then Gopher coach, agreed to replace it, but required that Michigan prove its ownership by downing his team.

Not until 1909 did the teams meet. Then Michigan won, 15 to 6, and the jug went back to Ann Arbor. It has been there since, except in 1919, when Minnesota, by a 24 to 7 score, acquired it and took it back to Minneapolis.

Greater interest attach to the little brown jug this year, for fate and circumstance has made it virtually symbolic of the big ten championship. Minnesota is undefeated in the conference and leads the race for the title, with Michigan second with one defeat and four victories.

The game is the sixteenth meeting of the teams since 1892.

A. A. U. PLANS EXTENSIVE AMATEUR CAMPAIGN FOR THE COMING YEAR

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 17—(A. P.—With Murray Hulbert, New York, reelected to steer the ship of the American Amateur Athletic union for another year, a program of international and national athletics adopted and plans under way for a meeting in New York of a committee which will give the rules a thorough overhauling, the annual convention of the organization came to a close here late today.

Baltimore was awarded the 1926 convention after a three-cornered contest with Milwaukee and Buffalo.

International athletics were placed on a plane higher than ever before. The close relationship was evidenced by the granting of permission to Jackson V. Schols and Lloyd Hahn to invade Australia next summer to meet the best in the antipodes. At the same time Hans Houben, German sprinter; Adrian Paulin; John Hoff, Olympic pole vault champion of Norway and Wide, Nurmi's rival in Europe, were invited to America next year to engage in a series of events.

Boxing took on an international angle when the delegates voted to allow $2,500 to the committee to take a team to Buenos Aires next year to meet the Argentines and Canadians. Argentina offered an additional $4,000 to defray transportation expenses.

President Hulbert set the wheels in motion for the raising of funds for the United States Olympic team of 1928 by appointing a committee to work on a program.

A report by W. C. Prout, chairman of the foreign relations committee, exonerated Charles Paddock and Loren Murchison from charges of accepting money for performances during their European trip. He said the committee was convinced the athletes did not accept any money for their track appearances abroad and that it had been found they incurred a deficit of $105 on the tour.

When the rules committee did not report any changes in the code, President Hulbert announced he would have a committee confer with him in New York and give the rules a general overhauling.

Criticism of the manner in which marathon runners are selected for the Olympic team was voiced by William Kennedy, long distance runner. Kennedy said that no one race should exclude a man but entire performances should be the basis of judgment.

The convention voted to hold a national high school swimming meet in Florida during the 1926 season. The senior weight lifting championship will be held in Los Angeles by the Southern Pacific association.

The New York delegation made a bid for the national senior championships in 1932, the year the Olympic games will be held in California.

BULKELEY HAS LONG SCRIMMAGE AND SIGNAL DRILL

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 17—Bulkeley continued its workouts today in preparation for the game with Fordham by drills in signals and punts. The scrimmage practice was light but a little stiffer and much longer than yesterday.

Bulkeley was particularly trained in its defense work and much time was devoted to punting.

The boys are fast moulding into shape for the visiting boys from the Bronx and it is expected before the week is out Coach Canty will have a team to put on the field that will be able to rout out the visiting eleven here Saturday.

Strategy in defense work was also used, Coach Canty and Captain Davis were seen in conference throughout the game trying to find out how they might smoothen out some of the rough spots in the teams playing.

The new formations were gone into a little bit better today and the boys seemed to be grasping the ideas being suggested to them by Coach Canty.

The sale of tickets began today and the reserve supply for the student body was bought up eagerly. All the student tickets were taken care of and the boys that had subscribed to the seasons games were given their tickets first.

Preparations to put the tickets on sale at the various sporting agencies were made this afternoon and it is expected that the tickets for the game will be bought up rapidly.

Fordham it is expected will come to this city next Friday afternoon and there is every indication that the maroon yearlings will put a fast team on the field the next day.

Saturday will be the first time that New London football fans have ever had the opportunity of seeing a freshman team of any college play in this city and a large crowd is anticipated.

Features are being considered by the management and there is every indication the game will take on a college aspect.

PLAINFIELD TO HAVE FAST BASKETBALL FIVE

Arrangements have already been completed whereby Plainfield will be represented by one of the fastest basketball teams in the state this season.

The team will be composed of Benson, Bissel, Normandin, Norris, Dissinger and Thorton, who all have enviable records on teams with which they formerly appeared.

The team has been practicing weekly for the past six weeks and should be in A-1 shape when the season opens.

The opening game will be played November 24th, and the fast American Thread team of Fall River with "Scotty" Higgins will be the attraction.

Arrangements are under way whereby some of the fastest teams in the state will be seen on the Plainfield floor during the coming season.

Owing to the Community house being engaged Friday night the opening game will take place the preceding Wednesday but thereafter all home games will take place on Friday night.

Manager Salisbury is arranging his schedule and is anxious to hear from some of the fastest teams in the state. Home and home games will be arranged where it is possible.

PRO GOLF TOURNEY IS SLATED FOR GARDEN CITY

NEW YORK, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—The Professional Golfers' association today voted to hold its 1926 championship tournament at the Salisbury Country club, of Garden City, N. Y., and to increase the prize money for the event from $5,000 to $10,000.

Doubling of the amount of prize money, it was announced by the officers, results from a general demand on the part of the players to make the tournament more attractive, but more especially to provide prizes for all of the 64 qualifiers.

A group of famous foreign players will make their first appearance in the P. G. A. tournament if invitations to European stars are accepted. The meeting voted to invite George Duncan, Abe Mitchell and Archie Compston, well known English instructors, among others.

The tournament will be held either the second or third week in September.

NEW YALE HOCKEY SCHEDULE ANNOUNCED

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 17—(AP)—Manager Walter West of the Yale Hockey team tonight announced a new Yale schedule for the coming season, the changes being necessary because of the fact that Madison Square Garden in New York will be Yale's "home" rink instead of the Springfield, Mass., arena, as had been planned. The schedule follows:

December 26 to January 2, practice games with Williams at Lake Placid; January 4, McGill university, at New York; 12, Dartmouth, at New York; 16, Princeton, at New York; 23, Harvard at Boston (tentative); 27, Boston university at New York; February 6, Dartmouth, at Hanover; 13, open; 23, Princeton at Princeton; 27, Harvard, at New York.

Clarence L. Wanamaker will again coach the varsity squad while a new coach will be named to take the place made vacant by the resignation of Holcomb York.

KAPLAN AND HERMAN NOT TO FIGHT UNTIL THEY MEET IN GARDEN DEC. 11

NEW YORK, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—Louis (Kid) Kaplan, of Meriden, Conn. and Babe Herman, of California, principals in the featherweight title clash at Madison Square Garden December 18, cannot fight elsewhere until after the fulfillment of their contract with Tex Rickard, the state athletic commission ruled today.

This action was taken to protect Rickard and to insure the Garden promoter that neither will be injured and thereby cause a postponement of the fight. Kaplan injured his hand in his last fight with Herman at Waterbury, Conn., August 27, and the commission wants to prevent a recurrence of this trouble.

Luis Vicentini, Chilean lightweight through his manager, offered to meet Jimmy Goodrich, of Buffalo, N. Y., world's lightweight champion, at the Christmas fund matches, December 23, for a guarantee of $1,000. Promoters of the fund reported trouble arranging a card owing to high prices demanded by the fighter, this prompted Vicentini to offer his services for the moderate sum.

Two suspensions were meted out at today's meeting upon recommendations from outside commissions. Bobby Evans of Philadelphia was suspended upon the request of the Pennsylvania board while Ike Woods, a second, was declared ineligible upon receipt of information that similar action had been taken against him in Massachusetts. Reasons for the action were not given in either case. Allentown Joe Gans was let off with a reprimand for fouling Maxie Rosenbloom at Syracuse last week.

John Pesek, of Nebraska, a wrestler who was contracted to wrestle here last night, failed to put in an appearance at the show and he was indefinitely suspended pending an investigation.

EASTERN TEAMS CLINCH INTERNATIONAL TITLE

NEW YORK, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—The eastern sector of the gridiron battlefront has clinched the bulk of intersectional laurels for 1925. A few games remain between opponents of rival areas but the east, with a total of 25 victories so far over middle western and southern elevens, has too big a lead to be overcome by any remaining developments.

The middle west held the east even, however, in the six games where "big ten" teams came into conflict with eastern opponents. Dartmouth's victory over Chicago, coupled with those of Syracuse over Indiana and Penn over Chicago, offset Ohio state's triumph over Columbia, plus the win scored by Michigan and Illinois over Navy and Penn.

The center of intersectional interest this week shifts from Chicago to Los Angeles, where Southern California's high-scoring machine will meet the invasion of the University of Iowa. National gridiron honors, it seemed earlier in the season, would hinge upon the outcome of this conflict but the defeat of U. S. C. by Standord and the downfall of Iowa before Wisconsin and Minnesota has lessened its importance.

Nevertheless, the game on the Pacific coast overshadows anything else remaining on the intersectional slate. The only other contest of this type on next Saturday involves Carnegie and St. Louis University at St. Paul, while on Thanksgiving day the intersectional interest will be confined to such minor contests as Bucknell-Detroit, Vermont-St. Louis, Fordham-John Carroll and Mercer-Marquette.

	East	Middle West	South	Far West	Total Won
East		17	8	0	25
Middle West	6		3	2	10
South	4	0		0	5
Far West	0	0	1		0
Total lost	10	13	11	1

Ties—Far West and Middle West, one; East and Middle West, three.

LONG DUMMY SCRIMMAGE PRACTICE FOR YALE TEAM

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—The Yale varsity football team, said to be recovering rapidly from Saturday's upset, quickened its preparations for next Saturday's battle with Harvard with a long dummy scrimmage today. Yesterday's shift in the right side of the line remained unchanged today, Butterworth being in at right tackle and Webster at right guard. The coaches announced that there would probably be no more changes this week. Both Allen, fullback, and Butterworth, are nursing slight injuries and should they be relieved early in the Harvard game, it is expected that their places will be filled by Wadsworth and Vandergrift.

NUTMEGS AND TIGERS PREPARING FOR BATTLE

Sunday afternoon on Sachem Field the Norwich Nutmegs and the Greeneville Tigers will meet in the deciding game of the city championship. Both teams are practicing hard for their coming contest and a fast game is expected.

Last Sunday the Tigers defeated the fast Jewett City Speedboys by the score of 6 to 0 while the Nutmegs were going down in defeat before the Lorraine Mills of Westerly. No definite lineup has as yet been decided upon for either team but they are expected to be at their full strength for the game.

GRANGE HAS NOT ACCEPTED OFFER TO PLAY PROFESSIONAL FOOTBALL

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—(AP)—So many offers have been made to "Red" Grange for his services after the close of his intercollegiate career in the Illinois-Ohio state football game next Saturday that the officials of the University of Illinois, including President Kinley, today started to counsel with him urging him not to accept any offers to play professional football.

Investigation by the university authorities into reported negotiations that professional promoters had induced Grange to play professional football, drew a denial from Grange that he had done anything to jeopardize his amateur standing and that any contracts bearing his name were forgeries. It was reported to university officials from Miami, Fla., that C. C. Pyle, a motion picture theatre owner of Champaign said he had Grange's name on papers calling for several professional games.

Grange, at the suggestion of George Huffa, director of athletics, was excused from football practice today and tomorrow so he could go to Wheaton, a Chicago suburb and talk over the matter with his father, Lyle Grange, a deputy sheriff.

The elder Grange is willing his son should accept any of the numerous offers made him calling for motion pictures, newspaper writing or other form of public appearance, but he does not approve of his playing professional football.

The Illinois gridiron star, in denying that he had ever received a cent for the use of his name or had authorized anybody to negotiate a contract with him, admitted he knew Pyle and that the latter represented him in an action brought against an automobile company which was using his name in advertising matter. He said the action was instituted at Pyle's suggestion.

The most persistent rumor had it that Grange would join the Chicago Bears, a professional football team that plays here on Thanksgiving day. Reports also said that Earl Britton, co-star with Grange, also had been signed but both of them denied it when called before Coach Zuppke.

"If you're ineligible, turn in your suits now," was Zuppke's demand.

The latest offer made Grange was a salary of $10,000 a month, $120,000 a year from a Florida real estate concern, seeking Grange's services as a real estate agent.

After Grange's conference with the university officials the report persisted in Champaign that he would turn down professional football offers, but might accept some other offers made him.

SUNDAY MORNING GOLF ALLOWED AT HARTFORD CLUB

HARTFORD, Nov. 17—Sunday morning golf will be permitted at the Hartford Golf club as a result of repeal of a by-law of the club voted at the annual meeting of the club tonight. There were only a few dissenting votes. Prior to 1913, the club grounds could not be used at all on Sunday, but since that year members have been allowed to play after one p. m., on Sunday. It was not until the annual meeting last year however, that a restriction against hiring caddies on Sunday was removed.

APOLOGIZES FOR SMASHING GOAL POSTS AT BROWN

NEW YORK, November 17—Smashing of foes' goal posts after football victories, which appears to have become the fad, is frowned upon at Harvard.

Captain Dolph Cheek of the Crimson football team has informed the Brown University authorities that the majority of Harvard students are sorry that over-enthusiastic supporters demolished the posts at Providence on Saturday.

Speechless amazement is one of the things that go without saying.

WESTERLY

DIVORCE ACTIONS AMONG CASES BEFORE DIST. COURT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 17—One of the two indictments on which sentence was not passed, to each of which Louis E. Watson of South Kingstown entered pleas of nolo, was the alleged breaking and entering the unoccupied home of Edward D. Fessenden in South Kingston, at about 11 p. m. on the 26th of September and the larceny of a revolver, holster, sheath, flash light to the value of $5.00. The other indictment was entering the Fessenden house in the night time for the purpose of larceny, on the 29th of September.

Judge Copostosto asked the defendant if he had not been in trouble before and Watson said that he had done a year's sentence in state prison for the breaking and entering of a garage in South Kingston, saying that he did not like the habit of the defendant in going round and "collecting revolvers." the court directed that he be held in $1,000 bailbon each of the two complaints until move was made for sentence.

Against Charles Whitman, of Hopkinton, the grand jury returned a bill for breaking and entering the occupied dwelling of George R. Wanderling, Nov. 21st, in the night time and larceny of goods to the value of $9. He pleaded nolo. Judge Copotosto took the papers and said that he could not hold him on these allegations as the charge should have been burglary. "Take him away," he said, and to Assistant Attorney General Jackovony that as the grand jurors were all present, he would grant the request, if leave was asked to again retire with the grand jurors to the jury pleaded nolo to the complaint of breakroom to reconsider the case. Whitman ing and entering the dwelling on the 16th of April in the daytime of Oliver H. Williams, near Woodville, and the larceny of articles to the value of $75. Following the disposal of these matters the jury retired with the attorney general and upon their return Whitman, when arraigned for sentence, told the court that he did not enter the dwelling in the nighttime. The judge directed a plea of not guilty to be entered.

No indictment was found against Charles T. Clarke of New York, driver of an automobile that caused fatal injuries to George Morrow on the night of Oct. 8 at Saunderstown. Morrow, it was said, was changing a tire on an automobile when he was struck by the machine driven by Clarke.

James Ritchie of Hopkinton was indicted on a charge of harboring for immoral purposes. He will be brought before the court to plead tomorrow. The indictment was found as a result of a raid conducted by the state police several weeks ago when two girls were taken from the house and brought before the district court.

EDWARD M'KERNAN FATALLY INJURED BY AUTOMOBILE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, Nov. 17—Edward McKernan, 73, residing at the rooming house at 6 Canal street and employed as a paving cutter for many years, was fatally injured Tuesday evening, when he was struck on High street by an automobile driven by Henry F. Nerone of this city. Mr. McKernan was taken to the Westerly hospital following the accident where it was found that his injuries comprised a broken neck and minor cuts and bruises. His death occurred soon after his arrival at the hospital. Nerone is being held on a charge of manslaughter.

The accident occurred about 5:40 o'clock when Mr. McKernan was crossing High street from the postoffice to the Stillman block, on the opposite side of the street. Eye witnesses claim that the fender of the Buick touring car operated by Nerone struck Mr. McKernan and he was carried a distance of five or six feet before being thrown to the paved surface of the street. It was observed that the two left wheels passed over his body. Westerly police patrolman George H. Champlin on dwuty in the square saw the automobile wheels pass over his body and quickly rushed to the spot. He directed that the injured man be taken to the office of Dr. Michael H. Scanlon. From Dr. Scanlon's office he was taken to the Westerly hospital accompanied by Dr. Scanlon and Westerly Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown.

At the hospital Mr. McKernan was examined by Drs. Scanlon and Anderson of the hospital staff and his death occurred at 8:15 o'clock before he left the operating room. Mr. McKernan has the sight of but one eye and is hard of hearing. In his story to the police Nerone stated that he did not see the man at any time and only felt a jar when the rear left wheel passed over some object that was laying in the road. He claimed that his machine was being operated at the rate of 10 miles an hour, while he was enroute from the Lorraine Manufacturing company's mill on Mechanic street, where he is employed, to kep an engagement with a dentist on High street. He said that he was in no particular hurry, as the engagement was between 5:45 and 6 o'clock.

Westerly Chief of Police Brown and Town Solicitor John Ferguson, Jr., and Medical Examiner Dr. Scanlon were in consultation for some time, when it was decided to hold Nerone on a charge of manslaughter. It was decided that no autopsy would be held and the body was turned over to Undertaker Charles Gavitt. A coroner's investigation will be held some time tomorrow when his two sons, Joseph McKernan, a civil engineer of Plainfield, Conn., and George McKernan, of West Hartford will be in Westerly.

RUM-SOAKED ENGLISH PLUM PUDDINGS COMING

LONDON, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—American prohibition enforcers will soon have another problem on their hands. From now on, through Thanksgiving and Christmas, nearly every steamer sailing from these shores will be carrying rum-soaked English plum puddings destined for residents of the United States, from New York to San Francisco, sent by friends here desiring to contribute something to the holiday menus.

Each pudding contains from a quart to a half pint of brandy, sherry or rum Word has gone round that they will not be held up, as the use of spirits for flavoring does not infringe the Volstead act. However, the consigners are eagerly awaiting news as to whether the prohibition agents will molest the alcoholic-scented packages when they reach the other side.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

DEAD GRASS HAS NO NOURISHMENT

If cows tend to slump in production at this period of the year it is not to be wondered at in view of the fact that so many are still grazing in pastures and fields where the grass has long been dead and contains practically no nourishment. Cows will eat this sort of material and are partly filled up after a day's feeding so that they are fed correspondingly less grain and hay in the barns. It would be much wiser, however, to open the silo early than to continue this practise.

The winter period is usually one of high prices for milk and production should be sustained if profits are to be made. If there is a field of corn stalks standing, do not send the cows out to harvest it. Dry stalks contain very little nourishment and especially very little of that material which promotes milk production. It would be far better to turn in young stock to do this feeding off and keep the milk cows in the barn.

Laying birds should be housed for the winter. It is idle to expect a good rate of egg production for any length of time when laying birds are permitted to roam on frosty ground, subject to weather changes and eating feed that has very little value.

Mulching strawberry plants can be done as soon as desired now. It should consist of straw, hay or barnyard manure.

Brush and trash around the edges of the orchard should be cleaned up. These harbor many of the insect pests, especially where there are old stone walls against which leaves drift and young bushes sprout. Provision should be made for poisoning mice where damage may be anticipated. The poison bran should be prepared. Unless pine mice are in evidence, wire protectors will serve to prevent girdling of the trees.

Many men owning trees should remember that an annual pruning of bearing trees is much to be desired. Severe pruning every four or five years often does more damage than a light pruning each year. Pruning may be done any time now, although it is often left until late spring.

CONNECTICUT SEED CROP REPORTED SHORT

A small domestic crop of red and alsike clover seed and poor quality Grimm alfalfa seed is not a cheerful report for Connecticut farmers, such are the latest reports from the department of agriculture and seed trade circles.

The preliminary reports indicate a red clover seed crop in the United States of 10 to 20 per cent more than in 1924. However, the 1924 crop was only some 35 per cent of an average crop as everyone who paid the prevailing prices last spring must know. Growers are now receiving prices in advance of those paid a year ago. The European crop is not all harvested but reports have indicated an immense crop. European seed may effect our price level but it will be dear at any price for our conditions.

Growers are receiving much more for alsike seed than last year. Our own crop is very small but fortunately Canada's crop is about 33 per cent larger than their large crop of last season.

Seed development is reported very poor in the Grimm alfalfa seed producing districts of the northwest.

The clover seed problem has been bad to the point of desperation during the past three seasons. No relief is in sight for the coming season. Buy before the avalanche of foreign seed. Buy only from the most reputable sources and demand substantial written evidence which will assure you that the seed is hardy American grown. Do it now, next March may be too late.—J. S. Owens, soils and field crops specialist, extension service.

TIME NOW TO BUY POTATO SEED

Growers in New England dependent upon purchasing potato seed are warned to watch the certified seed potato market very closely. It seems to the writer that the present time is the correct period in which to buy certified seed for planting another year. The reason why such a statement is made is due to the following facts:

Table stock potato market is rising in price and therefore it is inevitable that prices for seed potatoes will rise accordingly. Growers in northern sections of New England seem very unwilling to state a price on their stock and hold to these particular figures. On this one point it is very interesting to know that a price of $2.25 per bushel in carlots for spring delivery was made by a Vermont party to a Connecticut purchaser. The purchaser journeyed to Vermont in order to inspect the seed and when he arrived the grower informed him that he could not consider a price of $2.50 a bushel and he did not know even then that he could sell the potatoes at that figure.

Another very important point is that of just how much can a grower in New England afford to pay for seed stock. If table stock reaches $3.50 a bushel or higher, certified seed will sell at least 50 cents a bushel above the table stock price. Can a grower afford to pay this price? If he can buy potatoes at the present time for less money he would miss storing them satisfactorily in order to keep his cost of production as low as possible. He all knows he not wait too long.—Albert E. Williamson, vegetable specialist, extension service.

BETTER WATER SYSTEMS NEEDED ON MOST FARMS

Running water in the house, particularly the kitchen greatly lessens the drudgery of household duties and is a boon to farm women. With a general increase in the use of water for sanitary purposes and with horses and cows sometimes consuming as much as 20 to 25 gallons daily, the need for an efficient water system on the farm is imperative. The latest available statistics show that only one out of ten farms has water piped into the house. Vermont stood first, with 62.9 per cent of her farms having running water. The lowest percentage of any state was six per cent. Tabulations based upon satisfactory water systems on 3,000 farms included in Farmers Bulletin 1185, Farmstead Water Supply, just published by the United States department of agriculture.

Surveys indicate that three out of four farm water supplies are sufficiently polluted as to be unsafe. In one instance 30 cases of typhoid fever and 7 deaths were traced to a water supply contaminated by a septic-tank discharge which drained a long distance above ground and then through 111 feet of gravel. Cistern water often becomes polluted, according to the bulletin, because of unclean roofs or other collecting area, insanitary cisterns, seepage from nearby sources of filth, and in other ways.

NEW CIRCULAR ISSUED ON COLOR GRADES FOR HONEY

Extracted honey is commonly sold on the basis of its color and the point source from which it is derived, as white orange honey or light amber clover honey. To persons familiar with the various honeys on the market, the absence of the paint source and color has come in favor of the honey. As a rule, honeys of light color bring a somewhat better price than the darker grades, and therefore the practice of designating the color has become general. With the flavor indicated by the paint sources of the honeys, and the standard weight, about one pound 12 ounces to the gallon, the next step becomes the establishment of color grades. As an aid to uniformity in grading, several color grades have been devised and tested upon the market, but none of these has proved entirely satisfactory.

Extensive experimenting by the bee culture laboratory of agriculture has resulted in the production of a color grader for honey which overcomes many of the difficulties noted in other graders. It is extensively used by the bureau of agricultural economics. By its means standard color grades commonly used in the sale of honeys may be determined. They are: Water white, white, light amber, amber, and dark. Two additional grades needed by western beekeepers have been established and are provided for by the grader; these are designated as extra white and extra light amber.

ANNO

IS OPPOSED TO COOLIDGE'S MERCHANT MARINE POLICY

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 17—(A. P.)—The apparent intention of President Coolidge, indicated in press dispatches from Washington yesterday, to adopt a merchant marine policy of one man control of operation and liquidation of the merchant fleet through the president of the fiet corporation under cabinet or White House supervision, was deplored in a statement issued today by Frederick L. Thompson, recently resigned commissioner of the shipping board.

Mr. Thompson held that if the new policy were substituted for the present control by a board selected with partisan and regional consideration, the result would be a concentration of control in the north Atlantic seaboard, with ensuing domination by foreign shipping interests. Mr. Thompson's statement follows:

"Certain facts should be publicly known in connection with the attitude of President Coolidge, indicated in an Associated Press dispatch of yesterday, to change the shipping law so as to nullify ythe voice in ship operation of all seaboards.

"The inevitable result of such action would be to concentrate control in the north Atlantic seaboard recognized as being dominated by foreign shipping interests to a preponderant degree.

"Credited as being the president's adviser on shipping is Matthew C. Brush. Mr. Brush is an official of the International Mercantile Marine, the International Mercantile Marine is controlled by the American fiscal agents of the British government. Mr. Brush's company made a contract with the British admiralty and British board of trade binding this American company to do nothing detrimental to British shipping interests, and a British official is the arbitrator in any dispute.

"British shipping interests, long having a monopoly of America's ocean carrying trade, see a menace to such monopoly in the operation of American flagships. Their effort continually has been to destroy or neutralize American flagship competition. They want to control both the ocean carrier and the freight. Charge of American goods to foreign markets. They want to protect foreign markets for the British manufacturer, as against the American manufacturer."

HARD DAY IN COURT FOR RHINELANDER

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 17—(A. P.)—Comedy and pathos chased each other across the stage of the Rhinelander annulment suit today, interspersed with arguments when the crowded courtroom gasped at frank testimony on the art of love-making.

It was a day of mental torture for Leonard Kip Rhinelander, the younger son of an aristocratic family, who seeks to win freedom from his wife, Alice Beatrice Jones, negro maid servant and daughter of a hack driver. Subjected to a merciless cross-examination hour after hour, young Rhinelander admitted swearing to five falsehoods, admitted that he had been infatuated with his wife, that he had pursued her and had taken the initiative in love-making.

Stammering and hesitating he waded through a series of intimate questions concerning his relations with her and his own love life. Yet when the day had ended almost his last statement was that he wanted to go on with the suit.

The comedy note was struck this morning when Al Jolson, blackface comedian, took the stand in the midst of Leonard's cross-examination to deny that he had ever met Alice as she had intimated in one of her letters read several days ago.

Jolson protested that he had never met her, that his life had been made miserable since her letter was published and that his wife doesn't talk to him because of it. "I'm glad this is straight now," he said. "Maybe I can eat breakfast at home tomorrow. Every time I walk from my dressing room, the orchestra plays, 'Alice Where Art Thou.'"

He left the stand with a broad grin and the spectators relieved from the tension of the trial, roared with laughter. Mr. Davis explained that the reference to Jolson was really to a local wit who had earned the name among his friends because of his fun loving proclivities.

It was in the bill of particular that Rhinelander admitted to five falsehoods, all of them concerned with the time when he first began to suspect that Alice had negro blood. At first he said he suspected it in 1922, long before the marriage, then he said it was in March 1925, when he was shown her birth certificate. The latter time he said at length was correct. The bill of particulars, he admitted was signed and sworn to by him, although he knew it was false in several paragraphs.

Today marked the beginning of the introduction of Leonard's love letters to Alice. Only nine of them were read and none contained anything comparable to the erotic passages in Alice's letters. There are about 300 of his letters which still may be introduced. Some of them, the defense has said, are quite as erotic as Alice's.

Speaking of several love passages, Mr. Davis asked:

"Don't you know you were leading her to love you by saying these things to her?" "Don't you call that deception?"

"Not exactly."

"Don't you think it was worse for you to deceive her as to your love than for her to deceive you as to her color?"

"I think her deception was worse."

Rhinelander was asked about a star sapphire ring he had given Alice and took it off his finger to display it. Alice had given it back to him, he said.

One of his letters said: "Honeybunch, you are not going to leave me and go all the way to Hartford, are you?" The next letter dated, September 9, 1922, was signed "Your Affectionate Daddy."

"Were you in love when you signed the letter that way?" asked Davis.

"I was more infatuated every day," Rhinelander admitted, however, that at first he had not contemplated marrying her. Later he said the question of her color had come up, chiefly because of her sister, Emily, having married Robert Brooks, a negro butler. Alice told him she was white, he testified, and he believed her. He had accepted Robert and Emily because they were Alice's relatives he said, admitting that he had played cards in the Brooks home and had sent affectionate postal cards to the couple.

At this point Alice became the center of attention when Mr. Davis stood beside her dejected figure and took her hat off. "Does your wife look the same now as she did when you met her?" he asked.

Young Rhinelander looked across the courtroom at his wife, squirmed in his chair and answered:

"Yes."

Young Rhinelander testified that he had signed 13 assignments of mortgages over to his attorneys. At first he thought they were for about $200,000 but later said he didn't know much about them. Leon R. Jacobs, one of his attorneys, said they were for about $50,000 some of which was to be used in the present litigation.

Rhinelander will go on the stand again for cross-examination tomorrow.

BELIEVES STORY FRAMED BY BROOKLYN POLICE

NEW YORK, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—Belief that the Brooklyn police "deliberately framed a story to avoid an arrest" in the mysterious shooting on Sunday of Mrs. George Prisco, young bride of George Prisco, son of a wealthy Manhattan banker, was expressed today by Assistant District Attorney Sylvester Sabbatino of Kings county. Evidence was being gathered, Mr. Sabbatino stated, which probably would warrant an early arrest.

Mrs. Prisco was shot in her room at the St. George hotel, Brooklyn, with a pistol belonging to her husband. She stated at the time that she had accidentally knocked the weapon from a dresser, discharging it.

In his statement today attacking the veracity of Mrs. Prisco's story as being "framed" by the police, Mr. Sabbatino termed the procedure of the police as "unusual."

Mrs. Prisco said today that she was born in Italy 23 years ago. She has been in the United States for ten years living she said, with a sister in Connecticut for several years prior to her marriage.

GROUNDS FOR DIVORCE SUIT OF MRS. CORINNE S. SPENCER

HARTFORD, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Two years ago Mrs. Corinne Sykes Spencer, of Rockville, cousin of the wife of ex-Governor Everett J. Lake, attempted to take her life by drinking poison, she admitted today in the course of her divorce suit before Judge Simpson in the superior court against Charles Luther Spencer, jr., of Suffield, president of the First National Bank of Suffield, a director of the Travelers Insurance company, of Hartford, and a relative of the Armours of Chicago. She denied that after her life had been saved by the prompt action of her husband getting a doctor that she had tried to jump out of a second story window to complete the attempt at suicide at which she had failed.

Asking for a divorce on the ground of intolerable cruelty, she recked a story in which she emphasized that it was "business first" with Spencer, that he nagged her, and his mother interfered with her to such an extent that her health was broken down and it was no longer possible to live with him. She asks the court to give her the custody of their five-year old daughter and alimony.

WARRANT FOR ARREST OF ACTOR CHARLES E. BRYANT

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 17—(A. P.)—Prosecuting Attorney Frank W. Marshof New Milford authorized the statement this afternoon that he had issued a warrant for the arrest of Charles E. Bryant, actor who yesterday married Miss Marjorie Gilhooly at the parsonage of the First Congregational church in New Milford, a special despatch to the Hartford Court from New Milford will say. Perjury committed when Bryant made what are said to be false statements when applying for his marriage license is the charge upon which the warrant was issued.

In applying for his license at the office of Town Clerk John S. Addis in New Milford, Bryant gave his age as 45, stated that he was a promoter and said this was his first marriage. Instead, it is said, Bryant had been married to Alla Naximova, now one of the shining lights on the moving picture screen. Bryant and Nazimova are said to have been married in New York May 12, 1912, and to have been divorced in Paris last summer.

ASKS ABOUT RIGHT TO HANG GERALD CHAPMAN

HARTFORD, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—Warden H. K. W. Scott, of the state prison has asked Attorney General Frank E. Healy for a legal opinion as to whether he has the right to hang Gerald Chapman. The death warrant of the superior court in which Chapman was convicted of the murder of Policeman James Skelly, of New Britain, and sentenced to be executed and the legal papers by which Chapman came into the custody of Warden Scott have been turned over to the attorney general for consideration in connection with the question.

The warden's action follows the contention by counsel for Chapman, raised in action instituted in the federal district court, that Chapman is a federal prisoner subject to a twenty-five year sentence in the Atlanta penitentiary, and was merely "loaned" to the state of Connecticut to be tried for the New Britain murder.

FOR AND AGAINST THE QUARANTINE ON BULBS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Arguments for and against the petition of the garden clubs of America, the American association of bulb dealers and other opponents of the agriculture department's quarantine against importation of the narcissus and other groups of bulbs was taken under advisement by Secretary Jardine today at the conclusion of a two-day hearing on the subject.

The hearing, which was conducted by Assistant Secretary Dunlap on behalf of the secretary, and has been marked by clashes and impassioned appeals, was closed today with appeals by American bulb growers favoring the quarantine, scheduled to become effective January 1, as a means of preventing the spread of plant diseases and developing an American industry which has sprung up since the order was promulgated three years ago.

Opponents of the quarantine expressed fear that a cutting off of the foreign supply would bring about a shortage of bulbs and high prices, and they contended that imported bulbs were not only relatively free from disease, but in this respect were superior to the domestic product.

VISITS OF COMMISSION ON STATE INSTITUTIONS

HARTFORD, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—Making the third inspection trip since the establishment of the organization, the commission on state institutions today visited the Connecticut state prison at Wethersfield. The commission is studying the requirements at all state institutions in preparation for a report and recommendation to the next general assembly.

FRENCH DEPUTIES DEBATED FINANCIAL CONDITIONS

PARIS, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—The necessity of the settlement of war debts before normal financial conditions can be restored in France was the theme of the first speakers in the debate which opened in the chamber of deputies today. The discussion was on the bills whereby M. Painleve hopes to raise six billion francs additional revenue annually.

Jacques Bubois, who is a banker as well as a deputy, declared emphatically that foreign, as well as domestic debts must be provided for before the franc could be stabilized, and that without a stabilized franc all measures to balance the budget and renovate finances would come to naugh.

The capital levy was criticized by all but one of the speakers, while none showed great enthusiasm for the measure.

REFUSED TO PRESS HER CHARES AGAINST HUSBAND

MT. VERNON, N. Y., Nov. 17—(A. P.)—A letter from Mrs. Clarence C. Baring explaining that she had refused to press her charge of attempted poisoning against her husband because she was convinced he was not responsible for his action at the time of the alleged attempt on her life was made public today by District Attorney Rowland of Westchester county.

The charges against Baring were recently dismissed when Mrs. Baring, who is now living with him in Greenwich, Conn., refused to appear as a witness against him. It had been charged by her that he had placed germs in her food.

FATALLY INJURED AND BURNED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

WATERBURY, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—Leo F. Wall, of 944 East Main street, Bridgeport, is in St. Mary's hospital here, probably fatally injured and burned as the result of an automobile accident on the Waterbury-Naugatuck road at 7 o'clock tonight. Mr. Wall, driving a small sedan toward Waterbury, crowded another automobile owned and driven by Paul Kampner, of 538 Whitney avenue, New Haven, far to the right and then collided with the rear end of Mr. Kampner's car. He then swerved across the road, went through the state highway fence and dropped fifteen feet to the trolley tracks below.

Just as the sedan landed on the tracks, a trolley car operated by W. A. Solpman, Waterbury, of the Connecticut company, came along, crashing into the already wrecked machine, hurling it up on the embankment where it burst into flames.

Before he could be removed, Mr. Wall, already badly injured, was severely burned. At the hospital it is said that his condition is extremely critical. Mr. Kampner is proprietor of the State Paint and Paper company, of 255 South Main street, this city, but lives in New Haven.

No arrests were made.

Pleasure that isn't shared with another loses half its power to please.

EXPLOSION OF STILL IN A PILE OF BRICKS

FAIRFIELD, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—A huge still, carefully concealed in what many residents thought was only a pile of bricks, exploded on Congress street in Greenfield Hill tonight, and kept firemen busy for more than three hours. The alcohol drenched ground was still smouldering at midnight.

The explosion took place about 6:30 o'clock and when firemen arrived on the scene the pile of bricks was enveloped in flames. The firemen, however, managed to drag six barrels of moonshine whiskey from the "shack." The firemen were forced to use chemicals on the blaze, there being no water system in the section.

THIRD AUTO FATALITY IN TEN DAYS IN BRIDGEPORT

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—The third automobile fatality in ten days in this city, occurred this afternoon, when Peter Pells died at St. Vincent's hospital from injuries he received when his motorcycle crashed into a parked automobile near the junction of Fairfield avenue and State street, last night.

Medical Examiner H. R. DeLoss was notified of the death and pronounced it due to a fractured skull. Coroner John J. Phelan will hold an inquest tomorrow.

Salvatore Varanella, 133 Mill street, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., driver of the parked automobile, was arrested and appeared in court today, charged with violation of the state motor vehicle laws. It is claimed his car was more than 18 inches from the curb and that he had no operator's license with him. His case was continued until November 24.

HARD DAY IN COURT FOR RHINELANDER

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 17—(A. P.)—Comedy and pathos chased each other across the stage of the Rhinelander annulment suit today, interspersed with arguments when the crowded courtroom gasped at frank testimony on the art of love-making.

It was a day of mental torture for Leonard Kip Rhinelander, the younger son of an aristocratic family, who seeks to win freedom from his wife, Alice Beatrice Jones, negro maid servant and daughter of a hack driver subjected to a merciless cross-examination hour after hour, young Rhinelander admitted swearing to five falsehoods, admitted that he had been infatuated with his wife, that he had pursued her and had taken the initiative in love-making.

Stammering and hesitating he waded through a series of intimate questions concerning his relations with her and his own love life. Yet when the day had ended almost his last statement was that he wanted to go on with the suit.

The comedy note was struck this morning when Al Jolson, blackface comedian, took the stand in the midst of Leonard's [illegible] to deny that he had ever met Alice as she had intimated in one of her letters to several days ago.

Jolson protested that he had never met her as [illegible] had been made [illegible] "Another little [illegible] Mr. Leonard, does your wife doesn't talk to [illegible] of that kind," he said. "Maybe I [illegible] at home tomorrow. Excuse me, I will from my dressing [illegible] orchestra pit." Alice [illegible] Mr. Leonard.

He left the stand with a broad grin and the spectators removed from the session of the trial seared with laughter. Mr. Jolson explained that the reason he had been ready to a local [illegible] had carried a chance among [illegible] because of his fun loving [illegible].

It was by the bill of particular that Rhinelander admitted to five falsehoods all of them concerned with the [illegible] when he first began to suspect [illegible] had begun. At first he [illegible] it was [illegible] ing her [illegible] marriage, then he said it was March 1925 when he was shown her [illegible] certificate. The latter time he at length was correct. "Not exactly."

"Don't you think it was worse for you to deceive her as to your love than for her to deceive you as to her color?"

"I think her deception was worse."

Rhinelander was asked about a star sapphire ring he had given Alice and took it off his finger to display it. Alice had given it back to him, he said.

One of his letters said: "Honeybunch, you are not going to leave me and go all the way to Hartford, are you?" The next letter dated, September 9, 1922, was signed "Your Affectionate Daddy."

"Were you in love when you signed the letter that way?" asked Davis.

"I was more infatuated every day."

FOR AND AGAINST THE QUARANTINE ON BULBS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—(AP)—Arguments for and against the petition of the garden clubs of America, the American association of bulb dealers and other opponents of the agriculture department's quarantine against importation of the narcissus and other groups of bulbs was taken under advisement by Secretary Jardine today at the conclusion of a two-day hearing on the subject.

The hearing, which was conducted by Assistant Secretary Dunlap on behalf of the secretary, and has been marked by clashes and impassioned appeals, was closed today with appeals by American bulb growers favoring the quarantine, scheduled to become effective January 1, as a means of preventing the spread of plant diseases and developing an American industry which has sprung up since the order was promulgated three years ago.

Opponents of the quarantine expressed fear that a cutting off of the foreign supply would bring about a shortage of bulbs and high prices, and they contended that imported bulbs were not only relatively free from disease, but in this respect were superior to the domestic product.

FRENCH DEPUTIES DEBATED FINANCIAL CONDITIONS

PARIS, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—The necessity of the settlement of war debts before normal financial conditions can be restored in France was the theme of the first speakers in the debate which opened in the chamber of deputies today. The discussion was on the bills whereby M. Painleve hopes to raise six billion francs additional revenue annually.

Jacques Bulloin, who is a banker as well as a deputy, declared emphatically that foreign, as well as domestic debts must be provided for before the franc could be stabilized, and that without a stabilized franc all measures to balance the budget and renovate finances would come to naught.

The capital levy was criticized by all but one of the speakers, while none showed great enthusiasm for the measure.

REFUSED TO PRESS HER CHARES AGAINST HUSBAND

MT. VERNON, N. Y., Nov. 17—(A. P.)—A letter from Mrs. Clarence C. Baring explaining that she had refused to press her charge of attempted poisoning against her husband because she was convinced he was not responsible for his action at the time of the alleged attempt on her life was made public today by District Attorney Rowland of Westchester county.

The charges against Baring were recently dismissed when Mrs. Baring, who is now living with him in Greenwich, Conn., refused to appear as a witness against him. It had been charged by her that he had placed germs in her food.

FATALLY INJURED AND BURNED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

WATERBURY, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—Leo F. Wall, of 944 East Main street, Bridgeport, is in St. Mary's hospital here, probably fatally injured and burned as the result of an automobile accident on the Waterbury-Naugatuck road at 7 o'clock tonight. Mr. Wall, driving a small sedan toward Waterbury, crowded another automobile owned and driven by Paul Kampner, of 534 Whitney avenue, New Haven, far to the right and then collided with the rear end of Mr. Kampner's car. He then swerved across the road, went through the state highway fence and dropped fifteen feet to the trolley tracks below.

Just as the sedan landed on the tracks, a trolley car operated by W. A. Soloman, Waterbury, of the Connecticut company, came along, crashing into the already wrecked machine, hurling it up on the embankment where it burst into flames.

Before he could be removed, Mr. Wall, already badly injured, was severely burned. At the hospital it is said that his condition is extremely critical. Mr. Kampner is proprietor of the State Paint and Paper company, of 353 South Main street, this city, but lives in New Haven.

No arrests were made.

Pleasure that isn't shared with another loses half its power to please.

EXPLOSION OF STILL IN A PILE OF BRICKS

FAIRFIELD, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—A huge still, carefully concealed in what many residents thought was only a pile of bricks, exploded on Congress street in Greenfield Hill tonight, and kept firemen busy for more than three hours. The alcohol drenched ground was still smouldering at midnight.

The explosion took place about 6:30 o'clock and when firemen arrived on the scene the pile of bricks was enveloped in flames. The firemen however managed to drag six barrels of moonshine whiskey from the "shack." The firemen were forced to use chemicals on the blaze, there being no water system in the section.

That addition was not satisfactory, in that it is not of a substantial nature and recently it has been discovered that the addition has moved on the foundation. Princess Bonnie

Princess Bonnie is here. Yes, Princess Bonnie will be at the Broadway theatre again this Wednesday evening to give Mr. and Mrs. Public of eastern Connecticut one of the best entertainments ever produced by local talent.

The packed house at the opening performance on Tuesday night gave demonstration of its approval of the production and the manner in which 100 of our own Norwich young people put the play across the footlights.

The work of the principals needs no praising in this column for the entire story is being told in the news section giving the names of all those who made the production a huge success.

There are still a number of fine seats for the entertainment this evening and you may secure them by phoning for reservations to the box office of the Broadway theatre or by dropping in yourselves and making your choice.

If we are not wrong the seats will be hard to find after last nights' entertainment and you should be among those present to watch the production and get a first hand view of the splendid work being done by the principals and entire cast.

Robert O. Fletcher post, American Legion is proud of the production and you will be also once you see it. Good bye' till 1926.

Breed Theater

In a hurried visit made to the New York Fox studios by John Ford, who directed The Iron Horse now playing at the Breed theater, he recalled his unusual experiences in filming the picture on the deserts of Nevada.

Three years were required to complete The Iron Horse. Members of the cast and nearly 5,000 extras and workmen lived through the arduous months on the desert and in the Sierra ranges, tents and lean-to shanties enduring the same hardships so far as the elements were concerned as those experienced by the transcontinental railroad pioneers they portrayed.

Two complete towns were built in a setting as picturesque as that which surrounded Benton at end of track in the days when eastern newspapers described the settlement as "hell on wheels."

Three tribes of Indians were gathered there, living in teepees and some merely in blankets, sprawling on the open ground. There was one of Cheyennes another of Pawnees and a third of Sioux. They got along peaceably, but did not mingle among tribes. To feed the extras, it was necessary to employ 100 cooks and assistants. When supplies ran low a burro train was sent to the nearest town and until the necessities came in, they lived on what they had. It wasn't always enough for comfort.

Palace Theatre

The new Charlie Chaplin motion picture comedy, "The Gold Rush," has been described by those closely associated with the world's greatest comedian as a symbolical autobiography of the great star himself.

With that genius which peculiarly is Chaplin's own, and against a background of the Klondike gold stampede into Alaska, the screen-comedian has depicted with subtly tender and delicate master strokes, the struggle of man's eternal search for happiness, its heartbreaks and its tears; its humor, its laughter and its joys.

Charlie of the little derby hat, the tricky little cane, the baggy trousers, the mustache, the waddling walk and big shoes,—the man who has made more laughs for the world than any other living comedian has built in "The Gold Rush," a delightful structure of fun and hilariousness, which comes to the Palace theatre next Sunday under a United Artists Corporation release.

On the tragedy and misery suffered by the pioneers who first journeyed into Alaska, and on the dramatics of the soul sufferings of the "sourdough" who braved mountains, ice, snow, starvation, death, in their mad rush for gold, Charlie Chaplin has built the funniest and most laugh-producing comedy of his career.

He has cast himself in the role of the hard-luck "sourdough" who chases rainbows of the heart and of the acuy in the midst of a struggling mob that pursues one thing only—gold, and nothing but gold. Pathos and suffering are converted by the Chaplin genius into laughter and comedy; and there is a laugh in every one of the nearly nine thousand feet of film in "The Gold Rush."

Roots and Herbs Used in Medicine

The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., of Lynn, Mass., is recognized as the greatest user of roots and herbs in the world. Over half a million pounds are used annually in manufacturing Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. These herbs are gathered with the greatest care at the season of the year when the medicinal elements which they contain are at their best. NEGRO WAS TAKEN TO BALTIMORE FOR SAFETY

CENTERVILLE, Md., Nov. 17—(A. P.)—Joshua Tiller, negro, saved by the steel doors of the Queen Anne's county jail here from lynching at the hands of a mob last night, today was taken to Baltimore for safe keeping. Sheriff T. Frank Seward, Magistrate Robert Coursey and a squad of Maryland state police sent to the scene by Governor Ritchie, conducted the prisoner out of town before the plans for his removal became generally known. Tiller is accused of attacking a four-year old girl at Millington, Md., last Friday.

The move to place the negro in safer quarters was made after a conference of county authorities in which fear was expressed that tonight other residents of Queen Anne's county would reinforce the mob of between 200 and 30 0men which stormed the jail last night, to be foiled by steel doors separating the cells from the sheriff's residence. Last night's attackers, the sheriff said, were made up principally of farmers and young men from the vicinity of Millington.

Centerville remained quiet today with the state's attorney in possession of authority from Governor Ritchie to call out the Salisbury company of national guardsmen if needed.

TUT'S MUMMY REVEALS SKILL OF GOLDSMITHS

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 17—(A. P.)—The preliminary examinatne of the mummy of Tut-Ankh-Amen bears witness to the great refinement of the goldsmiths art of the eighteenth dynasty. Among the most important objects found at the unwrapping Saturday and Sunday were two groups of finger rings, numbering thirteen and twenty circlets. The whole chest was covered with magnificently executed gold pectorals, two of which were in the form of the Upper Egyptian vulture Nehkbet and the Lower Egyptian serpent Buto. Beneath these were smaller, but even more beautiful, pectorals, intricately designed, including winged scarabs and sacred eyes.

There was also a marvelous flying vulture, exemplifying the finest goldsmiths art. This was encrusted with aiplis lazuli and carnelian, and resembles jewelry of the middle empire in its refinements.

The body of the Pharoah is in a bad state of preservation, but it is hoped that the head, from which the protective mask has not been removed will prove to be in better condition. Doctors who have made an examination maintain that the king was about eighteen years of age.

BEAUTY
Gleamy, Thick, Wavy Hair in a Moment

Quick Tip-ons: When combing and dressing your hair just moisten your hair brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair. The effect is startling! You can dress your hair immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy, an abundance of gleamy wavy hair, sparkling with life, inimparably soft, fresh, and lustrous.

Besides beautifying the hair a 35-cent bottle of refreshing, fragrant "Danderine" from any drug or toilet counter will do wonders, particularly if the hair is dry, thin, brittle, faded or streaked with gray from constant curling and waving which burn the hair, lustre and very life from any woman's hair.

"Danderine" acts on the hair like fresh showers of rain and sunshine act on vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates, nourishes, and strengthens them, stopping falling hair and helping the hair to grow thick, healthy and luxuriant.

MONTVILLE MAN'S CAR FOUND IN PROVIDENCE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 17.—Leo Roddy and Herbert Mills, soldiers, stationed at West Point, will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow morning on a charge of automobile theft. The pair were taken into custody in Providence at 3:30 o'clock this morning, after they had stolen a machine in this city owned by Orla E. Skinner, of Montville.

Skinner came to New London early last evening and parked his car on Bank street, between State and Golden streets, while he attended a theater. When Skinner returned to where he had left his Chevrolet sedan, he discovered that it had been stolen. Skinner went to the police station and reported his loss. A request was made to the state police and the authorities at Norwich, Westerly, Hartford and New Haven to be on the lookout for the stolen machine. About 3:30 o'clock the Providence police observed a car being driven in a suspicious manner by one of the two soldiers who accupied it and when the two men were questioned they related suspicious stories of how they came to be in Providence and operating it without a license. As the registration of the car showed that it belonged in New London or vicinity, the Providence police communicated with the New London authorities and it was revealed that the car was the machine that was stolen in this city earlier in the night. The soldiers were locked up. This afternoon Sergeants Nelson Smith and John Cavanaugh went to Providence and took charge of the prisoners, arriving back in New London this evening.

Both Roddy and Mills admit taking the machine and stated that they were trying to get to Woonsocket, R. I. They are a part of 1,500 soldiers, who are stationed at West Point for the purpose of drilling the cadets in marching, handling of guns and instructing the cadets in drills.

PARK OR PLAYGROUND POSSIBLE AT BATES' WOODS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 17.—Bates' woods, just north and west of the city's town farm, may be made use of by the city for a recreation park or perhaps for an aviation field, if it is desired to; that purpose. It is the most romantic spot within the boundaries of this city or Waterford and might be developed so that it would be the wonder place of this region. There are some fine specimens of chestnut and oak trees on the tract and the ledges of granite there are unequalled hereabouts. Water flows through the land in abundance, so that could be diverted and stored that it might be made use of. The cliffs are enormous and ravines traverse the place.

It was suggested at the time the city acquired the land that a park might be established there, and that idea was based upon good sense and an appreciation of the wonderful possibilities that were to be opened up. Now the city council has taken the matter up and will cause a survey of the land to be made, that when the development comes it will be in a direction of enhancing the beauty of the spot and establishing a park or playgrounds that will be appreciated by all who may frequent the place. The development of the woods will cost a considerable sum, but the expense need not all be incurred at one time, as the formation of the land and the surroundings make it possible to do the work at intervals and in units that will assimilate harmoniously.

PAN-A-CE-A
Puts hens in laying trim

You can feed as you will, care for as you may, but until your flock is in trim to lay, eggs will be scarce.

Just add Poultry Pan-a-ce-a with every 50 pounds of mash or one tablespoonful to every 30 hens once a day.

Then watch the change come over your flock, see the combs and wattles begin to turn red. Listen to the song, scratch and cackle.

That's a sign of getting ready for business.

Remember, you buy Pan-a-ce-a like this: for 100 hens, the 12-pound package; 60 hens, the 5-pound package; 200 hens, the 25-pound pail; 500 hens, the 100-pound drum.

You feed that package, all of it, on the more-eggs-or-no-pay way.

WATER AND POWER OPENING UNRECLAIMED AREAS OF WEST

GUERNSEY, Wy., Nov. 17 (AP)—Water and power, more precious than gold in unreclaimed parts of the west, are coming to help towns and industries where waste land desert stretch into sections of two states.

Government workers are building a great dam on the Platte river, here, as another step in the development of isolated sections. The dam will supply water to hundreds of farmers living in an area of 270,000 acres in Wyoming and Nebraska. The dam also will protect them against flood waters when snow melts in the mountains.

"A United States Of Europe"

KEYSTONE VIEW CO., NEW YORK

Louis Loucheur, leader of the Radical Left of the Chamber of Deputies, who claims that tariff laws, etc., should be abolished in Europe, and treaties made whereby all the industries throughout Europe would amalgamate the same as in the United States, in order to flourish in the future. Business between Paris and Berlin should be as easy, and as remunerative as that between New York and Chicago, but tariff laws prevent this. Abolishing customs frontiers would make for a United States of Europe. It is rumored that Loucheur is to succeed Joseph Caillaux as Finance Minister, as the latter is expected to resign.

Saying mean things is the one bad habit cultivated most assiduously by the average woman.

POETRY

The Sandpiper

Across the narrow beach we flit,
One little sandpiper and I,
And fast I gather, bit by bit,
The scattered driftwood bleached and dry.
The wild waves reach their hands for it,
The wild wind raves, the tide runs high,
As up and down the beach we flit—
One little sandpiper and I.

Above our heads the sullen clouds
Scud black and swift across the sky;
Like silent ghosts in misty shrouds
Stand out the white lighthouses high.
Almost as far as eye can reach
I see the close-reefed vessels fly,
As fast as flit along the beach—
One little sandpiper and I.

I watch him as he skims along,
Uttering his sweet and mournful cry.
He starts not at my fitful song,
Or flash of fluttering drapery.
He has no thought of any wrong;
He scans me with a fearless eye;
Staunch friends are we, well tried and strong,
The little sandpiper and I.

Comrade, where wilt thou be tonight
When the loosed storm breaks furiously?
My driftwood fire will burn so bright!
To what warm shelter canst thou fly?
I do not fear for thee, though wroth
The tempest rushes through the sky;
For are we not God's children both,
Thou, little sandpiper, and I?
—Celia Thaxter.

The Tutelage

In the coiled shell sounds Ocean's distant roar,
Off to our listening hearts come heavenly strains;—
Men say, "That was the blood in our own veins,"
And think but the echo of our hope: no more.
And yet, the murmuring sea exists, with its lore
That trail creation o'er its waters plains,
And on Time's sand full many a shell remains
Tossed by Eternity upon its shore.
Its tongue our hope from Nature's self has taught
Matter our force in lost as seems each thought,
And mind?—Love life conserves and death abates.—
Through the long ages this has nature taught,
Under the stars she plights the wistful suit:
"Life ruled by Love nor dies nor dissipates."
—Robert Mowry Bell.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"Are you related to her by marriage?"

"No, but I'm her brother by refusal."—Columbia Jester.

"Are you familiar with Browning?"

"Yes, I've been a baker for twelve years."—University of Pittsburgh Panther.

"What is the modern girl coming to," commented Mrs. Oldwed.

"Slowly, but surely," replied Mr. Oldwed, "to the perusal of life when she will ask the very same question."—Judge.

"What are you going to give Margie for Christmas?"

"Nothing."

"Engagement broke?"

"No—I am." — Boston University Beanpot.

Prospective Tenant: If I paper this place, what rent you are asking, I'm afraid I won't be able to keep the wolf from the door.

House Agent: The janitor will attend to that, sir. No animals of any kind are allowed in this building.—The Progressive Grocer.

Willie was being measured for his first made-to-order suit of clothes.

"Do you want the shoulders padded, my little man?" inquired the tailor.

"Naw—pad me pants."—Bucknell Belle Hop.

Storekeeper—Sorry, but I'm all sold out of wild ducks. I could let you have a fine end of ham.

Sportsman—Don't be absurd! How could I go home and say I shot an end of ham?—Philadelphia Bulletin.

"It's no good mincing matters," said the doctor, "you are very bad. Is there anybody you would specially like to see?"

"Yes," replied the patient faintly.

"Who is it?" queried the doctor.

"Another doctor, please," whispered the invalid.—Louisville Courier Journal.

The complete works of Goethe are being translated by a staff of Czech translators under the direction of Professor Ottokar Fischer. The object is the publication of a Czech edition of Goethe, which will be the first of his complete works published in a language other than German.

An increase in the number of deserted babies in Ireland prompted the union commissioners to order that finger prints be taken of babies under three months of age who are discharges from the maternity hospital of Pellestown. The action was inspired by a letter from Miss Dugdale, a woman barrister, who pointed out that such a scheme would aid the police in discovering the mother or foster mother of a deserted child.

The Korean nobility, with the exception of a few propertied peers, is reported to be suffering from extreme poverty. Several of the nobles, who were once wealthy are now working as cart pullers and performing other menial tasks as the only means of escaping starvation.

At the time of the annexation of Korea by Japan, about sixty of the leading Koreans were created peers and received property from the Japanese government. Most of them ran through this property rapidly. Recently thirty of the impoverished Korean nobles sent a petition to the Japanese government asking for financial assistance.

Dr. D. E. Scott, who recently returned to Edmonton, Alberta, after one year at Aklavik, in the delta of the Mackenzie river, predicted that not many years would elapse before the Eskimo would be exterminated by disease through adopting white men's ways of living. Eskimos and Indians of the delta are suffering from intestinal parasitic attacks, due to eating raw fish, rabbits and other meats, said the doctor, but these are not so serious a problem as cancer and appendicitis, which are becoming prevalent. Since the Eskimos have been living in cabins and shacks instead of snow houses, as in the olden days, tuberculosis has ravaged them. Ninety per cent. of the delta people had symptoms of tuberculosis, he asserted.

MARKET WAS UNSETTLED

NEW YORK, Nov. 17—(By the A. P.)—Price movements in today's stock market lacked uniformity. Selling orders predominated at the opening with the result that quotations ran off into 3 points during the morning, but a rally set in during the afternoon and continued until the last hour when selling pressure was renewed against a number of recent favorites.

Final quotations disclosed a large number of issues ending from 1 to 3 points and a somewhat smaller number of losses running from 1 to 5 points. The market had gotten itself into a difficult position during several sessions of recent weeks and the setback was not unexpected in the twenty-fifth consecutive session.

Early selling appears to have had its origin in the belief that increases in the New York and Chicago reserve discounting rates and the resulting curb on the credit rate would make money more expensive and restrictive conditions on the long pull. The realization that the announcement of higher gasoline prices in the mid-continent field and the declaration of a stock dividend of 20 per cent. on Imperial Oil, Canadian subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company, had not been followed by the anticipated buying of the Van Sweringen issues, Chesapeake and Ohio duplicated this year's high of 215 1-2 and then eased to 214 5-8 for a net gain of 1 3-8. "Nickel Plate" common soared 6 points to a new record top at 165 and the preferred duplicated the high of 98 1-2. Heavy buying of the St. Paul issues in reflection of the progress being made with the Kuhn, Loeb-National City reorganization plan was another feature of the rail group.

Standard industrials were mixed. U. S. Steel's common closed nearly a point lower at 124 1-2 after having sold above 133 in the early trading, and American Can showed a net loss of 2 3-8 at 231 5-8. Baldwin advanced nearly a point to 125 3-8.

There were several strong spots in the industrial list. Foundation company advanced nearly 7 points to a new peak at 183 3-4 and the preferred subsidiary "rights" touched a new top at 56 1-2, as against the initial quotation of 15 yesterday. International Nickel was heavily bought and advanced over 5 points to a new top at 49 3-4. American Ice, American Water Works, the Commercial Solvents issues, Reynolds and Reynolds, Fisk Rubber first preferred, Ingersoll Rand (New) International Telephone, Standard Milling and West Penn Power registered gains ranging from 2 to 10 points. U. S. Gypsum Pipe broke 8 points to 75 and Coleman Bakery, Stromberg Carburetor, Universal Pipe preferred and Worthington Pump all sold off 5 points or more.

Call money held firm at 5 per cent. all day. Time money was relatively steady with 4 7-8 per cent. The ruling rate for all maturities and prime commercial paper continued unchanged at 4 1-4 per cent.

With the exception of Norwegian krone, which rallied about 8 points to 13.45 cents, most of the principal European exchange rates were slightly retrogressionary.

Demand sterling ruled around 4.84 and French francs fluctuated within a few points of 4.00 cents.

TAFTVILLE

The Thimble club met last week at the home of Mrs Allan Bogle of Providence street.

For the past four months, owners of radio sets are unable to obtain satisfactory results from their outfits, as there appears to be a disturbance other than regenerative noises which is a source of annoyance to them. A committee of three has been appointed to find some means of locating the disturbance and eliminating it. This committee consists of George W. Weller, Napoleon T. Parent and George H. Young. One of the "fans" said Tuesday that it would probably be necessary to employ an expert to ascertain the difficulty.

The Ocowasin Camp Fire girls entertained the A-o-wa-ki-yn group at a party in the vestry of the Taftville Congregational church Tuesday evening.

NORWICH TOWN

Rose Ready Circle of the King's Daughters is to hold a meeting this (Wednesday) evening, at the home of Miss Ethel B. Whaley of Mediterranean Lane.

George F. Hyde of Washington street, leaves today (Wednesday) to pass the remainder of this week in Bridgeport, where for eleven years he was assistant secretary of the Young Men's Christian association. During this period Mr. Hyde was in charge of the boys' department, which had a membership of that time of about 300 boys. He came from there to Norwich.

PUTS BLAME ON CROSSING TENDER IN $10,000 SUIT AGAINST RAILROAD

Negligence of the railroad's crossing tender at the Noank station is ascribed as the cause for the death of John Apgar of Stonington in a suit for $10,000 damages that has been brought against the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad company by Henry J. Marfikle of Stonington, administrator of Apgar's estate. The suit was filed here Tuesday at the superior court clerk's office and is returnable in December. Apgar was killed September 30 1925 at the Noank station. He was driving a motor truck and it is alleged in the suit that he drove onto the tracks to reach a landing platform at the station, when the crossing tender gave him the signal to go across the tracks although a train was due. The truck was hit by an east bound train at 4:30 p. m. and Apgar was killed.

For Insurance on Steamer

Suit for $10,000 damages against the Automobile Insurance Co. of Hartford to collect insurance on a vessel has been brought by Melville Smith of New London and Central Fairfield Trust Co. of Norwalk to whom Reuben K. Hagarty had assigned his claim against the insurance company.

It is stated in the complaint in the suit that Hagarty was about to purchase the steamer "Atlantic" from Smith on June 24, 1925, the boat then being at Charleston, S. C., and the insurance company agreed to cover the boat on the trip to Bridgeport. He bought the boat on June 27, the insurance company issued a binder on June 29, but did not issue a policy. The boat sank at North Charleston and the insurance company has denied liability and has refused to pay the insurance claim.

The suit is returnable before the superior court in this county in December.

DR. HANFORD OWNS NEVADA MINING CLAIMS

The Tonopah, Nevada, Daily Times of Nov. 4th, had the following reference to a former well known Norwich resident, Dr. William J. Hanford, a practicing physician with offices and residence at 112 Franklin street, later at 121 Broadway, corner of Willow street. Since leaving Norwich Dr. Hanford has spent much time in California. The Tonopah paper says:

"A party of California mining men, looking for lead or lead-silver mines, arrived in Tonopah last evening on their way to the Death Valley country, where they have bought the Riggs mine, situated two miles from the Tonopah & Tidewater Railroad, in the Panamints. The property is one of the richest in the desert region and during the life of Riggs, the locator and former owner, it was a current remark among the miners of that section that when Riggs took out a handful of ore, he had money enough to live on for another year.

The purchaser is J. V. Lehigh, son of D. F. Lehigh, who proposes organizing for big scale production, including the installation of a complete electrical equipment and the construction of a 100 ton concentrating mill, that will work a marked economy in marketing his product. The party includes D. F. Lehigh, Dr. W. J. Hanford, and S. F. Hopkins. Every one of the party is engaged in actual mining and the individuals are accustomed to working on a large scale.

From this mine the former owner shipped $175 000 worth of ore during his operations extending over 15 years. Silver preponderates in the content and the dumps return values of $25, (with some high grade, that ran as high as $9,000.

The party came in last evening from Blind Springs Mountain, close to Benton, below the Desert Queen mine, on which extensive development is in progress. The Hanford owns the Borasco group of fourteen claims adjoining the Comanche Mining company's ground, which carry every ledge of the Comanche, which has proven up enormous reserves from winzes sunk from the Comanche tunnel to a depth of 650 feet below the tunnel floor, with the main vein showing a width of six feet of silver lead ore with the black metal values running up to $100 per ton in carload lots.

The Comanche has expended $750,000 on development and is perfectly satisfied with their investment.

The group is to be developed by a shaft to cut the vein at a depth of 1,000 feet. The shaft is now down a length of 650 feet, with a crosscut path of 20 feet already completed by January 20th.

[illegible] Plaintiff of $[illegible]

[illegible] by Judge Charles [illegible] of the court of common pleas [illegible] a decision handed down Tuesday in the case of Mary Butler of Norwich against Sadie A. Avery of Champlin, which was recently heard in Norwich. The plaintiff claimed damages of $100.

TRYING $35,000 SUIT AGAINST NEW LONDON

Trial in the $35,000 damage suit of Miss Johanna Keating of 812 Huntington street against the city of New London was begun in the superior court here Tuesday before Judge Christopher L. Avery and a jury. The city was represented by Director of Law Charles B. Whittlesey and Former Director of Law Frank L. McGuire, while the plaintiff was represented by Attorney Perry J. Hollandersky, and Attorney Arthur M. Brown.

Miss Keating, who upon the witness stand stated that she had once been employed as a housekeeper in the home of Chauncey Depew and others, sues for damages for injuries received on Feb. 14, 1925, when she fell upon the sidewalk in Huntington street between numbers 305 and 307. In the complaint Miss Keating alleged that she slipped upon ice, fracturing her hip and is now permanently disabled.

The plaintiff alleges that the sidewalk upon which she fell was defective and out of repair, coated with ice and snow and wholly unfit for safe public travel; that the city was negligent in allowing such a condition to exist, well knowing of the danger. She also alleged that the walk was not sanded.

She claimed to have expended large sums for hospital treatment.

George K. Crandall, former city engineer, was the first witness and he displayed a map of the street and pointed out upon it the place where the accident took place. He was followed by Perry B. Kenyon, a photographer who presented pictures of the place which he claimed he took two days following the accident.

The plaintiff was next called to the stand and with tears streaming down her face, she, with the aid of crutches went to the witness chair. She stated that prior to her injuries, she was a caterer and proceeded to tell of the accident. She stated that she left her home about 6:15 p. m. on the night of the accident and wore rubbers and ice creepers. She said that it was her custom to walk in the street near the gutter during icy weather but because of the heavy traffic the night in question she kept on the sidewalk.

She told of slipping and falling, after which Edward Coe, who was across the street, rushed to her aid, but was unable to lift her. He got assistance and he, with three others, carried her into the house. Dr. C. F. Ferris was called and he called Dr. Daniel Sullivan. The physicians discovered that her hip was fractured and she was taken to the Lawrence and Memorial Association hospital, where she remained for 13 weeks, out of which, she said, she did not get 24 hours sleep all told and was in continual agony.

Dr. Ferris was called to the stand, as was Dr. Sullivan and both testified that the plaintiff was permanently injured.

Dononh Segal, of the hospital, also testified as to the plaintiff's stay in the hospital.

Certain spots in the photograph presented by Mr. Kenyon, were shown in court to have been sand, but the plaintiff stated that there was no sand upon the walk that night.

Miss Neoma Keating testified to the injuries to her sister and to the icy and slippery condition that she saw in the street. Edwin W. Coe and John Ashcraft, who helped pick the injured woman up and carry her into the house told of the slippery and icy condition of the sidewalks of the driveway between the Underhill and Hazard houses, No. 307 and No. 305 Huntington street. Margaret A. Hogan, Monroe A. Walwork and John Edward Mitchell gave testimony as to the slippery conditions Mr. Ashcraft, who used this street twice daily in going to and from his work with the telephone company, testified that there had been no sand scattered on the walk for a week before the accident, but there was something there the day afterwards. He could not tell whether it was sand or ashes.

Thomas C. Dillon, weather bureau man in New London, gave testimony from his records as to the weather from Feb. 1 on, showing that there had been six snow storms with a total fall of 15 inches. After his testimony, the plaintiff rested.

George P. Bishop, a New London photographer was the first witness for the city, identifying two pictures of the location on Huntington street that he took on Feb 16. Kenneth H. Holmes, assistant engineer in the New London street department, explained a plan that he had made of the location and also a profile plan from the sidewalk into the street, showing where the snow was piled up and where the ice was.

Court adjourned at about 4:50 to continue trial of the case the next day.

The jury on the case is the following, all the others having been excused till next Tuesday:

Orrin B Lellingwell, Wellington A. Miner, Frank W. Brewster, S. Clinton Rogers, Norwich; James T. Shea, Frank C. Whiting, Charles Latham, Griswold; Edward H. McCall, Jr. Lebanon; Jabez L. Bailey, Jerome Taylor, [illegible] George W. Cole, Sprague, [illegible] W. Hatch, Voluntown.

CHRIST CHURCH BAZAAR HAS LARGE PATRONAGE

Tuesday afternoon and evening the annual holiday bazaar of Christ Episcopal church was held at the Wauregan hotel ball room, having a large attendance and a generous patronage for the many tempting wares that were offered and the event scored a most gratifying success for the workers, both from the financial and the social standpoint.

Two innovations that were well received were in the serving of tea at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when English muffins, tea and wafers were enjoyed, this being followed at 6 with a supper of chicken salad, rolls, coffee and cake.

The men provided an unusual feature by having a table arranged in the form of an old country store, carrying all kinds of merchandise. The men added the right atmosphere by appearing in store "rigs."

The Junior Auxiliary had an attractive table, which offered Christmas novelties, and there were also a baby table, food table, candy table and a fish pond that proved popular.

The general chairman for the bazaar was Mrs. Beverly M. Bliven, with whom was associated as an executive committee, the full vestry, the heads and officers of all the parish organizations. SECOND CLASS TESTS FOR SCOUT LEADERS

Second class tests for scout leadership were conducted in Mohegan park when a group met there Saturday afternoon. Fire making and cooking without utensils were demonstrated and a winding trail that was laid out was successfully followed by the trail masters.

Scout pace was practiced over a road rule course which the scout was required to follow in six minutes, 50 walking steps and 50 running steps alternately. Two of the men did it in six minutes flat and the remainder qualified within a margin of a minute. This test is a measure of endurance and not a speed test, the idea being that a scout can follow this for a certain period of time, twelve minutes to the mile, and thereby compute any distance traveled.

The next meeting will be the usual one at Scout headquarters.

SHIP & ENGINE WILL BUILD STEEL FERRYBOAT

The New London Ship and Engine Co. has closed a contract with the Brooksville and Morristown Transportation Co., of Morristown, N. Y., for a steel ferryboat to be used on the St. Lawrence river. The vessel will be fitted with a 300-horsepower Diesel engine of the latest type.

Both engine and hull will be constructed at the Groton plant of the company and early delivery has been guaranteed. President Lawrence Y. Spear of the Ship and Engine Co., stated Monday that the present force of the plant was sufficient to complete the vessel and that it would not be necessary to make any material addition to the company's force.

The Ship and Engine Co., has two submarines on the ways at the present time and nearly completed. The boats are being built for the Peruvian government.

WOULD ERECT MONUMENT FOR LEBANON MAN

At the last regular meeting of Trumbull chapter, D. A. R., which was held at the home of Mrs. David Pitcher in Lebanon, with the regent, Mrs. Laura C. McCall presiding a letter was read which had been received by First Selectman K. E. Bishop from the Beaumont Medical Research association asking the permission of the selectmen of Lebanon to erect at the north end of the green a memorial tablet to the memory of William Beaumont who was born in Lebanon in 1785. He made experiments on digestion with a man who received a gunshot wound in the stomach leaving a large opening through which a tube was inserted and food passed through. Mr. Beaumont kept the man at his own expense to study his case. This was such a help to medical science that a medical society was named for him and now wishes to honor his memory in the town of his birth. He died in St. Louis, Mo., April 25, 1853.

Very interesting current events were given by Mrs. David Pitcher and Mrs. O. L. Fuller.

A paper on Nathaniel Wales, member of the council of safety was given by Mrs. Donald Collins. The meeting closed with the D. A. R. pledge to the Flag.

Eleven members and 2 visitors were present. Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Edna Pitcher and Mrs. Hortense Pultz.

FOR FURTHER DISCUSSION OF TRAFFIC SITUATION

The discussion at the meeting of the directors of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce on November 6 regarding the co-ordination of rail, trolley, bus and truck agencies in Connecticut developed into such a long session that it has been necessary for President E. E. Rogers of the chamber to call an adjourned meeting for November 20 at New Haven, at which the directors in executive session will formulate a policy.

The importance of the transportation problem in Connecticut at the present time was evidenced by the fact that the meeting of the chamber directors on November 6 was the largest that has been held in many months. Representatives of the various transportation interests appeared before the directors at this meeting and gave their viewpoints.

OVERHEATING HOUSES CONDEMNED BY DR. GAGER

Dr. Leslie T. Gager, of New York, formerly of Norwich, writes to a New York paper condemning the American custom of overheating houses. In the course of his letter he says:

"There are two essential physical laws that control this situation: The first, that moist air conducts heat effectively, and dry air does not; and second that when the cold air of winter, with its relatively small content of water vapor, is heated, say from 20 to 70 Fahrenheit, the amount of moisture is diminished excessively, with a dry kiln effect as the result, and characteristic affection on woodwork, furniture and people.

"The vicious circle results from the facts, as Dr. Gager puts it, that 'the higher the temperature, the lower is the relative humidity, and the lower the relative humidity, the more necessary it is to have a high so-called comfort temperature.' The result is hypersensitiveness on the part of the occupants of the hothouse and the kiln.

"The relief of this situation, as Gager points out, is an engineering problem that has not been solved, nor apparently ever been seriously considered as a problem to be solved. If we can keep more moisture in the atmosphere of our homes and offices, we can dispense with a number of degrees of temperature and still be comfortable. This happy and healthful mean was indicated by the frosty window panes of our old homes, and we need to get them back again if our natural resistance to infections is to remain high.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE CONN. MANUFACTURERS' ASS'N

E. Kent Hubbard Re-elected President—Addresses Made on Important Subjects—Resolutions Were Passed Covering a Wide Range of Subjects—At Banquet Last Evening President Angell of Yale, Senator Bingham and Secretary of Labor Davis Were the Speakers.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 18.—(A. P.)—E. Kent Hubbard was re-elected president of the Connecticut Manufacturers' association, at the annual meeting of the association held here today with representatives from all parts of the state present. Addresses on important subjects were made during the afternoon, committees made their reports, and President Hubbard gave a review of the activities of the year.

A banquet was held this evening at which President James R. Angell, of Yale university, United States Senator Hiram Bingham and Secretary of Labor James W. Davis, were the speakers.

John H. Goss, president of the Scovill Manufacturing company, of Waterbury, presided at the series of half hour talks this afternoon. Professor Fred R. Fairchild, of Yale, spoke on "the present tax situation" and President Hubbard on "co-ordination of transportation agencies."

Walter G. Merritt, who had been scheduled to speak on "the anthracite strike," was unable to be present. His place was taken by C. F. Dietz, president of the Bridgeport Brass company, who spoke on "industrial relations." He emphasized the importance of the foreman as a connecting link between management and labor.

Other officers elected were: Vice president, John H. Goss; secretary and treasurer, Robert C. Buell; directors, Geo. H. Curtis, agent of the American Thread company, of Whitinsville; Joseph E. Horne, vice president of the Yale and Towne Manufacturing company, of Stamford; E. F. Farnsworth, president and treasurer of the Eastern Machinery company, of New Haven, and H. H. Pease, president and treasurer of the New Britain Machine company, of New Britain.

During the afternoon programme, P. E. Chase, president of the Chase Companies, of Waterbury, presented President Hubbard an ebony gavel in the name of the directors and former directors of the association.

Resolutions were adopted favoring repeal of the federal gift and estate taxes, a substantial reduction in the excess on individual incomes, and expressing unqualified opposition to the publicity section of the present income tax law as "un-American, unsound, and productive of results which react to the detriment of the individual and the nation."

Resolutions were also adopted commending the action of the administration in its "debt settlement of the nation as a whole, and expressing concern over the temporary arrangements with France which defers the question of settlement for a total of twelve years from the conclusion of war" and "in danger of further weakening the credit and position of that country and as a further menace to the rehabilitation of normal business relations." The resolutions urge that the French government be requested to take up the question with this country again.

An unexpected feature of the banquet tonight was the introduction of President Angell who discussed the university's attitude toward the industries of Connecticut.

Connecticut has long been essentially an industrial state, and the university regarded itself as an integral part of the state, he said. As such, it was peculiarly eager to keep itself in intimate contact with the industries of Connecticut.

After mentioning the co-operative relationship which puts the research laboratories of Yale at the disposal of the state's industries, he said that the institution's great product was men a large proportion of whom go into business and industry. For instance, at the present time fifteen hundred men were being taught chemistry, which entered into almost every industry.

In conclusion, he suggested that the association appoint a committee to confer with representatives of the university to consider ways of making the university still more useful to the state.

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis' talk resolved itself into a plea for continuance of a protective tariff and for universal application of the principle of selective immigration.

"We have a lot of people going about saying, 'if we want Europe to pay what she owes us, we must take off the tariff so she can sell to us,'" he said. "I ask them this question: 'What American factory shall we shut down so they can open a factory in Europe?' I have been a protectionist all my life. I know what it means. Wages are three times higher in this country than in other countries."

Speaking of the dignity of labor, he said: "I am interested in training children to understand industrial life. I have strong educational convictions I believe that when a boy and girl get through high school, they ought to be able to earn a living with their hands."

"Immigration," he said, "was one of the government's big problems. When he had accepted President Harding's offer of the portfolio of labor, there had been between five and six million men in America out of work, and two million in Europe waiting to come over. The result was the restrictive immigration act of 1922, on which the present law is based."

Speaking of the policy of holding examinations in Europe instead of at Ellis Island, he said:

"They're rejecting a good many on the other side. I've sat in on examinations there, and I didn't hear one man who was refused a visa complain of the treatment. We're putting into effect a partially selective plan. Why can't we have purely selective immigration?"

Elaborating, he said that instead of having the aliens taken at random, he would have examiners go out into the line of prospective immigrants to find out what kind of men they were. He would have employers report to the labor department the type of men they need, and then would have the required men given preference over others not so urgently required.

As an example, he cited the theoretical case of a New England mill, employing 1,000 operatives, which was about to change over from textiles to some other form of industry. The management needed a specialist who was in Europe to make the change effective. "Why," he asked, "shouldn't that man have preference, and come over to give those thousand men a chance to work?"

"If we can't construe the quota law that way," he said, "let's have a law that will make it possible."

"I'm sure the people of America will never again stand for the open door in immigration," he said. "That's the feeling of the country, as expressed in the national house of representatives."

"I'm for the people to come over to keep the country going," he said. "I'm for the laborers that come here that you can recruit your management from."

Later he added: "I talk freely about the foreign-born, because I'm one of them myself."

Secretary Davis was introduced by Governor Trumbull, who took occasion to point to the development which aviation has made in Connecticut, elaborating on some of the thoughts expressed in Senator Bingham's speech.

All the speakers commented on the excellence of the Bridgeport manufacturers' chorus which furnished entertainment throughout the evening.

AVIATION WAS SUBJECT OF BINGHAM'S ADDRESS

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 19.—At the annual meeting of the Connecticut Manufacturers' association, held in the Hotel Taft here tonight, Senator Hiram Bingham delivered the following address, dealing with aviation:

Early in September President Coolidge appointed an aircraft board to make a study of the best means of

PROCEEDINGS OF THE MACRI MURDER TRIAL

LITCHFIELD, Nov. 18—(A. P.) Carrie Bagnano, widow of John Bagnano, who was shot and killed by Olympio Macri, in the New Haven, [illegible] Thursday, 27, last, fainted as the [illegible] of the coroner here [illegible] with the murder of her husband. [illegible] Macri [illegible] Bagnano [illegible] Connecticut [illegible] Carrie [illegible] Bagnano on a Wooster street [illegible] in New Haven, about two weeks before the fatal shooting. Mrs. Bagnano left the courtroom [illegible] her mother-in-law and the latter's son Rocco had arrived here at noon.

Carrie gave way to her emotions and was heard weeping. Her mother-in-law left the courtroom to attend the young woman, and a moment later Mrs. Mary Todd, 3rd, matron, went in to the side room with smelling salts.

According to those who attended her, the young widow was in such a condition that she was unable to be taken to Torrington where the state's witnesses are being accommodated, being removed instead to the only hotel in Litchfield.

The testimony of Carrie and several other witnesses to the Wooster street bridge incident had been expected to be called by the state today. Only two of these, however, were reached. They were Louis Piercilo and D. James Sotaro, both of New Haven. The latter did not testify at the former trial in New Haven last spring.

Others who testified today were Officer Simon Reising and Miss Anna Morrissey, both of New Haven, and Dr. Marcus L. Backer, of Bridgeport. Reising accompanied the body of Bagnano in an automobile from in front of the Palace theatre where the shooting occurred to the New Haven General hospital. Three others, including two brothers of the dying man, were in the car, he testified.

Dr. Backer and Miss Morrissey, a nurse, attended the wounded man when he reached the hospital. According to Miss Morrissey the man died within eight minutes after he reached the accident room of the institution.

Miss Macri apparently paid little attention to the day's proceedings. She sat beside her counsel, Joseph Koletsky, in her accustomed pose, one hand supporting her head. Most of the time she stared fixedly at the table in front of her.

ADVOCATES STERILIZATION OF MENTAL DEFECTIVES

LANSING, Mich., Nov. 18—A. P.)—Sterilization to weed out mental defectives and certain types of criminals and birth control to prevent the production of so many children that they cannot be cared for properly, were advocated by Dr. Clarence Cook Little, president of the University of Michigan, in an address here tonight.

Speaking before the annual convention of state public health officers and nurses, Dr. Little asserted he would rather suffer purgatory or whatever may be his lot later and go down fighting for what he believes the right thing to do for youth, than to do the "correct" thing, believing it wrong.

"There is a need to slow down the production of children to a point where the child can be guaranteed proper care and education," he said. "To produce to the point where we cannot adequately care for them is un-Christian. I am not suggesting a revolutionary thing. Limitation is now a fact in many families. The need of limitation of the population was admitted by the immigration limit.

"In the slums of some of the big cities the children are worse off than in the so-called barbarous foreign countries. These are dumped out to die or survive, and to meet possible mental and moral depravity. There are worse things than preventing the formation of a child when it cannot be cared for properly after birth."

BILLS IN TRODUCED IN ITALIAN PARLIAMENT

ROME, Nov. 18—(AP)—Bills were introduced in the Chamber of Deputies at the reopening of parliament today, which are of such a sweeping nature that their significance is certain to arouse world-wide comment. They are, as described by Premier Mussolini, "a juridical expression of the precise will of the fascist revolution."

One of the bills makes the Premier responsible to the king only, instead of jointly to king and parliament, as heretofore. Another provides loss of citizenship and possible confiscation of property by any Italian abroad who commits acts considered by the government as injurious to Italian prestige.

The measure relating to the Premier specifies that no question can be included in the Agenda of either senate or chamber without his approval, the king nominates the premier and recalls him. A similar rule applies as regards the appointment of ministers, on the proposal of the Premier. One article provides severe penalties for an act against the life, integrity or liberty of the premier, and [illegible] penalties for words or acts offensive to him.

The measure dealing with Italians abroad declares that any of them who commits any act leading to disturbances in Italy or damaging the prestige of the Italian nation will be subject to loss of citizenship and in grave cases, confiscation of property. Premier Mussolini delivered a stirring address, in which he emphasized the importance of the fascist victory in the settlement of the war debt at Washington.

FIRE DAMAGE ESTIMATE AT $125,000 IN ELLINGTON TOBACCO WAREHOUSE

ELLINGTON, Conn., Nov. 18.—(AP)—One of the biggest fires in the history of Tolland county occurred here tonight when a tobacco warehouse, one of the largest in the state and filled with a large quantity of cased tobacco, was destroyed. The damage is estimated at $125,000, tobacco men from different parts of Connecticut and New York suffering heavy losses.

The warehouse was owned by Max Lavitt and the blaze was discovered by Paul Lavitt, manager and superintendent of the warehouse. Several smaller buildings, each containing quantities of tobacco cut this year, were burned.

The larger building held tobacco one and two years old which had been cased ready for shipment, several growers storing their supply in that building.

[illegible] fire started in the lower room of the big warehouse, but Paul Lavitt said that there had been no fire in the boilers. The Rockville firemen responded to an alarm and helped save the larger buildings, [illegible] of the tobacco here [illegible] with the [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] Connecticut [illegible] Valley Tobacco [illegible] Co., [illegible] and [illegible] Co., [illegible] and E. ANNUAL MEETING OF THE CONN. MANUFACTURERS' AS'N

E. Kent Hubbard Re-elected President—Addresses Made on Important Subjects—Resolutions Were Passed Covering a Wide Range of Subjects—At Banquet Last Evening President Angell of Yale, Senator Bingham and Secretary of Labor Davis Were the Speakers.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 18.—(A. P.)—E. Kent Hubbard was re-elected president of the Connecticut Manufacturers' association, at the annual meeting of the association held here today with representatives from all parts of the state present. Addresses on important subjects were made during the afternoon, committees made their reports, and President Hubbard gave a review of the activities of the year.

A banquet was held this evening at which President James R. Angell, of Yale university, United States Senator Hiram Bingham and Secretary of Labor James W. Davis, were the speakers.

John H. Goss, president of the Scoville Manufacturing company, of Waterbury, presided at the series of half hour talks this afternoon. Professor Fred R. Fairchild, of Yale, spoke on "the present tax situation" and President Hubbard on "co-ordination of transportation agencies." Walter G. Merritt, who had been scheduled to speak on "the anthracite strike," was unable to be present. His place was taken by C. F. Dietz, president of the Bridgeport Brass company, who spoke on "industrial relations." He emphasized the importance of the foreman as a connecting link between management and labor.

Other officers elected were: Vice president, John H. Goss; secretary and treasurer, Robert C. Buell; directors, Don E. Curtis, agent of the American Thread company, of Willimantic; Joseph H. Horne, vice president of the Yale and Towne Manufacturing company, of Stamford; E. F. Farnsworth, president and treasurer of the Eastern Machinery company, of New Haven, and H. H. Pease, president and treasurer of the New Britain Machine company, of New Britain.

During the afternoon programme, F. S. Chase, president of the Chase Companies, of Waterbury, presented President Hubbard an elaborate bible in the name of the directors and former directors of the association.

Resolutions were adopted favoring repeal of the federal gift and estate taxes, a substantial reduction in the surtax on individual incomes, and expressing unqualified opposition to the publicity section of the present income tax law as "un-American, unsound and productive of results which react to the detriment of the individual and the country." Seven other resolutions were also adopted covering [illegible]

Rise in cotton of the administration in its [illegible] debt settlement of the Italian government, and expressing concern over the temporary arrangements with France which defer the question of settlement for a total of twelve years from the conclusion of war and "in danger of further weakening the credit and prestige of that country and as a further menace to the rehabilitation of normal business relations." The resolution urges that the French government be requested to take up the question with this country again.

An unexpected feature of the banquet tonight was the introduction of President Angell who discussed the university's attitude toward the industries of Connecticut.

Connecticut has long been essentially an industrial state, and the university regarded itself as an integral part of the state, he said. As such, it was peculiarly eager to keep itself in intimate contact with the industries of Connecticut.

After mentioning the co-operative relationship which puts the research laboratories of Yale at the disposal of the state's industries, he said that the institution's great product was men, a large proportion of whom go into business and industry. For instance, at the present time fifteen hundred men were being taught chemistry, which entered into almost every industry.

In conclusion, he suggested that the association appoint a committee to confer with representatives of the university to consider ways of making the university still more useful to the state.

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis' talk resolved itself into a plea for continuance of a protective tariff and for universal application of the principle of selective immigration.
